Two major changes in key posts at State University of New York at Albany will take place at the end of the current semester, President Louis T. Benezet has announced. Milton C. Olson, vice president for management and planning since 1966, and Charles T. O'Reilly, acting vice president for academic affairs during the past year and a half, will be leaving the top administrative echelon.

Dr. O'Reilly has requested return to his permanent position as dean of the School of Social Welfare and Dr. Olson has accepted appointment in the School of Education as professor of business education, a position held in former years. He will replace Herbert A. Tonne who has resigned. Prior to his post as vice president, Dr. Olson was dean of the School of Business.

In his letter requesting that he be able to return to the School of Social Welfare, Dr. O'Reilly wrote, "My colleagues in Social Welfare were very patient when I had to ask them to extend my leave until the summer of 1970, and they understood your request that I stay on for the first semester of 1970-71. I hope, however, that I can be allowed to return to my job as dean by the start of the second semester. The past year has been a rewarding one because I have received generous cooperation from faculty and administrators. . . . I have enjoyed my association with you and I am looking forward to continuing it when I return to the School."

Dr. Olson, in his letter, said in part, "After serving since September 1966 as Vice President for Management and Planning, I request that my appointment to this position be terminated at the end of this semester so that I might accept a position as Professor of Business Education in the School of Education. This position becomes available at the beginning of the spring semester so I hope I can be released from my present duties at that time. I shall continue to do whatever I can to make this University a great institution and will continue to cooperate with you in achieving this goal."

Two ad hoc advisory search committees will be formed to review candidates for the positions. President Benezet has the ultimate responsibility to nominate to the University Council and the SUNY Central Administration new vice presidents for each post. Central Council of the Student Association, the Graduate Student Association, the Executive Committee of the Senate, deans, and other administrative officers will help form the two committees.

In a memorandum sent to student, faculty, and administrative leadership, the president said, "...I look forward to the opportunity to express fitting appreciation to Dr. Olson and Dr. O'Reilly for their leadership in our university community. We count on them for continuing leadership while seeking their successors."

Three members of the department of theater at State University of New York at Albany will be in Venice, Italy, later this month to attend an international conference on theater for children and youth. They are Paul B. Pettit, department chairman; Jarka M. Burian, professor of theater; and Patricia B. Snyder, director of Children's Theatre at the university.

While at the conference, the three faculty members will make arrangements for the 1972 conference to be held on the Albany campus. They will be in Venice October 17 through the following week.

Dr. Pettit and Mrs. Snyder have been invited by the Hungarian government to travel to Budapest to attend the theater festival there. Additionally, they have accepted an invitation to visit the theatre institutions in Hungary as guests of the government.

Three days after her return to the United States, on November 5, Mrs. Snyder will deliver the keynote address at a statewide conference on creative drama for the classroom teacher at Rhode Island College in Providence. Sponsors are the Rhode Island State Department of Education, Region Fifteen of the National Children's Theatre Conference, and the college.

The School of Library Science of State University of New York at Albany has received 20 trainee grants for 1970-71 to initiate a three-year undergraduate and graduate program leading eventually to the bachelor's degree in a choice of field and to the master's degree in library science. The grants are made possible through funds from the U.S. Office of Education, as authorized by Title II-B of the Higher Education Act of 1965. Arthur R. Kirwin, Jr., formerly of Schenectady Community College Library, has been appointed coordinator of the program. Miss Pamela A. Carrington, a recent graduate of the School of Library Science, has been named assistant coordinator.

The Librarianship Trainee Program has recruited 20 students -- seven men, 13 women -- for the program, all of whom are now registered at SUNYA. They represent a wide variety of backgrounds, some having graduated from community colleges and others having completed two years in a four-year institution. Of the 20 students, 16 are from New York State, while the remaining four are from the south and southwest. Their undergraduate majors are diverse and range from the social sciences and humanities through the natural sciences and applied sciences. Library science is a required second field for the trainees.

In the summer following the junior year, there will be a six-week library intern experience. Through the junior and senior years at SUNYA, the 20 trainees will be involved in the affairs, social and academic, of the School of Library Science. A program of field trips and speakers is being planned for the 1970-71 school year.

