ASSEMBLY TO VOTE ON RULES AT 11:10

Students to Discuss Changes in College Traditions and Class Rivalry

A set of resolutions affecting the revision of the inter-class rivalry rules and College traditions was proposed in last Friday's 11:10 assembly. The recommendations are to be voted upon today in assembly, according to Katherine Moore, '33, president of the student association.

The recommendations make provision for the abolishing of sophomore rules and incorporating the items of previous sophomore rules into the body of customs and traditions for the entire student association.

New features of these recommendations are: the provision for two inter-class challenges and abolishing the pole-rush and tug-of-war and substituting a push-ball contest and a girl's track meet.

The following are the recommendations proposed by Myskania to the association, as they were read in assembly:

I. That section I, article II of Traditions and Inter-class Rivalry Rules, namely, "Sophomore Rules," be abolished.

II. That the following items be incorporated in the list of College Customs as stated in the Freshman Handbook:

a. During the first day of classes, and continuing for one week, members of all classes will wear small cards, of respective class colors, with the name of wearer inscribed. The cards for the freshman class will be furnished by the sophomore class; other classes will furnish their own cards.

b. Freshmen shall not wear any high school insignia, such as rings, pins, keys, athletic awards, etc., until Moving-Up Day.

c. Freshmen shall speak to members of the faculty as well as to members of their own and other classes.

III. That section C, article II of Traditions and Inter-class Rivalry Rules, namely, "Challenging," be abolished, and that the following be substituted:

1. Time and form of the challenging:

a. During the month of November one class must challenge the other to a sing or a debate.

b. During the first two months of the second semester, one class must challenge the other to whichever event has not taken place during the first semester.

c. Challenges shall be addressed to MYSKANIA, placed in the "M" section of the student mail-box, in a sealed envelope.

2. Arrangements:

a. The challenge shall be made by the president of one class to the president of the other class within three days after the president of said class has received notice from MYSKANIA of the acceptance of the challenge by MYSKANIA.

The mascot, which will be hidden, must be a small statue of not less than four inches nor more than eight inches in height, and not less than two pounds nor more than eight pounds in weight. The hiding place of the mascot has been defined by Myskania. The mascot must be hidden on the campus or in the College buildings, with the following exclusions: Hawley and Milne halls, the boiler room, the rotunda, the executive and faculty offices, the first and third floors of Richardson hall, the College Coop, the bookstore, the cafeteria and annex, and the roofs of all the buildings.

All searching for the mascot, which is done outside of College hours, must be done under the supervision of Myskania, and if the mascot is found, it must be presented to a member of Myskania immediately.

If the freshmen find the mascot they will receive five points toward inter-class rivalry, and if they fail to find it, the sophomore class will automatically receive five points.

THE SENIOR GIFT

The senior class has announced its class gift to the College in the form of a memorial fund to purchase books for the Gideon Hawley library. The interest from the fund will be used each year to buy books for the library which otherwise might not have been purchased, because of the limited budget of the library and the necessity for keeping the course and reference books completely up to date. It is right and fitting that the year which marks the graduation of the class of 1933 from the College should also mark the dedication of the new Hawley library, and that the class should choose to make its traditional gift in this form.

Previous gifts have included such items as memorial stained glass windows, equipment for the Lounge, pictures, plaques, and the clock in the Page hall tower. The establishing of such a book fund as the class of 1933 contemplates will provide a lasting, perpetual monument to the memory of the class. The books which will be bought from this fund will be marked with a special book-plate of the class. The 1933 memorial books will live forever.

MASCOT HUNT

Sunday night at midnight the mascot hunt will begin, and each night next week will see hordes of ambitious freshmen scurrying to and fro in the yearly search for the sophomore mascot. Someone once remarked that it wasn't until the week for mascot hunt arrived that the school realized the content of the freshman class, and the pep and enthusiasm they had stored away all year. Certainly it is a week when one learns to know all the crooks and crannies of the College buildings, to know one's own classmates, and to realize some of the true fun and friendship in the rivalry events between the freshman and sophomore classes.

Even if the mascot is not found, the week is valuable in many ways. It is not often that a class finds the mascot. For three years freshmen have searched, and in vain, as far as discovering the hiding place of the emblem, but surely they will all agree that the discoveries of other more valuable things made mascot hunt week an event they will never forget.

TRADITION CHANGES

The proposed changes in the tradition and inter-class rivalry rules which will be voted upon today in the student assembly deserve the careful thought and consideration of every member of the student body. Such changes will assume a more or less permanence in the history of the College student activity, and should therefore be discussed and decided intelligently without any attempts at grandstand play or dry and unresponsive humor. It is imperative that the question be decided this week in order that the regular Moving-Up Day activities may be scheduled and organized for the proper times.

Because of the belief on the part of the College physicians and of the Administration that the pole-rush and the tug-of-war are too strenuous and too injurious activities, it has been suggested that a push-ball contest be substituted for the pole-rush, and a program of track events for the tug-of-war. It is not the purpose of this article to influence any one in any way. It is merely to make each student realize the importance of the question, the history of the situation, and the necessity for prompt and careful consideration and decision upon this matter.

BOOKS: GLADYS CARROLL'S BOOK RAISES FAMILY LIFE TO POETIC LEVEL

As the earth turns. By Gladys Hasty Carroll. Macmillan. $2.50. 339 pages.

"As the earth turns is an intimate, delightful study of New England. As a story it holds its charm page by page to the end." So writes William Allen White, in a pre-view of this newest of the Macmillan publications. This novel, in its simplicity of setting, is thoroughly an American novel, and takes the Shaw family through a year in their life, a life which is entirely dependent upon the soil for existence. It is one of the best of the spring crop of books, and will probably meet with approval on all sides.

