Eighty books have been selected for the annual 1969 Book Shows of the American Institute of Graphic Arts and the Association of American University Presses to go on display in the University Library, State University of New York at Albany, Saturday, Nov. 7. Diverse subjects are represented from drawings, poetry, urban growth, and an economic atlas, to cookbooks, children's books, textbooks of physics, chemistry and biology, architecture, and guide books. The show will continue through Nov. 30.

The products of commercial and university presses include the best items from 1969 as selected by juries on the basis of typography, illustration, layout, paper, presswork, and binding. The university press jury was asked to make diverse selections to underscore the instructional purpose of the annual shows while considering "design as planning and problem solving."

The sponsors of this year's show are State University of New York Press, State University of New York at Albany's department of art and Art Gallery, School of Library Science, and University Library; and Mohawk Paper Mills, Inc., Cohoes and Waterford.

The faculty of the School of Library Science at State University of New York at Albany is studying the possibility of reforming the "core" or "foundation" curriculum. As a first step, 25 beginning full-time students and five faculty members are spending the semester in a 12-credit hour "unprogrammed program."

Students will receive credit for the conventional core courses, but they are free to explore, and define, the "foundations" of librarianship in their own way, individually, in small groups, or as a whole class. There is no mandated sequence of subjects, list of required topics, or approved model of librarianship. Faculty members have no exclusive areas of instruction for which they are responsible.

One purpose of the new program is to provide an opportunity for generating new approaches to the perennial problem of the core courses. Another is to suggest the possibility of constructing a beginning program that would be flexible enough to allow a student to tailor his first semester to suit his own needs or his understanding of those needs at any given time.

When the deadline arrives for making final decisions on how to re-structure the core curriculum, the faculty expects that the experience of the experimental "pilot program" may have generated more alternatives than the usual three: keep the already required core courses, replace them with new required courses, or do away with all core requirements.

A new three-credit course, nonviolent conflict resolution forum, will be offered next semester at State University of New York at Albany. The class will be limited to 40 students.

The proposal was approved recently by the College of Arts and Sciences committee for independent study. Martha Dickinson, research associate in the physics department, is course coordinator.

Active in preparations for the forum are several faculty members who have been participating in the SUNYA Peace Institute. The aim of the course is to seek peaceful and just resolutions of conflict at a time when the increasing rapidity of social and technological change seems to make conflict inevitable.

The areas of concern range from minority repression, police brutality, terrorist activity and violence described as arising from social and governmental institutions to international conflicts which have resulted in wars and threats of nuclear annihilation. Connections will be sought between domestic and international violence.

Resource people who will participate in the forum include Hans Toch, School of Criminal Justice; Eugene Rabinowitch, Center for Science and Society; Leroy Pelton, psychology; and Richard Brown, physics. About 15 faculty members will participate and will guide independent study.

The 14-week course has been divided into three sections. Violence at home and abroad today will be the subject of the first four weeks. There will be an identification of conflicts, finding of apparent causes, and measurement of urgency. Outside readings will be assigned and, at the end of the section, students individually or in small groups, will select a problem to pursue under the guidance of the resource faculty and/or the coordinator. By the end of the course, each student will have prepared a paper presenting a nonviolent resolution of a particular problem.

Perspective from the disciplines will be the theme of the next session which will last six weeks. Defined problems will be viewed in the light of philosophy, science, history, psychology, and economics, among other disciplines. In addition to the class meeting, students and faculty will meet in small groups concerned with a specific problem.

The concluding session of four weeks will be concerned with violence at home and abroad today, revisited. Problems will be reviewed and just and peaceful solutions proposed and examined. Student papers will be presented during the concluding session.

An estimated 350 students at State University of New York at Albany this semester are taking advantage of an opportunity to receive academic credit for community involvement. Guidelines approved by the faculty in September allow students to earn from one to 15 credits for independent study or "special projects involving community activity and collateral study."

Students interested in becoming involved in the community work primarily through the university's Office of Innovative and Developmental Programs. There they are put in touch with one of 53 participating agencies, with whom they arrange the kind of work they will be doing and the hours they will be available. The number of hours they devote to a project depends on the amount of credit for which they have registered.

In addition, many projects include evaluation through oral reports based on the student's experience. Melvin Urofsky, assistant dean for innovative and developmental programs, is supervising the program this semester.

