Administrative History

The Allen Collegiate Center was established in 1972 by the University at Albany, SUNY's Board of Trustees upon recommendation of student-faculty governance bodies. The experimental Center combined the senior year of high school with the freshman year of college so that students could earn a bachelor's degree in three years. The Center was located on the University's downtown campus in Albany, New York.

The Center was an indirect response to criticisms during the late 1960s and early 1970s directed at the higher education system in the United States. Discontents included the system's formality, structure, length, accessibility, and overall practicality after graduation. The Allen Center was directly influenced by experimental colleges New England, especially in Massachusetts, and experimental colleges in Pennsylvania and California. One of the original planners of the Center was its dean, the late Dr. Seth W. Spellman, Jr.

Teaching methodologies included small, seminar-style classes and short-term course modules that emphasized student participation. Allen Center students had full voting privileges and equal representation alongside faculty on the Center's standing committees, and were encouraged to provide their feedback on the Center's day-to-day operations and policies. The Center offered a single, interdisciplinary major, "Man and His Institutions" (MAI), which attempted to connect humanity's social institutions and their influence on contemporary society with classroom learning, extracurricular life, free colloquia, and practical internships. The cohesive implementation of such lofty goals proved challenging for the Center from its planning until its closing. Students who completed the first year of the program had the option to earn their high school diploma from the Milne School, the school connected to the University since 1845 where education students practiced teaching. Allen Center students had several experiential education opportunities and were required to complete an internship within the last two years of study.

The Allen Center closed in 1976 due to the economic austerity measures in the State University system in the 1970s.

Chronology
1967	A select committee chaired by the Vice President of Academic Affairs creates a statement policy "New Patterns in Undergraduate Education" which asks that the University at Albany respond to social change.
1968	The University Senate adopts the policy.
1968	Planning stages begin for an unnamed "experimental college."
1970	The experimental college is tentatively referred to as "Milne College."
1971	The estate of the late James E. Allen Jr., former New York State Commissioner of Education, grants use of his name for the college.

1971	Seth W. Spellman Jr., professor and past chair of the Department of Africana Studies, is named dean of the college.
1972	After preliminary declinations of large-scale grant requests from several institutions, a substantial development grant is received from the Carnegie Foundation.
1972	The college's only major program of study, Man and His Institutions (MAI), is finalized.
1972	53 students, referred to as the Pilot Project, are recommended for admission into the center's first class.
1973	158 new students enroll in the accelerated program.
1975	University President Louis T. Benezet makes the decision to close the center, citing budget constraints and university priorities.
1976	The center closes at the end of the academic year.
