Administrative History

The School of Nursing at the State University of New York at Albany was established in 1967 as a response to the need for nursing education in the Hudson Valley area. Full state registration for a five year period was achieved in May of 1971 and the National League for Nursing fully accredited the program in April of 1972. The University formally discontinued the school in 1979, although the phase-out of the program is documented in administrative records as early as 1976. While there was discussion of a need for a graduate program, the School of Nursing only offered a bachelor's degree.

The bachelor's degree in nursing program at the University began during the 1967-1968 academic year with a total of 14 students. Dr. Dorothy M. Major served as the school's first dean. By the 1975-1976 academic year, enrollment rose to 284 students. The largest specialty group on the faculty was in medical/surgical instruction followed by maternal/child health.

In September of 1972, Judith Whitaker developed the Continuing Education component of the School of Nursing. Beginning with the first workshop in March 1973, the Continuing Education program helped practicing nurses remain abreast of new knowledge in the medical field. By 1974, the program held at least 10 different workshops each year attended by practicing nurses from throughout the country. It generated an enviable reputation of quality for a relatively new school of nursing. In 1979, the School of Nursing transferred this program to Russell Sage College.

An ongoing New York State budget crisis eventually forced the School of Nursing to close in 1979. The school experienced the imposition of financial constraints as early as 1976-1977. At the time, a presidential task force on priorities and resources at the State University of New York at Albany proposed a phase-out of its School of Nursing which was completed three years later.

Scope and Contents

The records of the School of the Nursing begin in 1964 with discussions and statistical analysis about the need for additional nursing programs in the area, at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and end with the phase-out of the program in 1979. The records document the complete history of the School of Nursing at the State University of New York at Albany as a degree granting program, from its first students in 1967 through 1979.

Scope and Contents

This series contains course materials from the School of Nursing. Files include course descriptions and objectives, blank tests and exams, handouts, and syllabi. Faculty and administrators created all the materials. Please note that sometimes the school retained course materials for different academic years in the same file. Other times, materials were separated by year. The archivist retained both types of original order. In addition, see Series 2 for files on R.N. Challenge Exams and transitional courses.

Arrangement

Arranged alphabetically.

Scope and Contents

This series consists of administrative materials, the majority created by the office of the Dean of the School of Nursing. This includes various committee meeting agendas and minutes, faculty meeting minutes, and files about the phase-out of the School of Nursing in the late 1970s. There are also twenty files documenting relationships with local area clinical agencies through which nursing students obtained field experience. In addition, the file "Hudson Valley League for Nursing" contains papers on this ad hoc committee's 1964-1965 investigation and formal study on the need for additional baccalaureate and/or master's nursing education programs in the geographic area. The study recommended the establishment of both a baccalaureate and a master's program in nursing at the State University of New York at Albany. The file "Program Development Materials" includes course descriptions.