Students currently are involved in such areas as tutoring neighborhood youngsters, working with members of the Albany Association of the Blind, giving assistance at the Albany Medical Center, and doing research on legal problems. The participating agencies encompass a wide range of social concerns such as youth groups, agencies for the sick and handicapped, organizations devoted to neighborhood improvement, church affiliates, and associations such as the Consumers Complaint Bureau and the League of Women Voters.

In seeking a favorable vote from the faculty in September, the undergraduate and graduate academic councils offered the following rationale for the program:

"In a time when many students feel discouraged, such a program will enable them to gain an earlier challenge in the arena of social issues. The university -- especially its students -- and our society should profit from this innovative approach to social and educational needs."

The program has had an appeal far beyond that originally expected. In the first four days of the new university community action program, 350 students had become affiliated with service agencies in a volunteer capacity. Most are sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Early estimates indicate that some 700 students will join the program next semester.

Danes Host Hudson Valley Saturday

Smarting from three decisive road losses, the State University at Albany football club returns to the scene of its early-season success Saturday, November 14, as host to Hudson Valley Community College. Kick-off is 1 p.m. The game will be the season finale for both teams.

The Great Danes have lost at Towson (69-14), Marist (45-6), and Plattsburgh (28-0), after opening the season with home victories over RIT (30-21) and Siena (25-24). Both the offense and defense have contributed to the decline with inconsistent play. Albany has managed just 20 points in three games and one touchdown was scored by the defense. Against Plattsburgh, the defense permitted four long TD's for a total of 199 yards, more than half of Plattsburgh's rushing yardage for the entire game. In an effort to beef up the attack, coach Bob Ford plans to start freshman quarterback Rick Petty (New York) against Hudson Valley. Since a broken hand sidelined Bill Flanagan (Bethpage), the Danes have been hurting at quarterback and have been unable to mount an attack. Although Petty is inexperienced, he has shown some passing ability and Ford believes Albany must throw against HVCC to stay in the game.

Joining Petty in the backfield will be tailback Bernie Boggs (Ballston Lake), full-back Jim Butler (Newburgh), and flanker Cleveland Little (Jamaica). Ernie Thomas (Rochester), formerly a flanker, has been moved to split end and Ed Perka (Ballston Lake) remains at tight end. Boggs continues to lead the team in rushing (460 yards, 5.8 average) and scoring (43 points). The passing attack has produced just 360 yards in five games, but the Danes will be throwing plenty Saturday.

Hudson Valley comes in with a 4-3-1 record and just missed a major upset in its last outing. The Vikings lost on a field goal with 4:35 to play against Grand Rapids (Mich.) Community College, fourth-ranked junior college in the country. Other losses have been to Baltimore and Nassau community colleges, both among the best in the East.

Quarterback George Patrick, who has passed for more than 1300 yards and 10 touch-downs, leads a potent offense. Running backs Ernie Skipper and Andy DiSanti are averaging 5.2 and 4.2 yards per carry, respectively. DiSanti has scored 89 points.

The Vikings are an excellent defensive team and especially tough against the run. Coach Joe Purello called his team's performance against Grand Rapids "magnificent" and expects it to vent its frustrations against Albany. Ford agrees that Albany will have to be "sky-high" to avoid a punishing afternoon.

Albany Soccer Team Finishes 3-8-1

The State University at Albany soccer team defeated Union College 4-0 in the season finale, but suffered its fourth straight losing year with a 3-8-1 record. The Great Danes began and ended the season well, but went eight consecutive games without victory in between.

Senior Demetrios Michael (Kingston) led the team in scoring for the second year in a row, compiling nine goals and four assists for 13 points. Junior transfer Fred Campbell (Watervliet) was next in production with 6-4-10. No one else managed more than three goals or four points. Michael, who tallied eight times last fall, thus becomes the fifth leading scorer in Albany history with 17 career goals.

Sophomore goalie John Thayer (Averill Park) turned in a solid performance in the nets, shutting out two opponents and keeping several other games close. He recorded 175 saves.

Albany won two of its first three games, then hit a serious scoring drought during which it scored just five goals in six games, all losses. The team revived in the last three contests, dropping a 6-4 overtime thriller to tough RPI; tying RIT 3-3; and blanking Union. The Danes scored 11 goals in those three games and just 12 in the previous nine.

During the slump, several negative school records were set: New Paltz' 9-2 romp tied Albany worst loss (seven goals) and broke the mark for goals allowed; the eight losses are the most in one season; the seven straight defeats are a record; and the eight games without a win (including one tie) equals a record.

(NOTE: Many of the above statistics were gleaned from information in the Converse 1970 Basketball Yearbook.)