The grantees were chosen for the program on the basis of the following criteria: meeting the minimum academic qualifications for transfer to the State University of New York at Albany, commitment to three years of education leading to the bachelor's degree and to the master's in library science, commitment to eventual entrance to the library and information science profession, and economic inability to finance this further education through family or personal resources.

The State University Theatre, in cooperation with the university's Theatre Council, will present the first major production of the 1970-71 season on October 14-18, on the main stage of the Performing Arts Center. Joseph Balfior is directing Camino Real by Tennessee Williams for the season's opening play.

Williams described Camino Real as "the construction of another world, a separate existence. . . .the appeal of this work is its unusual degree of freedom." The highly assorted characters move through their insular lives during the short time span of the play, toward their various destinations. Each person is a unique individual yet at the same time is symbolic of certain human characteristics. The play is divided into a prologue and sixteen "blocks" or scenes which have essentially no time lapse between them. An intricate multilevel set is being constructed for Mr. Balfior's cast of 35 performers.

Curtain time is 7:30 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday, with a 2:30 p.m. matinee on Sunday. Tickets are $1 with student tax, $2 without.

Scenic designs for the play are by Robert J. Donnelly. Costume designs are by Micki Koob, lighting designs by Jerome Hanley, and choreography by Adrienne S. Posner. The composer and musical director is Ronald Abel.

An added attraction in the Performing Arts Center the week of Camino Real will be the annual art show of the Albany Artists Group, Inc. in the second floor lounge.

English guitarist and lutenist, Julian Bream, will perform in concert at State University of New York at Albany, Performing Arts Center at 8:30 Monday evening, October 19. His appearance is sponsored by the SUNYA Music Council and will be in the main theatre.

Mr. Bream has been described as one of the most distinctive and sought-after artists of our time. His special contribution has been to extend the range of musical interest backward through discovered music for the lute and forward through recent music for the guitar. The New York Times has written, "Mr. Bream scarcely needs more praise at this point for he has won all the encomiums in the book and still deserves them."

The 37-year old native of London gained an early interest in music from his father. He attended the Royal College of Music and became intrigued by the music of the Elizabethan lute. He later formed an Elizabethan Consort to present the music of that period.

Bream's annual tours of American have been well received and he has performed several times in Carnegie Hall. In 1965, he inaugurated his international summer school for guitarists in Wiltshire, England. Students from throughout the world have attended.

Admission is $.50 for students, $2 for faculty and staff, and $3 for the general public. Tickets will go on sale at 7:30 the night of the performance at the box office.

The search is underway for a vice president for academic affairs and for a vice president for management and planning at State University of New York at Albany. Two advisory search committees have been appointed by President Louis T. Benezet.

Webb S. Fiser will head the committee to find a permanent vice president for academic affairs. He was elected chairman at an organizational meeting held with President Benezet. Dean Edgar W. Flinton, Office of Graduate Studies, was appointed secretary.

Others on the newly-formed committee, named by President Benezet, are Mrs. Kenneth S. MacAffer, University Council; Michael Gilbertson, Central Council; David Neufeld, Student Association, Central Council; William White, graduate student, educational administration; Mrs. Violet H. Larney, mathematics; M. Moran Weston, Afro-American studies; Dean Neil C. Brown, Jr., student life; Jonathan R. Ashton, acting director, University Library; and Dwight C. Smith, Jr., director, institutional research.

Dr. Fiser, who heads the search committee, is a former SUNYA vice president for academic affairs. He returned to teaching and research in 1968.

Dean W. Warren Haynes, School of Business, has been elected chairman of the advisory search committee for a vice president for management and planning. Seth W. Spellman, assistant to the president, is serving as secretary.

Others appointed to the committee are Mrs. Helen G. Horowitz, economics; Walter L. Balk, public administration; Charles Edwards, biological sciences;

Donald A. Whitlock, financial aids; Stephen Hulbert, graduate student; Harry O. Lee, University Council; Douglas Goldschmidt and Anita Thayer, Central Council.

