SPECIAL TO THE
STATE UNIVERSITY
NEWSLETTER

November 18, The Reading Department of State University of New York at Albany, in cooperation with Capital Area School Development Association (CASD) ran an "Administrators' Reading Institute" for 143 elementary and secondary principals and reading consultants. Dr. Edward Sipay discussed some eight or nine methods of teaching beginning reading.

Earle Flatt pointed out that remedial reading called for competently trained reading teachers in our schools. Close cooperation between these reading teachers and the University will permit assistance in diagnosis and determination of clinical procedures.

Dr. J. Roy Newton drew a blueprint of both developmental and corrective reading programs and pointed out how the University and the Reading Department were prepared to assist parochial, private, and public schools.

Miss Ann Lamkins, Reading Supervisor from the State Department of Education, explained the operation of applying for ESEA grants under Title I and Title III.

The University Orchestra will present a concert Friday evening, December 10, in Page Hall at State University of New York at Albany. Soloists will be Leo Mahigian, violinist and assistant concertmaster of the Albany Symphony Orchestra; Joel Chadabe, pianist and member of the University's music faculty; and Eleanor Diener and Carol Sandel, flutists and undergraduates at the University. William L. Hudson will conduct.

Included in the program will be "Brandenburg Concerto No. 4" by Bach, "Concerto Grosso No. 1" by Ernest Bloch, and the "Nocturne for Strings" by Borodin. Also featured on the program will be the University Brass Ensemble, playing works of Gabrieli and Copland.

The Bach compositions will be heard during the first portion of the program. Arranged by Leopold Stokowski, the chorale, "Sheep May Safely Graze," is one of Bach's most popular works. Mr. Mahigian and the Misses Diener and Sandel will make up the concertino, or solo, group in the Bach concerto, one of the most distinguished examples of Baroque concerto grosso style.

Following intermission the Brass Ensemble will be heard in Gabrieli's "Cantata Septimi Toni No. 2," a dramatic work using choirs of instruments for exceptional effects. Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," featuring the Brass and Percussion Ensemble, will follow. Concluding the program will be the first movement of Bloch's "Concerto Grosso in D Minor," with the piano obligato part to be played by Mr. Chadabe.

The concert, open to the public at no charge, will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

The holiday season at State University of New York at Albany will open Sunday evening (December 12) with the fourteenth annual "Holiday Sing" at Page Hall, starting at 7 o'clock. Sponsored by the special events board of the student body, the affair is a favorite event of the students.

The competitive program will feature 22 groups representing all segments of the student body. Participating will be most Greek organizations; residence hall units, the Colonials, an independent group; and the Commuters. Each group will sing one song, after which the five selected finalists will sing a second song. To the winning group will be presented the traditional three-foot victory trophy. This year, for the first time, groups placing second and third also will receive trophies. Winners will be determined on a point system with various vocal techniques being considered. Judges will be Miss Virginia Wallace, director of music at the Albany Public Schools; Paul Hunt, vocal director at Albany High School; and Dr. Ruth Schmidt, professor of modern languages at SUNYA.

An added attraction during the program will be interpretive dances by several members of the Modern Dance Club, under the direction of Miss Rachael Tones.

Decorating the stage will be a hedge of poinsettias. The university radio station, WSUA, will broadcast the program while it's underway.

Miss Carol Rosenthal and Frank Petrone, co-chairman of the evening's events, have announced that a cocoa hour will be held in Brubacher lower lounge at the conclusion of the competition. At that time the winning organizations will repeat presentations of their selections.

John M. Reilly, assistant professor of English at State University of New York at Albany, has been awarded a Danforth Teacher Grant for the academic year 1966-67 which will provide him the opportunity to work fulltime on his doctoral dissertation. He is one of 50 faculty members from colleges and universities across the country to be so honored, according to an announcement made by W. Max Wise, associate director of the Danforth Foundation located in St. Louis, Mo. The men and women were chosen from 435 nominations provided by deans of accredited senior colleges and universities in the U. S.

Mr. Reilly who is a doctoral candidate at Washington University in St. Louis, will write about Richard Wright, modern novelist, with particular attention to Wright's social psychology. In the spring Harper & Row will publish paperback editions of two of Wright's books, Native Son and Black Boy, with afterwords by Mr. Reilly.

The English professor, who joined the SUNYA faculty in 1963, completed his undergraduate study at West Virginia University in 1954. The following year he received his M. A. from Washington University where he was a Woodrow Wilson Fellow. The Danforth grant will be for at least $6,000, the exact amount to be determined by expenses of the recipient and his family.