Campus Chest Week begins Monday, Nov. 16, at State University of New York at Albany. Booster sales, a play, and an auction are among events scheduled to raise money for the benefit of Hope House, a drug rehabilitation center in downtown Albany. Hope House is a voluntary organization concentrating on group therapy where people talk about their problems and help each other work out solutions. The center is located on South Pearl Street.

Sale of booster buttons will take place in the Campus Center Lobby through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Boosters will be entitled to free coffee all week and will be eligible for door prizes and the grand prize, a bicycle, to be awarded at the end of the week.

"Ray of Hope," a play presented by members of Hope House, will be given on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center ballroom. A minimum donation of 50¢ will be asked.

During the week, Campus Chest representatives on each residence quadrangle will be going from door to door collecting anything salable except clothes. The quads will be in competition with each other and a prize will be awarded to the quad contributing the most. On Saturday at noon in the Campus Center Assembly Hall, the collected items will be auctioned off to the highest bidders. Door prizes will be awarded during that time. Co-chairman for the event are Elizabeth Elsesser and Mary Mazzeo. They have asked that donations be sent in care of "Campus Chest" to the Student Association Office, Room 346, in the Campus Center.

In the past, the Campus Chest drive usually has been for the benefit of two or more charities. However, the amount actually realized by any one group has been small, and this year it was decided that the drive would concentrate on one charity and try to make a substantial contribution to it.

During World War II Dr. Schlesinger served in the Office of War Information in Washington, the Office of Strategic Services in London, Paris, and Germany, and the United States Army. In the meantime, he completed work on the Jackson volume, a book he had begun before the war as a member of the Society of Fellows at Harvard.

The historian's third book, "The Vital Center," a discussion of contemporary political and social problems, was published in 1949. "The General and The President," an analysis of American foreign policy in terms of the issues raised by President Truman's dismissal of General MacArthur and written in collaboration with Richard Rovere, was issued in 1951.

Dr. Schlesinger returned to Harvard as professor of history in 1947.

Two concerts of particular interest are scheduled at State University of New York at Albany this month. On Wednesday and Saturday evenings of next week, Nov. 18 and Nov. 21, the University Concert Band will perform for the first time under its new conductor, Charles Boito, and on Sunday, Nov. 22, the University-Community Symphony Orchestra will be heard in its initial concert under the direction of Nathan Gottschalk.

Monday evening the Beethoven Festival continues on campus with a program in the Performing Arts Center Recital Hall at 8:30. Participating in the program, "Variations for Violin, Cello, and Piano," will be Findlay Cockrell, John Goberman, Dennis Helmrich, and Marvin Morgenstern, of the university's music department.

The Concert Band is composed of about 65 students, only a few of whom are music majors. From biology to history majors, they come together three times a week for rehearsals and ensembles. Last year the band performed to standing room only crowds at each of its three concerts, including a twin-night benefit concert that raised nearly $1,000 for underprivileged children in Albany.

Mr. Boito has had extensive musical experience at the University of Southern California, in the West Point Band, and as the assistant conductor of the Yale Band. He will lead the SUNYA band in a performance of works by Mendelssohn, Rossini, Riegger, and Johann Strauss, as well as conduct the University Wind Ensemble in a composition by Richard Strauss.

Enrique Laguerre is presently professor of Puerto Rican literature at the Catholic University in Ponce, Puerto Rico, and last year was visiting lecturer at New York University.

Author Laguerre produced his first major novel in 1935, La Lllamarada (depicting the conflict between cane-field workers and land owners), and to date has such titles to his credit as La Rasca, Los Dedos de la Mano, La Ceba en el Triesto, El 30 de Febrero, Solar Montoya, El Laberinto, and Cause sin Rio. In all these, the author focuses major attention on social, economic and political frustrations of the Puerto Rican masses, particularly of the rural sector.

An educator by profession, he worked first as a rural teacher, then as principal of the Second Rural Unit of Puerto Rico. For four years he served as advisor to the Puerto Rican Department of Education and in 1950 was selected by UNESCO to act as education consultant to Mexico, where he remained until 1952. From 1941 to 1968, he occupied intermittently the Chair of Language and Literature in the Department of Hispanic Studies at the University of Puerto Rico.

Enrique Laguerre's visit on campus is jointly sponsored by the department of Romance languages and literatures, the Office of Educational Opportunities Program, and the Center for Inter-American Studies.

