Three Albany Poll Watchers
Charge Voting Violations

Three poll watchers in the City of Albany claimed last week that they observed several violations of voting regulations last election day. Harold Berberick, Belle Drew and Stephen Villano were poll watchers in the eighth and eleventh wards of the city. Among their charges were that polling places were unmarked, that distance markers were never posted, and that absentee ballots were counted and sealed before the legal time.

Appropriately, violations like these were not limited to the eighth and eleventh wards. Drew claims that a friend of hers knows about one illegalities. 'They were acting as the Democratic ward leader's captains, we, indeed, had, not fulfilled the proper spirit (of last month's motion), and with an admonishment to see that nothing similar would occur in the future.

The members voted 10-5-2 to meet, with Benson noting that "It was unfortunate that faculty and students were split on the vote." (Faculty support carried the measure.) The students suffered their first defeat of the day.

Muskie Gives Views On Women's Rights

by Sibil Bulay

Senator Edmund Muskie charged Monday night that President Nixon has opposed any action to further the cause of women's rights. Muskie opened his speech at the "Freedom Forum" in Schenectady with the usual anecdotes, and commented on Mayor Lindsay's charge of party: "You know, whenever I'm in New York these days I'm asked what I think about Mayor Lindsay becoming a Democrat. My answer is that I can understand why. He suddenly focused on what five years of Republican rule has done to New York City." Muskie went on to say that, "I really think that John made the right move. I think that his political prospects have brightened. At about the same time the President was right—we had not moved fast enough. So Nixon and that "we must broaden the coverage of the equal pay and equal protection law" were printed and the president has ignored virtually all of their recommendations.

"They live with it every day. But most men here and everywhere in America are still not truly committed to women's rights, nor do they understand what the women are talking about."

Muskie summed Nixon of not only opposing any action to further the cause of women's rights, such as his opposition to the comprehensive day care bill, but of refusing to propose any bills himself: "Eight years after John Kennedy appointed the first presidential commission on the status of women, Richard Nixon said that the Democrats had not moved fast enough or far enough on women's rights. The President was right—we had not moved fast enough. So Nixon appointed another task force which reported its findings in 1970. The report was printed and the president has ignored virtually all of their recommendations. Let me say to you that what we are discussing is not some female fad. It is a fundamental change in the American assumption of equality among all those privileged to live and enjoy citizenship in this country." Muskie went on to say that the answer to sex discrimination is not more task forces and study commissions, since "if we do not know by now what must be done, we never will." Instead, it is Muskie's position that women be guaranteed admission to secondary and higher education, publicly supported higher education under the same standards as men, and that "we must broaden the coverage of the equal pay and equal employment acts to cover every job in government and in the private sector." He urges that the Congress not delay beyond this spring approval of the equal rights amendment of the Constitution: "That with his bed only half-filled, it weights heavily, and he cited the figure of forty-five pounds per square foot as the maximum floor load in the residence halls. McCabe claims that with his bed only half-filled, it weights only thirty-two pounds per square foot and that he should, consequently, be allowed to keep it.

Robert McCabe, a senior living in Cayuga Hall, has been ordered by the Quad Coordinator to remove his waterbed from his room. The bed, which weighs 32 pounds per square foot, is reportedly too heavy. McCabe claims that a Dean's desk, which weighs at least 100 pounds per square foot, is more harmful.

University Library Hard Hit by Freeze

by Ray Lewis

The ramifications of the state-wide budget freeze have been felt severely by all departments of the university community. One of the hardest hit areas has been the University Library. In an interview with John Ashton, Director of the Library, this reporter learned some of the unique problems facing the Library this year.

In light of the budget freeze and the subsequent forced savings program imposed upon this institution, the Library has no free funds this year with which to launch any new buying programs. As Ashton explained, under a forced savings system, libraries in general are always hard hit since those funds, allocated for the purpose of buying new books are viewed as "excess" by the state and are hence consumed. Since the Library must wait for the books to be published before they spend their appropriation, they find themselves in a very vulnerable position.

In other respects, the Library is attempting to function normally. For example, the Library has retained all journal subscriptions for this year in order to reserve continuity with previous purchases. As Ashton pointed out, the Library would prefer to have complete sets of magazines and not suspend any existing subscriptions. In addition, an interlibrary loan blanket or approval order has been maintained on a par basis with last year with only a 6% increase to compensate for a rise in costs. This blanket order is a standing order, whereby all books printed in English in the United States which demonstrate some positive interest for the University Community are automatically purchased and received by the University Library. Ashton feels that "we shall not be able to maintain our blanket order unless more funds are approved for this purpose.