Dean Haynes joined the faculty in July 1969. He formerly was chairman of the International Teachers Program at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

The committees are expected to move rapidly in their search for suitable candidates to recommend to President Benezet in order that appointments may be made and the positions filled by the beginning of the second semester.

Nominations are sought from members of the university community and from other interested persons. Faculty, students, and others are asked to send the names of persons they wish to suggest for consideration, along with other identifying and biographical information, to the secretaries of the committees.

Charles T. O'Reilly, acting vice president for academic affairs, will return to his post as dean of the university's School of Social Welfare next year and Milton C. Olson, vice president for management and planning, has accepted appointment as professor of business education in the School of Education.

William Short, assistant professor of education and supervisor of Spanish in The Milne School, State University of New York at Albany, is the author of a monograph describing recent excavations and anthropological research on the prehistoric "Folsom Culture of North America." The work has been published by the Guadalupe Press, Merida, Yucatan, Mexico, under the Spanish title, "El Hombre Folsom".

Prehistoric man in the southwestern United States has been a special interest of Dr. Short beginning with his undergraduate study at the University of Texas and continuing through his master's degree work at Trinity University and his doctorate in philosophy from the department of American anthropology in the University of Madrid in Spain.

Professor Short's writing and lecturing on the subject have earned him listings in the "Dictionary of International Biography" published in London, in "Who's Who (South and Southwest)", and "Personalities in the South".

The reference section of the Spanish National Museum of Ethnology in Madrid plans to catalog copies of several professional publications of Dr. Short, according to information received recently from the curator of the museum. A specialist in Navajo education and Southwest ethnology, Dr. Short was invited to write for the Madrid-published magazine, "Revista Espanola de Antropologia Americana", when his oral examination and dissertation defense at the University of Madrid were rated sobresaliente, the highest of three possible marks.

For the past two years Dr. Short has been a demonstration teacher and supervisor of student teachers of Spanish in the teacher education program of SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, New York 12203

The child drama program within the department of theater at State University of New York at Albany has received a grant from the Albany County Youth Bureau in support of the Saturday morning workshops for children conducted each semester in the university's Performing Arts Center.

During the 1970 summer session the Youth Bureau underwrote a portion of the special child drama program, "Youth Theatre Workshop", offered to the Albany community with particular emphasis on the culturally-deprived children from the inner city of Albany.

The child drama activity at SUNYA has been underway for the past two years. The newly-announced grant is the first to have been received by the/^{program}from from municipal funds.

UNDEFEATED DANES TAKE TO THE ROAD

The State University at Albany first-year football club, winner in its first two games at home, will be on the road the next three weekends, beginning with a visit to Towson State, Baltimore, Saturday (October 24). The Great Danes then play at Marist and Plattsburgh, before returning home for the season finale against Hudson Valley Community College, November 14.

Head coach Bob Ford pronounced himself "extremely happy to be 2-0," after Albany's 25-24 upset over arch-rival Siena College last week. "At the first day of practice in September, I didn't think we'd win a game all year," the former St. Lawrence University grid boss admitted. "We're still making too many mistakes and our offense is sporadic, but we've come a long way and I'm very pleased."

Ford says Towson will be the best team Albany has faced. The Tigers, in their second year of football, play a varsity schedule and are 3-2 following a 14-10 victory over Jersey City State last Saturday. They opened with wins over Gallaudet (29-0) and Washington and Lee (34-14), then dropped decisions to Randolph-Macon (36-19) and Frostburg State (10-8).

The Towson offense has sputtered the last two and a half games and coach Carl Runk may make some changes. A pair of sophomore running backs, Dave Franklin and Bob Young, could step in for

-----More-----

Dennis Champney and Randy Canal, both of whom are slightly injured. Champney gained 738 yards rushing last year, while Canal has been the Tigers' leading runner this fall. Quarterback Al Dodds passed for more than 1500 yards a year ago, but has had trouble this fall. His favorite receiver is Bob Remeto. The Tigers lack depth, but have a strong defense that has allowed more than 14 points just once this season.