The Program

The program includes early works of Mendelssohn and Richard Strauss, both of whom were in their teens when these pieces were composed. The Cuverture fur Harmoniemusik, Op. 24 by Mendelssohn is a work written originally for wind band and contains some of his best writing. The Strauss work ^{Serenade in Eb Major, Op. 7,} comes under the category of music for wind ensemble as it is scored for 13 wind instruments. Why include a smaller work as this on a band program? Mr. Boite believes there is a great need for variety in programming for wind instruments and pieces which provide relief from the larger sonority serve this need.

Mr. Boite plans to include many more such works in the future as he also believes that they provide the best ^{means} opportunity of encouraging higher standards of musicianship. Being required to play one to a part, ^{the student must develop} ~~goes hand in hand with~~ greater independence and reliability. There is a sizeable amount of fine literature in this genre yet to be tapped.

Other works on the program will be Wallingford Riegger's DANCE RHYTHMS, Op. 58a, and Rossini-Respighi's LA BOUTIQUE FANTASQUE.

The concert will be held on Wed. evening, Nov. 18, and Sat. evening Nov. 21 at 8:30 pm in the Main Theatre of the Performing Arts Center at the state niv.

Two fellowships and two assistantships are now being offered to graduate students at State University of New York at Albany who want to spend the academic year 1971-72 studying in France. The two fellowships are offered for graduate study at the University of Strasbourg. They are open to SUNYA graduate students in the Master of Arts or doctoral programs in any of the disciplines offered at that university.

The fellowships provide room, board, and $60 a month for personal expenses. Tuition costs are approximately $20 a year. Areas of special strength at Strasbourg are literature, phonetics, history, archaeology, political science, and molecular chemistry.

Applicants must be single and under 25 years of age. They must have a working knowledge of French and may be asked to take an examination in the language to demonstrate their ability to understand spoken French. Applications are being accepted in the Office of International Studies, SS 111. The deadline for applying is Dec. 1.

Graduate students in the M. A. or Ph. D. programs in French are eligible for two "postes d'assistants" to be awarded by the French government. The positions offer an opportunity to spend a school year teaching English conversation approximately 10 hours a week in a French secondary school, usually either a "collège" or a "lycée". SUNYA requests that students be assigned to a school within easy commuting distance to a French university so that they may continue their graduate work on a part-time basis.

Although the stipend varies somewhat from one school to another, it provides for board, room, and personal expenses. It does not cover transatlantic travel. Applications are being accepted in Social Science 111 and the deadline for applying is Jan. 15, 1971.

A discovery made at the photomicrographic laboratory at State University of New York at Albany is the subject of an invited paper presented by Roger J. Cheng at the National Cloud Physics Conference held at Fort Collins, Colo., under the auspices of the American Meteorological Society and Colorado State University. Mr. Cheng is research associate at the university's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center.

Employing cinephotomicrographic techniques, Mr. Cheng was able to produce a light micrograph while freezing a supercooled water drop. The fragmentation of a freezing drop in the forms of splintering, shattering or bursting has been known for some time. The newly-discovered phenomenon is ejection of numerous micro-droplets. Further study showed that the micro-droplets ejected were of a positive electrical charge, whereas the mother drop was of a negative charge. The phenomenon of ejection of micro-droplets, the duration of their ejection, and the electrical properties of the droplets suggest a possible mechanism of charge generation in thunderstorms.

The photograph showing the ejection of micro-droplets by freezing a supercooled water drop this year was awarded first prize in the category of the light micrograph at the International Conference on Microscopy held in Chicago. The criteria for the award were scientific value and content, technical excellence, and aesthetics.

Mr. Cheng joined the faculty at SUNYA in 1967. His laboratory assistants are Edward Potkowski and Barry Eckert.

Rev. Anthony Rocha, director of the newly-established Institute of the Aging in the College of General Studies at State University of New York at Albany, has been participating in a series of regional meetings concerned with planning for the proposed 1971 White House Conference on the Aging. The new institute at SUNYA, which the Reverend Father Rocha heads, is concerned with the many phases of aging, with emphasis on gerontology.

Before coming to the Albany university, Father Rocha was serving as a Roman Catholic priest in the diocese of Fall River, Mass. There he founded the philosophy of senior citizen power. He has held positions as gerontologist and health services administrator and at SUNYA he has an appointment as professor of continuing education.

Father Rocha holds degrees in theology from the University of Lisbon, Portugal, and the University of Waterloo in Ontario, Canada. He also has a Master of Science in hygiene and health administration from Harvard University and a certificate in gerontology from Boston University. He was ordained a priest in 1959.