The budget freeze has left the Library without the proper funds to buy a sufficient number of copies for the main room reading shelves. But more important, the freeze has created serious staffing problems. To date, the Library has been forced to refill any job vacancies that occur and furthermore, any replacement for a student salaried by temporary funds must be approved by the Director of the Library.

Ashton said that nowhere is this manpower shortage so clearly evidenced as behind the circulation desk. At present, that staff is operating at only 40% of its full capacity and at the same time must accommodate in the general use of the library facilities. This incongruity has led to an eight-day backlog in the reshelving of returned books. The help shortage behind the desk has slowed up the check-out of books as well. Ashton pointed out that the computer system, employed by the Library last year, did not work out favorably and hence a return to a manual system this year was affected. This manual system, Ashton noted, is transient.

When the Library was a more responsive computer system, once the funds were made available. Yet in any event, this manual system, coupled with a skeleton labor force, has taxed the efficiency of the library operation.

Once funding problems are resolved, the Library hopes to expand over the next several years, in a series of stages. Ashton feels that the present facilities can accommodate the university community for the next five years. Industrial reorganization, he feels, whereby shelving and seating space is made available. Yet in any event, this manual system, coupled with a skeleton labor force, has taxed the efficiency of the library operation.

The combined meeting will take place December 15 at 3:00 pm in Room 375 of the State University of New York at Albany, Inc. to find suitable foster homes for college students. The other proposals were sent back for further study; a committee composed of John Hartley (administration), Dr. Walter Balk (library), and Carol Hughes (student) will examine them more closely and come back to the membership and directors with more information and suggestions. The combined meeting will take place December 15 at 3:00 and everyone in the university community can attend. The main discussion will deal with the much-disputed Campus Center food operation which, oddly, was supposed to be the main subject of Monday afternoon's meeting.

Help Children

Recently, a group of faculty and graduate level students agreed to work with the Upstate Community Service Bureau, an arm of the State Division For Youth, in an attempt to find suitable foster homes for adolescent boys and girls. Joseph Garbin, a graduate student at the School of Social Welfare, says that many of these boys and girls had to be placed in training schools because they had extremely poor family situations. Most of these children, Garbin points out, are between the ages of 11 and 16, and about 35% are black or Puerto Rican. Garbin feels that a University as large as SUNYA should be able to provide many interested and dedicated families who will be able to help. More specific information can be obtained by calling the Social Services Study Unit of the School of Social Welfare at 472-2266.

Black Panther Party chairman Bobby Seale told an audience at Stanford University last week that the panther Party is dropping its "para-military titles" and will concentrate instead on providing free medical and clothing clinics to serve the poor.

Seale said the Panthers were not calling on people to pick up guns; he said party members are being asked to point out the oppressiveness of the American system to the people through genuine service projects. He added that the call to guns was being advocated by those he called "a few defectors" — a reference to Eldridge Cleaver who heads up the more militant international faction of the Panther Party.

Seale insisted that the Black Panther Party's free breakfast program has provided more concrete benefits than is provided by the $10 billion spent through the government's war on poverty.

Dope Is Death

NEW YORK (LNS) — For 17 months after he went underground in April 1970, very little was heard from H. Rap Brown, former chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) except for his place of honor on the FBI's expanded most-wanted list. There were a few messages printed in the SNCC paper or other black papers, to the effect that he was alive and well. Then on October 15, four black men were busted while they were trying to hold up Manhattan's Red Carpet Lounge, a dark little bar down some steps on 85th Street, in a predominantly black and Puerto Rican neighborhood. Shiny Cadillacs often line the bar's front curb and there is a rumor floating around that it is a drug drop for the kids at Brandeis High School across the street. A few hours after they were in custody, the cops claimed they had H. Rap Brown in their hands.

For quite a while the man in the Bellevue hospital prison bed, who was shot twice in the stomach, claimed he was “Roy Williams.” It wasn’t until over a month later that supporters of the man who was awaiting another operation to repair his gunshot wounds publicly announced that he was H. Rap Brown.

At the same press conference where these supporters identified Rap Brown, the formation of the H. Rap Brown Anti-Dope Movement was announced, Nov. 24. The Movement was sponsored by a coalition of groups represented by former Georgia representative Julian Bond; Fred Meely of the Nat’l Congress; Mrs. Rosa Hamilton of the New York City-wide Welfare Rights organization; Rev. Alfred Sharpton of the National Youth Movement, Mami Amiri Baraka (Leroi Jones) of the Committee for a United Newark; and Popi Sharp of the Black Peoples’ Unity Movement of Camden, N.J.

The movement plans to be a nationwide coordinating group whose “primary goal is the elimination of dope from the black community by waging an aggressive campaign against dope, dope pushers and dope suppliers.”

