Biographical Sketch

---

Mildred Frick Taylor was born in Lyons, New York. She attended public school and graduated from the Rochester Business Institute. Taylor was a prominent Republican member of the Assembly of the New York State Legislature between the years 1946-1960. As a member of the Assembly, Taylor was the first woman to serve on the Ways and Means Committee. Taylor also sat on the Standing Committee on the Affairs of Villages, and the Joint Committee on Historic Sites.

Taylor was a delegate to several New York State Republican Conventions beginning in 1938 and later attended several National Republican Conventions beginning in 1940. Taylor was also extremely active in local politics in Wayne County, New York and served as the chairman of the Wayne County Republican Committee from 1943-1956. She was the first woman elected a Republican county chairperson in New York State.

Taylor's interests included the preservation of historic sites, the creation of the New York State Thruway, and the designation of the "Rose" as the official flower of the United States. She was an active member of the Republican Party and a member of the National Order of Women Legislators, the D.A.R., the Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and the Order of the Eastern Star.

Taylor died in 1981 at the age of 75. Her husband Paul predeceased her in 1969.

Scope and Contents

This series contains bills that Taylor and other members of the Assembly of the New York State Legislature sponsored. Taylor's most notable bill was the Rose Resolution #106 which she helped introduce to the Assembly in 1954. The bill passed in 1955, making the Rose the national flower of the United States. Taylor, who was the first woman to be named to sit on the Ways and Means Committee in 1953, introduced bills on education law, city tax on gross income, and even a bill that looked at the Trinity Church's corporation power in New York City.

Physical Description: 4.2 cubic ft.

Arrangement

Arranged alphabetically.

Scope and Contents

This series contains information on New York State History. As a member of the Standing Committee on the affairs of villages and the Joint Committee on Historic Sites, Mildred worked to preserve various historical sites in New York State. Sites include the John Jay House, castles on Long Island, and churches. Taylor also worked to preserve the New York State Thruway since she saw it as an essential part of New York State's upcoming history. This series also contains brochures on various museums, as well as meeting minutes from the Joint Legislative Committee, and correspondence with members from various historical societies. This series also features documents that focus on the preservation of the Erie Canal (Barge Canal) and its surrounding areas that are essential to the history of New York State. Other prominent papers include walking tours of New York City and inspections of the value of various historical sites.