The newly-named director has served as consultant to numerous federal, state, and local agencies. His publications include "Senior Citizen Power," Northwestern University; "Smithtown, U.S.A.," Harvard University; and "Kerner Kernel," White House.

Father Rocha's plans for the Institute of the Aging include seminars and workshops, starting in September 1971. Also being assessed is the possibility of degree programs starting in 1972 and a doctoral program by 1975.

The new institute's director points to the value of a multi-disciplinary approach in developing gerontological insights and to the need by public and private agencies for persons who are generalists in gerontology.

"Harry, Noon and Night," written by Ronald Ribman and directed by Albert Weiner, will be the entry of State University of New York at Albany for the American College Theatre Festival next spring in Washington D. C. The play will open in the Studio Theatre of the Performing Arts Center Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 8:30 p. m. and continue the remainder of the week. Reserved seat tickets are $2 or $1 with student tax card. Preview performances will be held Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 7 and 8, at 8:30 for a limited general admission audience at $1 and 50¢ with tax card.

The competition aspect of the production is an added challenge for the technical designers, Mildred Koob, costumes, Robert Donnelly, scenic design and Jerome Hanley, lighting, because the festival rules place certain limitations upon them. The entire company with costumes and set must be able to travel to the regional contest, and perhaps to the final Washington competition. The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and the Smithsonian Institution will be hosting the festival, with American Airlines, in Washington.

One hundred sixty five plays from campuses across the country are entered. The competition is presented by the American Educational Theatre Association and the American National Theatre and Academy and sponsored by American Airlines. Each entry must be judged twice, first regionally and then finally in Washington against the other 13 regional finalists. The preliminary judging in Region XII (New York, New Jersey, and eastern Pennsylvania) will be done by Arthur Lithgow, the executive director of Princeton's McCarter Repertory Company. From the region's 18 entries he will select three or four to compete in the semi-finals at Lycoming College in Williamsport, Pa., in January. One production will be chosen there to represent Region XII for a week in Washington and to compete against the other region finalists.

Deep Danes Host Williams in Tuesday Opener

The 55th season of basketball at State University at Albany opens Tuesday night, Dec. 1, when the Great Danes host Williams College at 8:30. The schools' freshman teams will play the 6:30 preliminary.

Last year, Albany won a 72-71 overtime thriller at Williams, when Alan Reid hit a pair of jump shots to erase a three-point deficit. The Danes went on to a 13-9 campaign, while the Ephmen suffered their second straight losing season at 6-11. Veteran Albany coach Dick Sauers, in his 16th year, has four starters back and more depth than in recent seasons. Al Shaw is starting his 22nd year at Williams with only one senior, but eight sophomores up from an outstanding 12-1 freshman team. Sauers also has four talented sophs from a 13-5 frosh squad.

The returning Albany regulars; co-captain forwards 6-0 Jack Jordan (Green Island) and 6-2 Reid (Binghamton), 6-2 Steve Sheehan (Fort Edward), and 6-1 guard Jim Masterson (Albany), all seniors, will be joined in the starting line-up Tuesday by transfer guard 6-0 John Quattrocchi (Fort Edward), from the University of Connecticut. Jordan scored 25 against Williams a year ago and Reid added 18.

Sauers figures to go his deep bench early and often with such available talent as sophomores 6-4 Werner Kolln (Kingston), 6-2 Dave Welchons (New Hartford), and 5-10 Tim Minnehan (Livonia), and juniors 6-1 John Heher (Elmira) and 6-0 Bob Rossi (Schenectady). The Danes have more speed, more size, and better shooting than last season.

Williams will have a height advantage with 6-5 senior captain John Untereker heading the list. He scored 21 against Albany last year and finished with a 17.0 scoring average. Six-two junior Dave Creen and 6-3 soph Steve Creahan are vying for the other forward position. The center will be a soph, either 6-5 Hoyt Cousins or 6-3 Dick Small. In the backcourt will be 5-10 junior Vern Manley and 6-2 soph Greg Williams, who led the freshmen with a 17.3 average.

The Albany-Williams series stands at 3-3. The teams first met in 1917, but didn't play from 1924 until 1967.

The Danes take to the road after Tuesday, playing at Stony Brook on Friday, Plattsburgh December 9, and Binghamton December 12. Stony Brook and Plattsburgh defeated Albany last season, while Binghamton returns to the schedule after a year's absence.