Black communities have made many attempts to stop the flow of dope from reaching our stoops our hallways and our schools. We have also tried to rid ourselves of those whose sole function is the destruction of our families by selling dope...

“There have been numerous incidents of mothers, fathers, friends and relatives who have taken it upon themselves to drive pushers and their so-called “legitimate” fronts such as bars, restaurants, candy and “variety” stores, florist shops, laundries and cleaning establishments out of the black area. Because they have been alone in this struggle, the impact of their work has had a limited effect.

“We ask the aid and assistance of all sectors of the black community—students, street blocks, artists, anti-poverty organizations, housewives and radio and TV personnel to contact the H. Rap Brown Anti-Dope Movement, 346 W. 20th Street, New York, New York 10011.”

When questioned by reporters, Bond (as acting spokesman for the group) said that the anti-dope movement “would not only have its own surveillance, but its own tribunal and its own punishment.”

He said that the purpose of the Anti-Dope Movement was to “eliminate people dealing in dope.” When questioned further, Bond said they would first use “moral persuasion” and if that didn’t work, “more forceful deliberate means.”

And the Red Carpet Lounge? “I’m not willing to say anything about the Red Carpet Lounge,” said Bond drily. “Or any candy store, lounge, bar, laundry or cleaning establishment. The black community knows which places are well-known drop-off places for dope.”

Beechwood Ageing could be an “advertising gimmick.”

But it isn’t.

(For instance, last year we bought almost 2 1/2 million pounds of Beechwood strips... enough to fill 67 freight cars.)

Dear Sir:

I read with interest the recent editorial about the Community Service program at SUNYA. naturally, I can only respond with authority about the program as it functions here at Albany Medical Center Hospital. Far from "baby-sitting" out in the community, the students assigned to us are placed in areas where they are expected to contribute. During the three semesters we have had students — 35, then 86, and now 71 young men and women — there have, of course, been situations in which a part of the volunteer job has been filing, answering the phone, or lab glassware washing. Even these, however, have been much needed by our hospital, which like all others, does not have unlimited funds to hire all the personnel we need. Also, these chores do afford the student a chance to see how a hospital operation of the university.

For most of our students, their assignments are in their field of interest, and we try our best to give them a real learning situation. Chemistry and biology majors often work in laboratories learning how these disciplines are often work in laboratories learned and illuminating.

Community Service: Yes

By their own observations, the students have verbalized that their work at Albany Medical Center Hospital is "the most relevant thing," "the best learning experience," "what has finally motivated me," "away from books and theory — part of the world."

We see the program as extending the academic curriculum — helping to put flesh on the skeleton. We expect the SUNYA students to be serious in their work, mature, responsible, and intelligent. They have not fallen below our expectations.

Russian Reply

To the Editor,

Although anonymous letters normally warrant no reply, the unfounded allegations concerning my supposed preoccupation with Russian graduate instruction at the expense of undergraduate students ("Russian Revelation," ASP, Nov. 19, 1971, p. 6) deserve correction. During my first six weeks at SUNYA, the Slavic Department restructured its Russian undergraduate course offerings and has submitted extensive program revisions to the Curriculum Committee. An examination of the revisions would reveal:

1. Next year there will be 28 Russian undergraduate courses offered by the Department in stead of the 18 listed in the 1971-72 Undergraduate Bulletin.

2. Students enrolled in the revised initial two-year sequence of 104, 102, 201, 202 at five credits per course will attain the same level of proficiency at the end of three semesters as they currently achieve at the end of four. (The new four-course sequence will require almost 50 percent more instructor time than the old.)

3. The number of classes offered next year on the undergraduate level will remain approximately the same as this year (177 per semester), while graduate course offerings will be reduced by half (from 10 per semester to 5).

4. I personally intend to set up the curriculum for the Elementary Russian course (RU 105) next fall and will participate in the teaching of all sections.

In view of the above facts, each reader can decide for himself whether or not I am committed to the improvement of Russian undergraduate education at SUNYA.

Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures.

Endangered Species

This newspaper has long been in the forefront of demands for more communication at large, impersonal Albany State. Yet, one of the frustrating things about such a stand is the apathy which greets it. Try to start any movement away from the status quo and you'll see what we mean: nobody listens, nobody cares.

Another major complaint is that in this university, no one seems to be willing to take on responsibility. This also frustrates communication, and leads directly to the kinds of apathy we've been talking about.

If you're one of those people concerned with communication, or if you've a problem that seems to have been "buckpassed" through the normal channels, we've got the place for you, and you'll be doing a favor to the community as a whole by just showing up. About once a month, President Benezet moderates a University Forum, to which everyone is invited, to talk over problems, new developments, and recently, the budget crisis.