In this one year the Shaws' experience birth, death, marriage, revolt within the family, success for one of the sons in the outside world, and the coming of foreign neighbors to mingle their ways and blood with the native Yankee. The book is divided into five sections, Winter, Spring, Summer, Fall, and Winter again, and as the year rolls around the life of each Shaw becomes an individual story of interest for the reader. The author is consistently fine in her characterization, and she has a distinct zest for living which gives each sentence warmth and power.

White writes: "Here are courage with humor, purpose without cant, idealism mixed with practical common sense. The characters in the story dramatize the fundamental virtues of America and yet live and shine as human beings. It is—and there is no other word which exactly describes it—a beautiful book."

Constance Lindsay Skinner has said of the book—"The conception of this book is poetry, and lifts to the plane of poetry all the minutiae of daily life in a family of unpoetic individuals. I hear the symphony of the earth as the themes unite in a big, slow, inevitable rhythm of the seasons. There is, to my sense, great beauty in this. . . . But I am still most impressed by the magnitude and beauty of the theme, the idea of human lives moving on, and with, the soil in that vast, unbroken rhythm of the seasons, and by the quietly powerful, sure touch with which it has been handled."

COMMENTSTATER

Our wonder has been aroused by the manner in which the discussion of the pole-rush was conducted in assembly last Friday. There was something curiously queer about allowing us to talk about the rush for half an hour before "suggesting gently" that there would be no pole-rush this year in any case since the Administration is opposed to it.

Our only purpose is to encourage a direct statement of the Administration's opinion. The position of the President certainly insures a respect for his wishes, and our position as a student body makes his opinions highly important to us, especially concerning our student affairs. Personally, we believe that the Administration could, if it wished, go straight to the assembly and secure a whole-hearted co-operation from that body. It would have seemed logical and helpful to know what the President thinks of the pole-rush, for, after all, he is more aware of and sensitive to the repercussions of our activities in the more or less outside world than we who live almost entirely in the College.

We sincerely hope that the discussion scheduled for today will clear up our confusion; that either the Administration or the two gentlemen who evidently felt authorized to state the Administration's attitude will explain openly what was hinted to be hiding behind the situation.

The resolutions proposed by Myskania making present sophomore rules college traditions seem to us to deserve adoption by the association. There are two reasons for our opinion: (1) Freshmen (and other-classes) will have more respect for tradition than for oppression by the hated sophomores. The entire school will ensure disobedience instead of just a class of one-year-removed-freshmen. (2) There will be less inefficiency in the enforcing of the rules. Myskania, as the guardian of tradition, and judging by past performances, will have more control over disobedient freshmen. We have never seen a genuine enforcement by the sophomore class; we have heard of freshmen being called before Myskania for using the front door of Draper hall.

"Strangeness Is a Necessity in Poetry,"

Says Edwin Markham, American Poet.

"Poetry is the expression of unfamiliar beauty of the world; beauty which is the smile upon the face of truth," stated Edwin Markham, the dean of American poets, at a lecture in the page hall auditorium last Thursday night.

This definition of poetry came at the end of a discussion on the substance of poetry. Markham proffered definitions from the ancients. Zoroaster, the Persian prophet, stated that "the poet is a man who makes apparent the other parent." It is the poet who comes to explain the hidden mystery—"the meaning of things as the angels see them." Aristotle's definition closely follows that of Zoroaster, for it states that an artist is a man who completes the incomplete designs of nature. "There is no great beauty or wonder without strangeness," stated Lord Byron. "It is this that a poet must reveal."

More modern writers such as Coleridge and Edgar Allan Poe believed that poetry was the illumination in the case of science. The lack of strangeness would be noticeable to such an extent that the poem written would not be classed as a good poem. Poetry comes out of feeling; thought has to do with prose.

Markham closed his discussion with the following statement: "A poet is forever young and speaks the immortal tongue. He turns the whole universe into a song, but he is not a true poet if his sole purpose is to teach. Above all things, he must inspire."

A gallant gentleman with flowing white hair, Markham next turned to his own poems. From the pile of books before him he chose to recite several quatrains and a poem to his son Vergil. He also read the prize poem, "Lincoln, the Man of the People," which was first read in 1922 in front of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C. "The Man with the Hoe," written in protest against drudgery, marked the peak of all his readings. It was this poem which first brought the poet into prominence.

Markham was presented under the joint auspices of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations. A graduate of the State Normal at San José, California, this poet passed through the stages of being a romantic young schoolmaster, the principal of a school and a journalist. He recounted many humorous incidents which seem to have cropped up so plentifully during his lifetime.

A reception, sponsored by the Edward Eldred Potter Club, was conducted in the lounge of Richardson hall. Those who attended were privileged to hear Markham's viewpoints on various subjects. Among these were "Emerson," "Edgar Allan Poe," "red lips," "smoking by women" and "teaching poetry." The last subject is to be contained in a future publication which will be entitled "Plain talks on Poetry."

At present his most recent publication is "Eighty Songs of 80." This was issued last year by his friends in New York to commemorate his eightieth birthday.

Something to Say

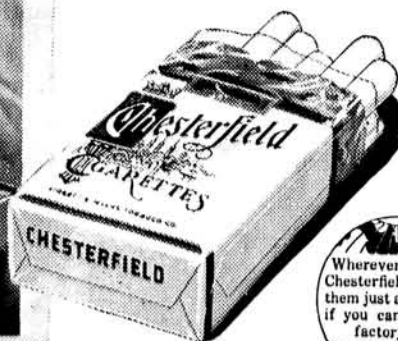

not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click . . . I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."