Albany will pin its hopes on the running of tailback Bernie Boggs (Ballston Lake) and a good defense against the rush. Boggs gained 159 yards against Siena, increasing his two-game total to 307, an average of 7.1 per carry. The agile 5-8, 190-pounder scored his fourth touchdown of the season, kicked a field goal and two PAT's to bring his point total to 35.

Against Siena, the Danes overcame an 8-7 halftime deficit with 18 third-quarter points and took a 25-8 lead into the final period. Siena rallied for two TD's, the final one with 23 seconds remaining, to cut the final margin to a point. Ford praised the offensive line for continued improvement and the defensive secondary for "coming of age" with four interceptions.

In addition to Boggs, offensive standouts were flanker Ernie Thomas (Rochester), who won a starting job as a sub the week before; split end Ed Williams (Albany), who scored on a long pass play (40 yards) for the second straight week; and tackles Bernie Pooler (Watertown) and Rich Wesley (Hemlock).

Royce VanEvera (Wallkill) intercepted his third pass of the young season from his defensive halfback position. Aerial thefts also were turned in by halfback John Johnson (Albany), safety Roy Farnsworth (Shortsville), and linebacker Nick Conte (New Hartford).

Defensive tackle Steve Finn(Albany) and linebacker Jack Otto (Lockport) also stood out on defense.

"Tuning in On the Needs and Interests of the 'Now' Generation" was the theme of the recent foreign language teachers conference attended by five State University of New York at Albany faculty at the Concord Hotel, Kiamesha Lake.

Problems of beginning teachers were discussed by a panel conducted by Mrs. Susan Losee, chairman of the Milne modern language department. Panelists included Mrs. Patricia Paulsen, a first-year teacher from SUNYA who did her student-teaching in Milne last year; Mrs. Charlotte Shields and Fred Miller, beginning teachers in the New York City system; and Dr. Louise Rypko Schaub, of Brooklyn College.

Other Albany faculty participating in the conference sponsored by the New York State Federation of Foreign Language Teachers included three Milne School supervisors: Miss Maryann Ferrari, Miss Geraldine O'Connor, and Richard Smith, as well as Mrs. Gina Moore, off-campus supervisor of Spanish.

Observation of New York's legal system in action was provided to 55 students of The Milne School, State University of New York at Albany, and their teachers recently by John S. Bartlett, Jr., Albany County Clerk. The students are enrolled in an experimental course, "Law in Society," designed to familiarize citizens with law phases encountered in everyday life.

Explanations by Mr. Bartlett of the organization of the New York court system and the functions of each court were followed by attendance at trials in the County Court during the morning and at the Court of Appeals in the afternoon. In spite of the technical nature of the cases, the students were able to follow the discussions of the lawyers and seven judges in the Court of Appeals on areas of criminal law which they are studying in class.

Students of the SUNYA laboratory school were accompanied by Gustave Mueller, associate professor of education, and their student-teachers, Miss Judy Bergmann, Miss Margaret Capell, and Miss Vivian Moy. Criminal Law, domestic relations law, contract law, and laws pertaining to the draft are among the topics covered in "Law in Society." New York Bar Association members, and local clergy, have attended the classes to assist the students in understanding and evaluating the legal system under which they live.

James C. Mancuso, associate professor of psychology at State University of New York at Albany, has edited, with commentary, "Readings for A Cognitive Theory of Personality", published recently by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, New York.

The 576-page book covers 34 articles. One reviewer has written, "The selections in this collection of readings thoroughly explicate a theory of behavior. The theory, centering on cognitive aspects of individual functioning, represents an approach to personality study which is empirical, person-centered, and, at the same time, humanistic."

Dr. Mancuso, who joined the SUNYA faculty in 1961, last spring was on sabbatical in residence at the University of California at Santa Cruz where he continued work on another book on abnormal psychology which applies the cognitive theory, subject of his new book, to the interpretation of abnormal behavior. During the summer he was in Mexico on a research fellowship from The Research Foundation of State University of New York to continue studies on public attitudes toward mental illness.

Professor Mancuso, an alumnus of Dickinson College, earned his doctorate in philosophy at the University of Rochester.