Dr. Evan Mander-Jones, Director of Education for South Australia, with offices in Adelaide, will be in Albany next Tuesday and Wednesday (December 14, 15) when he visits the State University of New York at Albany. Dr. Randolph S. Gardner, Dean of the School of Education at the University, said that Dr. Jones, who arrived in this country on November 24, is on a tour of selected educational institutions in the United States.

Dr. Jones has been Director of Education for the State of South Australia since 1946. He has described himself as being "particularly anxious" to study the system of college education as developed in the United States, as well as the latest developments in new methods of teaching and of teaching aids of all kinds, including the use of television, language laboratories and programmed instruction machines. Dr. Jones has been having discussions with leading men and women in several educational fields in addition to his visits to universities, teachers colleges, and secondary schools.

In 1958 the Australian educator was a representative at the 21st Joint UNESCO and I. B. E. Conference. He received his formal education at the University of Sydney, Australia, and at Oxford University in England.

During his visit to SUNYA Dr. Jones will stay at the Albany International Center.

In an effort to bring about effective and economical deployment of the resources of the West Indies university on a Caribbean-wide basis, the professors are conducting an organizational study of the university. The institution serves most of the islands in the Caribbean area as well as parts of South and Central America.

Dr. Edinger and Dr. Cali, whose work also includes a study of degree and certification programs and of extra-mural activities of the university, have been asked to extend their visit to allow for studies of university centers at Barbados and Trinidad.

A preliminary study for the West Indies university was made by Dr. Donald T. Donley, director of the Center for Research and Field Studies at SUNYA, who spent several months in the West Indies following a request for advisement made to the U. S. State Department.

Paul W. Schrodt, a senior at The Milne School, has been cited as one of the outstanding students of high school English in the country. The National Council of Teachers of English has named him a 1965 runner-up in its annual Achievement Awards competition.

The Albany student, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Schrodt, 29 Lawnridge avenue, was nominated last spring by a committee of English teachers from Milne to represent the school in competition. The nation's schools nominated almost 8,500 students for the NCTE citation and of that number, 837 were chosen.

In announcing the winners, James R. Squire, executive secretary of the National Council of Teachers of English, stated that the Council recommends the students for college scholarships in 1966.

Candidates in the competition took two national standardized tests in literature and composition. In addition they submitted examples of assigned writings in English Courses as well as autobiographies. Also considered in the judging was an impromptu composition on an assigned topic.

Under the sponsorship of the New York State Council on Economic Education and the Center for Economic Education at State University of New York at Albany, Sanford D. Gordon, professor of economics and coordinator of economic studies at State University College at Oneonta, is conducting a program in support of the teaching of economics in high schools. Aim of the joint project is to assist high schools in the preparation of an economics course as a twelfth grade elective.

Professor Gordon, who received a grant from the Albany University center to assist him in his work, has been conducting seminars in economic education for social studies teachers at the Oneonta college. Discussion centers around content, teaching methods, community resources and visual aids. Special assistance includes materials, guidance in the preparation of course study, and unit outlines. In many secondary schools throughout the state there is no social studies course required at the twelfth grade level. Suggested social studies for the senior year now include courses from the disciplines of economics and government.

In a four-county area surrounding Oneonta, twelve schools are in the program set up by Professor Gordon. They are New Berlin Central School, New Berlin; Oxford Academy and Central High School, Oxford; Delaware Academy and Central School, Delhi; Sidney Central School, Sidney; Fleischmanns High School, Fleischmanns; Franklin Central School, Franklin; Andrew S. Draper Central School, Schenevus; Edmeston Central School, Edmeston; Bainbridge-Guilford Central School, Bainbridge; Andes Central School, Andes; South New Berlin Central School, South New Berlin; and Greene Central School, Greene.

Control Data Corporation of Minneapolis has been selected to supply the initial computing system to be used by State University of New York at Albany. Professor E. D. Reilly, Jr., director of the university's computing center, said that the computer, a CDC 3100, would be installed at the former Air Force Reserve Center at North Main and Washington avenues.

Commenting on the selection of the 3100, Professor Reilly said, "We were extremely fortunate in being able to obtain a favorable delivery date for such powerful equipment on a short time schedule. Factors considered in its selection included its versatility in being able to meet university requirements in three particular areas; curricular support, faculty and graduate research, and administrative data processing. The CDC 3100 is capable of executing more than 200,000 arithmetic or logical instructions per second."

