The election for Vice Presidency was a closer one, the main contest being between Alice Prindle and Eloise Worth. Miss Worth won on the third and last distribution by a margin of 76 votes. William Baldwin and Alice Williams both drew comparatively small totals, Baldwin dropping out in the second distribution with 75 votes and Miss Williams dropping out in the third with 158. Miss Prindle totaled 389 votes against the total of 465 votes for Miss Worth.

Catherine Donnelly surpassed the quota in the second distribution to be elected Secretary. Her closest competitor was Margaret Franks with 380 votes. The Grand Marshall was easily elected when Judy Dube reached a majority with 470 votes to the competing Marvan Vitullo's bers of the new Myskania began after the traditional moving-up and the singing of "Arm in Arm."

Commencement of the tapping was signified by the rising of Judicial Board as three members stepped forward - one of whom was Joseph Palevsky, Speaker. Then Harriet Brinkman and Helen Shure separated in the center of the stage and walked down into the auditorium, one up the right aisle, one up the left. They met in the back, and walked down a center aisle pausing finally while the Speaker called out the name of JOAN HELEN ALVERSON, active member of D&A Council and of SCA. Miss Alverson was escorted back to the stage where Jean Griffin, Chairman of the Board, pinned a purple and gold tassel to her white dress. Miss Alverson was then congratulated by Mr. Palevsky, after which she took her place upon the stage as the first member of the new Myskania. Shirley Passow and Gloria Mc-