Representatives from the Peace Corps will be at State University of New York at Albany for a three-day visit beginning Monday, Nov. 2. Information will be available in the Campus Center lobby from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. during that time. Personal interviews will be held in CC 375.

A film concerning Peace Corps volunteers in Colombia will be shown Tuesday evening in Lecture Center 1 at 7:30. Afterwards a panel, consisting of two Peace Corps volunteers and two international students from Colombia, will discuss the film and other related topics. A question and answer period will follow.

Since the inception of the Peace Corps ten years ago, 57 volunteers from SUNYA have completed service overseas. In addition, there are 25 recent graduates of this university now helping the people of 60 nations where Peace Corps programs are underway.

A Peace Corps representative stated that, despite rumblings to the contrary, significant national gains in volunteer enrollment have been posted in such academic skill categories as business degrees, up 75%; civil engineers, 23%; home economics, 6%; mechanical engineers, 19%; other engineering degrees, 10%; agricultural degrees, 47%; and industrial arts, up 59%. Overseas programs for liberal arts majors continue to fill on schedule.

State University of New York at Albany has been elected to membership in the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research, bringing the total number of UCAR member universities to 31. Other new members are Harvard University, the University of Illinois, and the University of Toronto.

UCAR was created in 1959 by 14 universities for the primary purpose of establishing a research center to conduct long-term scientific programs directed toward important and fundamental questions about the atmosphere, with the ultimate goal of helping to solve human problems related to weather, water, and climate. Earl G. Droessler, vice president for research at SUNYA, is a member of the corporation's board of trustees.

The National Center for Atmospheric Research, under the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation, is operated by UCAR. The corporation's definition of atmospheric research is broad, including the atmospheres of the other planets and the sun as well as the earth's atmosphere.

Membership in UCAR is open to any U. S. university which offers graduate work in the atmospheric sciences or a closely related field, and which can present evidence of continuing scholarly productivity from its program.

Two one-man exhibitions are scheduled to be shown at the Art Gallery at State University of New York at Albany from Nov. 17 through Dec. 20.

Large shaped canvases by the Japanese artist, Shozo Nagano, will be shown on the Gallery's second floor. Mr. Nagano was born in Kanazama, Japan, and now lives in New York City. He utilizes large flat color areas and actual shaping of the canvas to create changing optical effects and a sense of indeterminate space.

The block prints of Margery Koster will be shown on the main floor of the Gallery. Mrs. Koster, who lives in Grand Rapid, Mich., superimposes type and a myriad of found objects on her printing blocks. Like most contemporary printmakers, she experiments freely with her medium but retains the unique qualities traditionally possessed by block prints -- the strongly drawn image and a richness and intensity of color.

"Paintings by Shozo Nagano" and "Prints by Margery Koster" will open with a reception for the artists on Tuesday evening, Nov. 17 from 7:30 to 10. The reception and exhibition are open to the public.

Significant action taken Wednesday at the four-hour-long annual meeting of the Faculty Student Association of State University of New York at Albany included a change in by-laws which calls for a new makeup of the board of directors, and the addition of a second meeting of the full membership board of 25 in the spring semester to review fiscal affairs.

The membership also approved plans for a meeting of the new board early in November to review the 1970-71 budget and to make recommendations to the fall membership board before the end of the fall semester. A third proposal calling for different representation on the full membership board was withdrawn by its student sponsors. All action was virtually unanimous.

Membership on the new board is all ex-officio being comprised of the president; vice president for management and planning; vice president for student affairs; chairman of the Senate's personnel policies council; president, Central Council; president, Graduate Student Association; vice chairman of the Senate; vice chairman elect of the Senate; and vice president of Central Council. Provision is thereby made for equal representation of students, faculty, and administration.

The financial report showed a net excess of income over expense of $29,872. Total net income was $268,593 with food service representing $221,097. Net losses equaled $148,682 of which the bookstore represented the largest loss of $70,119. Support for university activities and the Mohawk and Goodman properties totaled $90,039.

In President Benezet's remarks opening the meeting he said that the board owed a stable business organization to the institution, its membership and to the state with whom it contracts. Observing that FSA exists to give good service to the university community, the president indicated the association should be responsive to the broad spectrum it serves and that adjustments proposed for the board of directors were in line with the spirit of openness in decision-making which affects the constituents of the campus.

