Biographical / Historical

In 1971 New York State decided to begin breaking down the state into educational regions, each overseen by a representative of the State Education Department. The University at Albany responded to this by creating a Task Force to help comply with new changes and oversight brought about by Regionalization. This was also supposed to lead for more cooperation among regional institutions. SUNY
Albany responded to this particular request by upgrading their computer's capabilities to help facilitate communication. The Task Force was supposed to operate until 1976 when regionalization would have been completed, but there is not evidence of their existence after 1972.

Scope and Contents

This collection is made up of material created by a presidential task force created to oversee a statewide mandate to improve computer connections between institutions. The SUNY system wanted to consolidate cooperation of each institution in a given region. Records cover meetings of the Task Force and decisions made that affect the majority of the Capital Region.

Arrangement

Collection was maintained in the original order after it was transferred.
