VARSITY DEBATE TEAM MAY MEET FOREIGN DEBATERS

A team representing four of the leading universities of Scotland will probably be the first opponent of the State college men's varsity debate team, next fall, the debate council announced today.

The debate, which is being scheduled by Miss Martha Biehle, acting executive secretary of the National Student Federation of America, is expected to take place on either November 14 or 21. The Scottish team will make a tour of the United States for a three months' period, meeting the leading college teams of this country. Miss Biehle said.

Although four men will form the group, they will be divided into two teams of two each. Each team will follow a schedule of its own. The Scottish debaters will be chosen from the Scottish universities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and St. Andrews. They will be chosen by the student representative councils of Scotland. Coming here in the middle of October, they will remain in America until near the end of December.

The debate council also announced a complete internal revision in its organization. No longer will members of the freshman class be chosen for the council in the spring of the freshman year. Instead three members will be chosen at the end of the sophomore year, insuring a better choice of candidates and better evidence of debating ability, according to Dr. Harold W. Thompson, professor of English and debate coach.

The new policy goes into effect immediately. Lawrence C. Newcomb, '31, and Kenneth Miller, '32, are the newly elected members of the council to make it total six members upon the graduation of the present two senior members of the council.

Newcomb has been second speaker on the men's varsity team in two debates the past year and Miller has been alternate on three during his sophomore year.

Other courses which have been added to those required in education are: courses in school administration, elementary education, general education, junior high school education, and graduate courses. It is announced.

Other departments which are offering courses of instruction this summer include the commerce, English, French, science, and social science departments.

Mr. J. L. Bradbury, one of the visiting instructors, is an English tutor at the college in Chester, England, a school for the training of teachers, which is connected with the universities of Liverpool and London.

It will be especially convenient for the business office, which divides the office into a public and private room. "I need this in my work with the students," Miss Pierce said.

HARTWICK MEETS STATE TOMORROW

Bus Will Carry Both Team and Rooters to Scene of Fourth Game

The State college baseball team will journey to Ononta tomorrow afternoon to oppose the Hartwick college nine in a return game. The team and a few rooters will leave the Ridgefield club house at 9 o'clock in a chartered bus.

The rainy spell which enveloped Albany and the vicinity for the first two days of the week prevented Baker's charges from indulging in stiff drills on the home diamond, and as several games were played by outside teams on our field the rest of the week, the squad could not enjoy any strenuous work-outs.

However, the players are full of enthusiasm and "raring to go," and if they show last week's form, should coast in on the favorable side of the scoring sheet.

The players who will make the trip, according to Coach Rutherford K. Baker, are Richard Whiston, Leo Allan, Thomas Kinsella, Robert Goodrich, Gilbert DeLaura, John Detseloff, Fay Blum, Lloyd Moreland, Ellis Kolodny, Charles Lyons and Alexander Schoor. Manager Kenneth A. Miller and Charles Juckett and Ralph Harris, assistant managers, will also accompany the squad.

All undergraduates who wish to accompany the squad can do so for the sum of one dollar, according to an announcement by manager Miller. They must see him before tomorrow, he announced. They will meet at the Ridgefield diamond and be ready to leave at 9 o'clock.

Purple And Gold Nine Beats Hamilton Team

By tallying a run in the eleventh inning of a gruelling contest, the Purple and Gold baseball team defeated Hamilton college 2-1 on the Ridgfield diamond last Saturday afternoon. Robert Goodrich, veteran first baseman, drove in the winning marker by hitting a long single to centerfield for his second hit of the day.

Leo Allan hurled a heady game. He was steady in the pinches and had remarkable control, fanning twelve batters, issuing three free passes to first base, and yielding five hits.

It was a pitcher's battle from the very start. Both moundsmen were keeping what hits there were well scattered. Hamilton scored first in the fifth inning on a walk, and a long two bagger to the tennis courts by Hiller.

State tied the score in the last half of the seventh inning when De Laura reached Eggleston for a single, and went to second on a wild throw. Festa then sacrificed him to third base, and Kinsella brought him in on a long single to center.

The tenth inning was short. Allan struck out the three opposing batters in rapid succession, and Eggleston almost duplicated his performance. Whiston was out on a lousy fly, and the next two batters were called out on strikes.

Crowley opened the eleventh inning with a single, but his team mates could not follow his example and the side was retired.

State then came to bat and managed to score the deciding run.

If You Ask Me—

Question: Do you think that the Pedagogue should be placed upon the budget of the student association?

Louis Kolker, '31: By no means! All classes would have to contribute equally, yet the return to the classes would not be equal. Such a measure would be purely and simple class legislation.

Catherine Broderick, '31: Yes. The publication is valuable to all of the four classes, and, therefore, should be supported by the four classes. The book could, consequently, be enlarged and improved.

Bernard Kerbel, '33: Of course not! The Pedagogue is fundamentally a senior year book. Placing it on the budget might make it seem to be a school publication, but its real status could not be long hidden.

Irving R. McConnell, '31: No. If the Pedagogue were placed on the budget, all persons would have to contribute for it. Many of these persons could neither afford it nor want it normally. Thus those who do not desire it would have to contribute so that those few who want it may secure it cheaper.