A graduate program for study on Mindanao, an island in the Southern Philippines, has been established by the State University of New York at Albany in a cooperative effort with the Ford Foundation. Next June will mark the start of the 10-month program.

The program will provide annually for 10 to 30 SUNY candidates for doctor's or master's degrees, with an opportunity to advance their work through research or teaching at one of the six colleges on Mindanao, while offering assistance to those colleges as graduate fellows in teaching or in research.

Students from SUNY will continue as students of their SUNY units and at the same time enjoy the status of graduate students at the Mindanao colleges. Their academic work in Mindanao will be credited toward their degree at the SUNY unit on appropriate certification by the Mindanao college and subject to such further requirements as may be established by the student's home department.

Mindanao colleges participating in the program are: Ateneo de Davao, Davao City; Mindanao State University, Marawi City; Notre Dame of Jolo College, Jolo; Notre Dame of Marbel College, Cotabato City; Notre Dame of Marbel College, Korondal; and Xavier University, Cagayan de Oro City.

A professor from SUNY will be resident at one of the six Mindanao colleges as field director and serve as a general academic advisor to the SUNY students.

Assignment of a student to a college will be made by SUNY at Albany on the basis of a student's particular interests and the special strengths of the colleges. SUNYA will assume academic and administrative responsibility for the program within SUNY and subject to SUNY regulations.

John H. Slocum is director of the Office of International Programs at SUNYA which has additional information. Applications for the coming academic year must be received by Jan. 1, 1971.

State University of New York at Albany has announced a new program in social policy analysis, program development, and social administration. This fall the university launched a program that permits graduate students to concentrate, during the second year, in social policy analysis, program development, and social administration. The program is planned so that all students in the School of Social Welfare take generic social work courses during the first year and have what are essentially casework field placements.

During the second year, students electing the new program, under study for several years, take special seminars in social policy analysis and program development and choose from among a wide group of electives, including urban problems and reform, social welfare law, mental health and the law, organizational theory, goals of public policy, public decision-making, comparative social welfare, and analysis of macro organizational behavior. All students are required to elect at least two courses in other departments and schools at the university so that they will be familiar with other disciplines and approaches. The research requirements continue to be the same for all students in the School of Social Welfare.

Field work placements are in multi-disciplinary settings in state agencies and commissions in the Capital Area. This year students are placed in the experimental Eleanor Roosevelt Development Services of the New York Department of Mental Health, the Social Development Planning Commission, and the School Social Services Division of the New York Department of Education. The program was planned to permit agencies, supervisors, and students to select each other and to assure students maximum latitude in choosing their own assignments from a wide group of relevant alternatives.

There are weekly meetings of students and faculty and monthly meetings of agency personnel and faculty to bring about prompt integration of field and classroom learning, to develop criteria for evaluating field performance, to share and solve problems, and to evaluate and systematically improve the program before it grows beyond experimental stage. The design of the new program called for only a limited number of students during the first year with the result that there are more agencies with placement opportunities than there are students to fill them.

All students are required to elect at least two courses in other departments and schools at the university so that they will be familiar with other disciplines and approaches. The research requirements continue to be the same for all students in the School of Social Welfare.

Field work placements are in multi-disciplinary settings in state agencies and commissions in the Capital Area. This year students are placed in the experimental Eleanor Roosevelt Development Services of the New York Department of Mental Health, the Social Development Planning Commission, and the School Social Services Division of the New York Department of Education. The program was planned to permit agencies, supervisors, and students to select each other and to assure students maximum latitude in choosing their own assignments from a wide group of relevant alternatives.

There are weekly meetings of students and faculty and monthly meetings of agency personnel and faculty to bring about prompt integration of field and classroom learning, to develop criteria for evaluating field performance, to share and solve problems, and to evaluate and systematically improve the program before it grows beyond experimental stage. The design of the new program called for only a limited number of students during the first year with the result that there are more agencies with placement opportunities than there are students to fill them.