It strikes us as strange, with all the demand for open communication and more access to those in power, that the past Forums were so poorly attended. Indeed they have become an "endangered species" in their quiet failure, when the serious people could contribute so much to the community understanding of the operation of the university.

This coming Wednesday, for example, the much-discussed Environmental Studies program, hard hit by the budget crunch, will be examined. This program had the wide support of the student body, yet how many students will show?

Is the most common shared feeling of mankind that of selfishness? It seems to us that people at this university are always ready to complain, except when someone points out the proper avenue for complaint. We scream about a problem, then shut off a reply with "I'm too busy right now to do that."

If you're one of the many with time to complain but no time to work on answers, try a little position for a change. You can begin it today—or at least next Wednesday.
To The Editor,

1971 there was an opinion expressed: by Michell Frost. We feel compelled to respond to that opinion. As members of the Sweetfire staff we are very sensitive to the tendency of certain people to attribute Sweetfire to Jack Scherl. Jack Scherl does write only. Jack is a member of our staff but definitely not the only member. It is not Jack's paper.

Mr. Frost talks about anti-intellectualism in the new left. He supports his statement by using a lot of dialogue, but definitely not the only type of literature. It is political 'advisors such as Henry Kissenger. It is a mistake to say the university — it is already political. The university is and always has been a research center for a political purpose. The university has always been a political body in the new left. To me, I hope it is acceptable to use the term political. It is based upon no ascertainable theory of any type that I've seen, it is a dumbed down community with all the conveniences of a small community right here on campus. There are places for refreshment and entertainment, a place to go when you are sick and a police force to protect, to lyceic poetry, invertebrate zoology. British history, and the rest.

Listed below is a simple statement to a bolded opinionnaire.

1. In our opinion, is this course trying to teach you anything worth learning?

2. In your opinion, are you learning what the course is trying to teach you?

3. What suggestions do you have for improving the course?

Opinionnaire

To the Editor:

I have been informed that my students are to be given a form to fill out. The purpose, I am told, is to let my students express their opinions about my teaching. I have some serious reservations about that opinion being sought and elicited in some random and selective manner.

If the form is similar to those used in some of the other social sciences, it is based upon an ascertainable theory of teaching, but on some stereotype of what someone else thinks teaching ought to be like.

Ordinary academic freedom, I would assume, implies the freedom to hold particular assump- tions about teaching and to teach and to elicit opinion about teaching in a manner consistent with those assumptions. In my opinion such freedom is at least as vital as the freedom to hold particular assumptions about methods for inquiring in Success!

To The University Community,

As you probably all remember, there was a dinner at Pont on Nov. 10. We received a check for $1750 to the Annual Fund. This is absolutely unbelievable, exceeding any expectations we all had. Not too many people can do it. Free breakfast and brunch program and day care for children of the senior ghetto here in Albany at planned. We can't thank you all enough—everyone who gave up his dinner or donated money to the center. Special thanks, also, to everyone who worked with us on the fact.

If you would like any information on Peter Jones and his work in the community, or would like to come down to meet our real next little people, please get in touch with us. Thanks so much again.

On Grockking Matakos

Andre Malraux, in one of the major literary speeches of our times—LE MUSEE IMAGINAIRE—defines the modern artist as he who is no longer in harmony with his milieu and the external "reality" around him. His art is in revolt, refusing to exalt simply or to entail a civilization which causes him to see as hollow. Man's only worth therefore is in his faculty to create an inner world and an artist is he who successfully transposes this inner reality on canvas. His artistic fecundity is the result of this awareness of his inner world but also of the frightening solitude of the pain that accompanies it. The "artist maudit" has no longer any higher values with which to identify but those he creates himself. In the final end that world—the world of art—will have more reality for him than the "external" one, and it will have more beauty as well; for, as Mallarme put it: "A flower described is more beautiful than a real flower." Modern man in his frantic grasp for a value higher and outside of his inner self certainly can find no "answers" in modern art as defined above. Yet, the Marxist and the Communist "Marxists" insist that man may have lost all absolutes, but he must still believe in "Man"—not the individual, inner, unstable self but the "social self." Man's value lies in his altruistic and altruism; life and art, Matakos has a personal vision which lacks the flavor of the modern artist. Matakos lives in harmony with Man and with what he has created so far. He carries in him a tradition—that of Classical, Byzantine, and modern Greece—which he does not try to "strangulate" through his medium. Having embraced its best elements first, he has integrated it through his personal experiences, and he has succeeded in creating a personal style whose uniqueness is not defined negatively, e.g., against an ethos, culture, value.