Mary Agnes Reilly, '33: Certainly. If everyone contributed, the total cost would be cheaper per individual. The Pedagogue could be enlarged to give it more of an inter-class publication.

He then returned to school as a post graduate student for one-half year, during which time he served as humor editor on the "Proseel," the Manual Training high school paper. Basch entered State college in February, 1928, as a freshman. During that semester he was in elementary and advanced class plays, either acting or working on the sets. He wrote all the songs for the interclass sing which took place between his class and that of '30. He also wrote the words of several songs, and composed the Alma Mater for the Moving up day sing, and was in the class stunt. In his sophomore year Basch became a cub reporter on the State College News. Having worked in this capacity for a half year, he was promoted to a reporter. At the end of his sophomore year he was again promoted, but this time to the office of associate managing editor of the News. In the same year Basch became an associate editor of the Lion. SPORT SHORTS

By AL SCHOOR

The boys came back to the winning column in the Hamilton game with a bang. The team gave Allan good support and it was a well earned victory.

The biggest turn-out of the year was at this game, which happened to be the best of the season. A little organized cheering under the direction of Clay Stewart, helped the team quite a bit in its stubborn fight.

DeLaura made a spectacular one-handed catch of Crowley's fast zipping liner in the ninth inning which saved the game. Goodrich also made a clever pick-up of a bad throw to first, with a man on third. If he hadn't stopped the ball, it would have caused State's defeat.

Blum started off the initial inning by getting a safe hit in his first time at the bat. He had also hit safely when put in the line-up as a pinch hitter last week.

Kinsella came out of his batting slump at opportune times. He scored State's first run on a whistling drive to the outfield.

Lawton was the only member of the team to touch Allan's offerings more than once, getting a double and a single.

The boys leave for Oneonta tomorrow to meet the Hartwick team in a return encounter, and although inclement weather has prevented any real work-outs this week, it looks as if the Purple and Gold wearers will return with another victory.

The team should be proud of the Hamilton win as the Buff and Blue has defeated R. P. I., University of Rochester and St. Lawrence university in its last three contents.

Rolling their own. These speedy State college co-eds can not reach their classes soon enough by walking so they roller skate to school. Having firmly established thefad here, they are now lending their efforts to induce the men to take up skating in order to keep up with them.

TOP. MICHAEL TEPEDINO
BELOW- EDWARD THOMPSON

Teaching while you learn isn't so hard if you take the words of Michael Tepedino and Edward Thompson, seniors, who are doing their practice teaching outside of Milne High school. Tepedino secured a position teaching French at the Christian Brother's academy and Thompson, teaches five periods of science every day in the Albany high school.

Audrey Flowers, '32, will see to it that the News has plenty of advertising for next year. Miss Flowers is the new advertising manager of the STATE COLLEGE NEWS. Upper right, Netta Miller, one of the twelve juniors tapped for Myskania last Friday. Lower left, Thomas Herney, '32, who was one of the three delegates from this College who went to Pennsylvania to see what he could do to bring about world peace. Lower right, Ruth Brezee, '32, one of the newly appointed junior associate editors of the News.

Kappa Delta Rho maternity boasts of two good "kitchen scullions" in the persons of Horace Myers and Ward Cole, juniors, who can wash and iron, cook and bake, with a skill equal to that of any sorority woman in the College.

MISS AUDREY FLOWERS

MISS RUTH BREZEE

Another view of State college's underclass gladiators whose barbaric delight in fighting received an outlet last Thursday night under the admiring eyes of the women of the College.
 Lower picture shows the women of the freshmen class smiling in anticipation of the pole rush victory by their men which never materialized.

The successful Moving-up day parade last Friday was partly due to the organizing ability of Kathryn Webster, '30, who acted as grand marshal.

Asenath Van Buren, '32, who directed sophomore stunt for Moving-up day. She is also an associate editor of the 1934 handbook.

You might mistake her for one of the students on the campus, but actually she is Miss Emma Besig, instructor in English.

Strutting their stuff. Ardith Down and Marian Weinberg, juniors, relax after school hours by practicing the new-fangled dance in the Lounge of Richardson hall.

Taking it easy in the Delta Omega house are four of the inter-class rivals of last year. They are, left to right, Madge French, '32, and Ardith Down, '31, standing; and Dorothy Abrams, '31, and Peggy Sherman, '32. This picture was taken to commemorate their wearing of the new high waist-line dresses, even though Dean Anna F. Pierce said it was not good for their health.

Moore, most enthusiastic. Lower, Thomas Kinsella, the most scholarly, and Grace Brady, the most charming. These results were obtained in a vote conducted by the Pedagogue.

Three Simple Simons go fishing in buckets in the old gymnasium to see what they can catch. Arlon Bush and William Collins, freshmen pledges of Kappa Delta Rho fraternity sit with a fellow neophyte, Clayton Stewart, and look bored at the results of their attempts to emulate Izaak Walton.

When she isn't decorating for sophomore activities, Selma Sims, '32, is a firm exponent of the muse of dancing. Most of the unusual decorating effects that have astonished and delighted guests at sophomore soiree have been achieved under the direction of Miss Sims.

They start things and finish them for the sophomore class. Above Helen Mead and Margaret Hilton; Below, Charles Kissam and Curtiss Rutenbur. Rutenbur will head the class next year.
