Historical Note

The University at Albany's Department of Geography and Planning first offered undergraduate degrees in 1967 under the name the Department of Geography. An M.A. was introduced in 1970. It became the Department of Geography and Regional Planning in 1985, and was renamed the Department of Geography and Planning in 1988. Over the years, the Department gathered many project plans from the surrounding area as research tools and resources for the faculty and students. In addition, faculty and graduate students created project plans of their own.