Those of us who talked with the artist would sense that this man's inner world was a tranquil one in which the struggle between the self and society has been solved and thus a Balance in the sublime classical sense had been achieved by this twentieth-century Greek.

Ha Bailar

Coming to SUNY Albany this weekend of Dec. 4 is a Latin happening as the dynamic combination of Willie "Wolfgang" Ramirez, our own Latin WSUA announcer and trumpeter in the to-be-performing Paul Ortiz Orchestra, the University Concert Board and P.R.O.L.E., are sponsoring a series of star-studded Latin music events. The events will be held nightly in the Campus Center Ballroom. To be offered by our "Across-the-border" brothers and sisters will be entertainment for all tastes ranging from Puerto Rican folk-singing and dancing and political rapping to Latin Soul combos. Flattening brothers and sisters of all walks are invited to come and check out this cultural happening as it should surely "amaze, fascinate, mar." Having this dynamic weekend on Friday night at 8:30 P.M. at the C.C. Ballroom is "La Protesta," featuring trumpeter-arranger Tony Ponon on Rico Records (sponsored by Concert Board and Willie Ramirez). This hot new Latin combo, being composed of the former members of two other great Latin groups, the Ricardo Ray and Pete Rodriguez Orchestras, won first prize in Panama for the best Carnival band, won the Latin-American "Gold Medal" and won a Gold record for their hit "Bandera," a romantic song. Then on Saturday night, the sounds of "Paul Ortiz and Orchestra Son" (Orchestra Soul) featuring Willie Ramirez himself and leading trumpetist-singer, Paul Ortiz, this band, while new, is also composed of members who have played with top Latin bands "before coming home to roost." The band, which was recently produced a successful LP recently released on Ghetto Records, the title being "Son Los Que Son" and including a hit single played often on WSUA radio, "Tender Love." This group again will follow an afternoon of political rapping by Carlos Feliciano, "independientista," revolutionary socialist and recently released political prisoner, who will be featured twice. This exciting event is for no charge. Wrapping things up on Sunday afternoon at 1 P.M. in the C.C. "Cave" will be a Puerto Rican folk review known as "Puerto Rican Singers," doing much lyrical "Island" singing and dancing. Both of these last two weekend events will be sponsored by P.R.O.L.E.

SUPERMAN 247

"MUST THERE BE A SUPERMAN?" the cover-featured lead story, is the type of Superman tale DC should have been turning out years ago, Thank God Elliot Maggin and, in the second story, Denny O'Neil are doing it now. In the aforementioned lead feature, the Guardians of the Universe, Green Lantern's superiors, try to make the Man of Steel realize the fact that, by helping earth, he's, in a sense, hindering them, as the Terrans won't do things for themselves. Of course, when Superman does try to do all people in distress, he discovers that, for the most part, these people could have helped themselves, but would rather have had a superman do it for them.

The premise of the story, then, while totally-realistic, as a dramatic presentation, is, however, not entirely logical, That is, the Guardians look at Superman as an outsider... an alien, Maybe so, but since Superman's adopted place of birth (Earth) is earth, it is logical for him to channel all his efforts into aiding his "fellow" athenians, just as, say, an American doctor would, in a foreign country, cure a sickly child. The circumstance of the people Superman helps in this story bears out what the Guardians were saying, but by and large many of the things the Man of Steel does cancel himself out by "normal" human beings.

Still and all, "MUST THERE BE A SUPERMAN?" is a job well done, Swan and Anderson once again do a smooth, slick, refined "SUPERMAN" (with some excellent "special effects").

Oh yeah, and a new Led Zeppelin album—"Led Zepp IV," I guess, since it has no title or anything else—except four Ielandian tunes on the sleeve notes. Heavy, man, not even Grand Funk could top that. Rans home right away, rummaged under the sink to find the proper chemical accompaniment for this thrilling experience, put the disc on the stereo, tapped the fuses, and blue smoke off! Oh Black Dog—such stunning originality! What brilliantly inventive use of the Universe, the disc's one main body knows that Jimmy Page is a motherfucker but this! Unbelievable! Oh yeah! Dig those subtly shifting textures that Bonham and John Paul Jones supply. Into the music. Could anyone else sound as organic, as virile, as Robby Plant? Why, I'll bet that right now half the pubescent chicks back in Brownsville are flying flat out on their backs, squirming around in ecstasy to the warm, moist thrills of that voice.

Rack and Roll! Who else could have thought of such an unusual, such an inventive title, but the Zepp? And dig, there's some soft, acoustic material too. Poetic, even surrealistic at times, but most of all, the Lady, and Lady, Light, even.

That should silence those foolish- mouished critics who are always putting the boys down for being too loud and specific. They're really pretty, ya know.