During the spring semester the computer will be used in support of the newly-developed course, "Introduction to Computer Science", for which 120 students have enrolled. Typical of the research applications for which the 3100 will provide computational support are studies in stellar evolution, deduction of molecular structures through reduction of crystallographic data, scattering of nuclear particles and electromagnetic radiation, statistical analysis of the growth of various species of trees, and a syntactic analysis of a certain dialect of Middle English dating from the 12th century. Business applications to be processed on the computer encompass admission and registration procedures, student billing, inventory control, library

Forty-one courses will be offered during the spring semester at State University of New York at Albany by the Program of General Studies. Classes are held during the late afternoons and evenings and on Saturday mornings.

During the current semester, the most popular courses have been those in American History, sociology, German, Italian, world art, and philosophy. Among similar courses for the coming semester, for which there are no prerequisite courses, are introduction to philosophy, fundamentals of speech, introduction to economics, American political and social history (second half), and introduction to sociology.

Formal registration for courses for new students will take place at the university February 5, 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., and on February 7, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Persons wishing to register for courses under the program who have not matriculated through the Office of the Director of Admissions or through the Office of Graduate Studies are required to participate in an advisement interview with a member of the staff of the Program in General Studies prior to registration. After January 28 no interviews will be held nor will new applications be accepted. The General Studies office will be closed December 23 - January 3.

Acting as administrator of the new program is Irving Verschoor, who also heads the School of Library Science. He is assisted by Mrs. Jean Boggs, admissions counselor.

Under the program offerings of the university are made available to those not seeking academic credit and to those non-matriculated students who may wish to earn academic credit in anticipation of matriculation. Registration is limited to persons 21 years of age and over.

Thirty-one faculty members of State University of New York at Albany have been awarded research fellowships or grants-in-aid totaling $33, 170.

Dr. Samuel B. Gould, President of State University of New York, announced the awards after receiving recommendations of the University Awards Committee.

Twenty fellowships of $1, 300 each and 14 grants-in-aid for amounts ranging from $100 to $1, 300 were awarded to faculty members on the Albany campus.

President Gould said the fellowship and grants-in-aid programs were greatly expanded this year with $420, 000 allocated to support this type of research on the various campuses of the University, an increase of $166, 000 over last year. He noted that $50, 000 of the amount will be reserved until the Awards Committee meets again in the spring to consider only grants-in-aid applications. Faculty members throughout the State University receiving awards totaled 347.

Dr. Evan R. Collins, president of State University at Albany, in commenting on the awards granted to faculty members, said, "I share with these distinguished members of our faculty their pleasure in receiving assistance for their scholarly research, and congratulate them upon the recognition of the originality and worth of their individual projects."

TUESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1966

Two telecourses, one in astronomy and the other in Latin American history, will be presented during the spring semester by The State University of New York in association with WMHT-TV, Schenectady, Channel 17, and WNED-TV, Buffalo, Channel 17. Both are University of the Air college-level courses offering three and two hours credit, respectively, to everyone enrolled for credit who completes the courses successfully. In addition, provision has been made for non-credit students.

"Eye on the Universe" will be taught by Dr. Harry Edward Crull, planetarium director and professor of astronomy at State University of New York at Albany. The course, dealing with the nature of the celestial universe in 47 half-hour television sessions, will be telecast on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays by WMHT-TV beginning on Wednesday, Feb. 9 (1966) and ending May 27 (1966). Each day's lesson will be aired three times -- once in the morning and repeated in the afternoon and in the evening. Program times are 8 a. m., 4:30 p. m., and 7 p. m.

Dr. Crull joined the SUNYA faculty in September, 1965. Formerly he was head of the mathematics and astronomy department at Butler University and director of Butler's observatory and planetarium. Dr. Curtis Hemenway, chairman of SUNYA's department of astronomy and space science and director of Dudley Observatory, which serves as a laboratory for the university's work in astronomy and space science, will give four lectures on space science during the telecourse.

Five fraternities at State University of New York at Albany are conducting a drive in support of the Ernie Davis Leukemia Fund, administered by the American Cancer Society. Highpoint of the project will take place at the SUNYA-Siena basketball game Saturday night (December 4) at the Washington Armory where a collection is planned at halftime.

Stuart Herzog, of the University's Edward E. Potter Club, is heading the Inter-Fraternity Council committee organizing the drive on campus. He stated that many colleges and universities throughout the nation are participating in the fund, established in memory of the great Syracuse All-American football star, whose home was in Elmira. The fund was begun at Brockport State College of New York last year and soon gained the support of students at more than seventy institutions.

Robert Gable, of SUNYA's Alpha Pi Alpha, will speak at the basketball game in behalf of the fund, after which three members from each participating fraternity will solicit spectators. Other fraternities assisting are Kappa Beta, Theta Xi Omega, and Sigma Lambda Sigma. Alexander Cutonilli, SUNYA graduate student and student personnel intern, is advisor to the committee.