"There's good and bad in the air... I mean, could even Blitzen top that?"

Yeah, and there's even some real original rhymes in there, too. Amazing, isn't it, how four white English leddies could recapture the primal responses of a black music in the Mississippi delta of years ago as the floods come and the levees creak and you know it's gonna break. Didn't I tell ya they got soul. You can become this magnificent, your faithful correspondent promptly dug up his collection of old Led Zepp from the beginning, from "Led Zeppelin" to "II." Oh no, didn't he once write for Francis Ford Falcona? I mean, would trust this stuff to anyone, like that. Maybe so, but as you know, Francis Ford Falcona. I don't know whereabouts you've got to The Tempestlong long ago and after a while, I swear I could even hear "Led Zeppelin IV" rising up out of my primal subconscious. Before I could quite capture those sounds and pull all real coup for the ASP by reviewing an album that hasn't even been recorded yet, my head was suddenly wrenched. "Who da fuck took the DRIANO again?" The sink is plugged up as we need it, ya know? I was spied, my passport to chemical ninjas made away, and my ears beat in by assassins inventing about plugged drains and I was gonna go... I was outside in the cold an walk five miles to the nearest store... I know what that shit does to your brain cells? As if I gave a damn.

That is, if earth is imperiled in the Fantastic Four strip, then Thor on Man, and the rest of the Marvel heroes will be a farce sooner, Sue, Johnny, and Ben, Keeping in mind this idea of interaction between the heroes of different magazines, Roy Thomas, along with Gil Kane, use MARVEL PREMIERE as a vehicle for showcasing the Warlock, better known as Him of FANTASTIC FOUR numbers 66 through 67. The other half of the so-called "character interaction" is old Thor/Hulk guest star, the High Evolutionary.

In this issue's "AND MEN SHALL CALL HIM WARLOCK!" Thomas and Kane wove an interesting tale of how these two characters meet and, in doing so, set the premises for future strips, Gil Kane clearly put a little bit more than his minimum effort into "WARLOCK." His fine layouts, better panel designs and angles, and proficiency of execution all really enhance the plot, not to mention the added plus of Dan Adkins' pencils. Unfortunately, Thomas chose to tamper with formerly-essential elements of the High Evolutionary-Hulk story, rather poorly, I might add. Looks like Roy wasn't satisfied with the conclusions of the plot of continued a way of bringing the High Evolutionary, along with his Men, back in his old outfit. Also interesting to note is that Marvel normally, as mentioned above, concerned with crossovers, seemed to deliberately shave the Warlock on a duplicate earth, devoid of the other Marvel heroes. This will all the same, this strip, will bear watching in the future.

The Albany basketball season kicked off on a sour note Wednesday night, as Williams held on to a lead they had sustained the entire game to defeat the Danes. The differences between a tough loss and a good win become evident upon examination of the statistics. Williams outshot Albany from the field, and foul line, and outrebounded the Danes. Despite the stats, the game was almost pulled out by a determined Albany team, but the time just ran out.

Williams took an early 9 point lead and held it for three-fourths of the first half. However, Williams regained the lead 45-38 by dominating the offensive boards. The culprit was center Les Ellison, as he came alive for Williams with 8 quick points, and helped provide the teammates with 2 or 3 shots at the basket at a time. At the other end of the court, Albany was getting just one shot, and things began to look dim. At Williams upped it to 63-52 with 7:15 to go in the game. But then Williams made a key move, as Byron Miller hit 2 free throws with 3:40 left in the game, and with that, the score closed to 66-62.

Two baskets were exchanged, and the Danes found themselves with the ball, trailing 70-66 with 1:38 to go. They hurled downcourt, shot, missed, but with inspirational rebounding, managed 5 or 6 attempts at the hoop to no avail. Kenny Bate made a free throw for Williams with 30 seconds left, to close the gap to 2.

Swissair is sorry to inform you that after February 1, your parents can afford to ski the Alps with you.

Please don’t blame it all on us. But after February 1, anybody of any age can fly to the Alps for almost youth fare prices.

What used to cost them $480, will cost $250. Which means a lot of people that wouldn’t think of coming over, are going to be coming over. But they won’t be coming until February, and until they arrive, there’s plenty of seats on the planes, plenty of room on the lifts, plenty of beds in the hotels and plenty of young Europeans on the slopes.

From $250 Swissair will fly you to Zurich or Geneva, the closest you can get to the Swiss, French, Italian or Austrian Alps without actually landing on one.

We want you to take your January vacation in resorts like Andermatt, Davos, St. Moritz, Chamonix, Zermatt... Everyday we’ll be bringing in students from all over the U.S. for one last Alpine blast.

Besides the skiing there’s skating, riding, running, snowmobiling, climbing, tobogganing, dancing, swimming, even gambling. All with people your own age, if not your own country. (An American is as exciting to the Swiss, French, and Italians as they are to you.)

If you’d like to be part of all this, write Swissair for more information and write dad for $250.

Recycling: "Valuable" Junk Means New Products

A further breakdown of urban refuse shows that the nation generates about 400 million tons each year. This includes 60 billion cans, 36 billion bottles, 55 million tons of paper and paper products, 4 million tons of plastics, over 1 million abandoned automobiles, mountains of demolition debris, 180 million tires, and countless millions of tons of refrigerators, stores, TV sets, and the like. The cost to collect and dispose of urban solid waste alone is about $6 billion annually. Where does it all go? About half is burned in some manner, and the other half is buried in landfills and dumps, with the values it contains lost forever.

MINERAL WASTE

The second category, mineral waste, is larger - about 1.7 billion tons each year. The production of 1 ton of copper results in about 500 tons of waste earth and rock. Additionally, a past accumulation of about 23 billion tons of mineral waste is scattered across the nation. The final category, agricultural waste, is even more awesome - over 2 billion tons annually including farming, slaughterhouse, and animal waste. An average-sized steer generates about 10 tons of solid waste each year.

HUMAN WASTE

Furthermore, over 100 lb of solid waste daily is generated for every man, woman, and child in the country. By 1980, this is expected to increase to 150 lb per day.

The importance of secondary metals - which represent the only growing metal resource - can best be assessed by comparing the gross production of major metals with quantities reclaimed from secondary sources. According to production estimates, over 50% of the lead, 40% of the copper, 45% of the iron, and 40% of the aluminum used are reclaimed from auto graveyards across the nation. In addition, automotive scrapage has now reached a rate that one barrel can provide over 10 million tons of ferrous and over 1 million tons of nonferrous metals including copper, aluminum, tin, lead, and zinc. An estimated 12 million junk cars still remain to be reclaimed from auto graveyards across the nation. In addition, automotive scrapage has now reached a rate that one barrel can provide over 10 million tons of ferrous and over 1 million tons of nonferrous metals annually. Nearly 450,000 tons of aluminum was used for manufacturing cans, lids, and caps in 1970, only a small percentage of this was reclaimed.

Would you believe this barrel is valuable?

The Odyssey of a Vietnam Vet

by Al Senta

The red hair rests carelessly on his shoulders. The beard is full. The tie-dyed shirt, bell bottoms and brown hair could belong to any street person.

But Ron Podlaski, 25, is not just anyone. For two years ago, Ron was a Sergeant in the U.S. Green Berets. And now, after a painful disillusionment, he is a regional coordinator for "Vietnam Veterans Against the War."

"I went into the army to be important," he explains. "I was like Normie Nobody. Well, I had to be somebody. I had to stand out...I wanted to go see what it was all about, win some medals, and look good."

So Ron went down to his draft board, enlisted, volunteered for the U.S. Special Forces and duly in Southeast Asia, and learned the rigors of basic training. Unfortunately, he possessed a police record, a fact his superiors overlooked until the last moment. Upon completing his training, they denied him clearance because "I'm not going to spend the rest of my days in the Special Forces...I want to be somebody. I had to look until the last moment."

Upon completing his training, Ron Podlaski was to be confronted with a fact he would have to face. "We planted sensory devices...it was an intelligence thing." It was also the first time Podlaski was to be confronted with death. "I was scared, really scared. I wasn't just being void of dying. But I realized I had never really lived...Combat didn't prove you were a man. The real thing, the reality of it, was that when I died, I had to look back and see if I had ever lived."

This realization, placed against the context of what was happening in Southeast Asia, proved to be the first crack in a previously solid middle-class consciousness.

In all, Ron Podlaski did not like what he saw. He did not take part in some of the sensational atrocities others had committed ("We were too busy for that sort of stuff!") but his testimony at last summer's Winter Soldiers In-vestigation in Garden City, Long Island concerning the mutilated bodies, burned villages, and murdered prisoners that he saw as a common sight aroused his moral indignation. It is a memory he prefers not to dwell on. He prefers not to dwell on the reality and an almost general craving to build something better."

As for himself, Ron Podlaski prefers not to dwell on. He prefers not to dwell on. He prefers not to dwell on the reality and an almost general craving to build something better."

"The guy I lived with said to me, "In all honesty, you're just being soft. And I'm crazy. So if I can convince the government to give me some money, what the hell, I'll take it."

What remains now for Ron Podlaski, ex-Green Beret, is an altered status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country. His status as a neutral country.

"Ron Podlaski is not one to be easily outdone. He wrote to Congressmen; badgered his superiors, and see if I had ever lived."

Ron Podlaski was to be confronted with a fact he would have to face. "We planted sensory devices...it was an intelligence thing." It was also the first time Podlaski was to be confronted with death. "I was scared, really scared. I wasn't just being void of dying. But I realized I had never really lived...Combat didn't prove you were a man. The real thing, the reality of it, was that when I died, I had to look back and see if I had ever lived."

This realization, placed against the context of what was happening in Southeast Asia, proved to be the first crack in a previously solid middle-class consciousness. He was thought to be a security risk.

Job Bias Revealed:

Job Discrimination Fought at SUNYA

by John Fairhall
An ASP Feature

This university is energetically seeking to hire, for the first time, Blacks, other minority group members, and women. Prompted by a federal government study done here last April, the university has implemented an "Affirmative Action Program" to avoid a pattern of job discrimination.

The study made by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare uncovered specific instances of job discrimination. For example, as of Fall, 1970, of 2,231 full-time employees in all categories, 2,136 were white. Discrimination in employment, promotion, and salary was also documented (as of June, 1971).

-43 percent of the faculty has tenure; minority group faculty members, however, comprise less than one percent of the tenured faculty.

-There is only one minority group member in a position of assistant dean or higher. Women, however, make up 18 percent of the total faculty and are found mainly in the lower level positions of instructor and assistant professor.

-There is a marked pattern of salary differentials between men and women in nearly all job classifications. Women, for example, make up only 24 percent of the full professors, a position held almost exclusively by men.

-The Affirmative Action Program is intended to increase representation of minority members and women employed. (Minority members are defined as Spanish-surnamed, American Indian, Afro-American, and Oriental.) The vice presidents of Management and Planning, University Affairs, and Academic Affairs oversee most of the hiring that this university does. They have been asked to submit their plans for hiring minority members and women during the coming five years. These plans are the critical part of the university's program to end discrimination in employment.

PLANS ANNOUNCED

John Hartley, Vice President for Management and Planning, has announced a policy of one-on-one hiring of minorities, affecting all of the administrative staff. This means that for every white (nonminority) member of the administrative staff, a minority group member is hired.

The guidelines for the Office of Student Affairs (the largest employer in the University Affairs division), under Dean Neti Brown, state that no fewer than three new and vacant positions be filled with minority members. Additionally, one of every three positions is to be filled by a woman.

BUDGET CRISIS

The severe budget crisis we are experiencing has hurt the personnel department in three ways. First, it prevents the creation of new positions. For example, the university has recently hired a minority as director of alumni affairs. "Attrition represents the only dependable action to get minorities into the program," he states. Second, minority members and women were hired, but discrimination in the practices, governing tenure, promotion, and salary may not be corrected so readily. The hiring plans for the next five years represent a strong effort to change the white male oriented pattern of employment. The year-by-year increase in the employment of minority members and women will be monitored and, if necessary, increased. In Calhoun's opinion, if unemployment inequality in the procedures covering tenure, promotion, and salary continue, the Affirmative Action Program will be effective.

The university has always recycled high-quality scrap, all components of 10 scrap automobiles procured from auto-wrecking yards, scrap processors, and insurance salvage firms. All material gathered between 1964 and 1965 - was dismantled, separated into various components, and analyzed. Alternative means and methods of stripping and dismantling the cars were employed to determine the fastest and most practical technique. Derived from the information obtained, a representative junk automobile consist of nonmetallics. These were 32 lb of copper, 54 lb of zinc, 51 lb of aluminum, and 5 lb of iron. The remaining 600 lb consisted of nonmetallics.

In a cooperative with the Wasatch Metal and Salvage Co. (Salt Lake City, Utah), the bureau developed rock wool insulation which is simply trying to put it back where it belongs.

The new incinerator's principle attraction is its capacity to work at a rate of 15 scrap automobiles per hour. The stack gases generated by the minerals and phosphorus furnace slags, and mine and mill tailings will be used in the production of wall tile and other materials. Processes have been developed by the bureau scientists to convert asbestos mining waste, glass, rubber, and metals into raw materials for manufacture of wall tile and other products. The bureau is working on recovering and reusing waste materials that are being ejected in the stack gases generated by the minerals and metal industries during smelting and chemical processes.

The Bureau of Mines considers solid waste as resources, not as wastes. It is not inconceivable that the present-day mine tailing dumps, municipal landfills, and junk car graveyards may be looked upon in the future as "man-made mires" for minerals whose natural ores have been depleted, or remains in deposits that can be mined only at greater cost than required for recycling waste.
