DO YOU LIKE POETRY?

Too many people do not appreciate an important branch of literature - poetry. We know that many of us think of poetry as a group of meaningless words which have been written by one termed a "sissy." The beautiful is here symbolized in a manner which holds a certain charm and an intriguing form. For one to say that he does not like poetry is as absurd as for him to say that he does not like books. There are many types of books for him to choose from: adventure, travel, romance, mystery, and more. There are also various types of poetry.

Published weekly by the Crimson and White staff at the Milne School, Albany, New York.

Terms: $1.00 a year, payable in advance. Free to students paying student tax.

This week's Crimson and White is issued by the Junior Class.

Perhaps you have read Keats' enthralling "Ode to a Nightingale," and do not appreciate its intangible witchery, or perhaps you do not like French verse forms. Don't say that you "can't bear poetry!" Read Chesterton's rolling "Lepanto" with its grand rhythm, or "Sea Fever," or "The Highwayman."

EXAMS

As usual, Milne students are fuming about the hot weather and the vast amount of homework they are given to do each night. However, believe it or not, we have a much easier school life than pupils in a great many other schools. One school in Albany is having exams this week. Aren't you glad that you have until June 15 to start yours?

Some poems take time to be understood. They make one stop to think about their meaning. Different poems have various moods, just as people have. Some make us sad, some make us happy, just as others have the power to make us inwardly warm and bright.

However, there are only fifteen school days left, in which to study and you should make the most of them. After all school is your job at present, yours to work at and do your best with. It is meant to prepare you for your future life in business and in the outside world. No one who decides to shirk instead of work in his school preparatory to expected graduation can get anywhere in a business that requires brains. How much easier it is to do review homework when it is assigned to you than to cram a year of studying for history or Caesar in two nights before exams. In the end it is better by far to have passed exams with flying colors (or even just to have passed) than to have to take the subject over again--and all because of a few evenings free from study!

Almost everyone likes parodies and humorous verse. The other day, I read one of the funniest parody anthologies I've ever read. I laughed to myself all during my library period about it. It was written by Carolyn Wells - you know how clever she is - and is a fine example of her humorous works. She wrote the reply to the famous "Purple Cow." This is in the style of Geoffrey Chaucer, and it begins:

"A maide theyre was, a-milken of a Purpel Cowe --- "

You'd laugh about that poem, too.

Our own library at Milne has a great many books on the various types. A book of your favorite kind of poetry is as good and as interesting reading for a rainy afternoon as any fiction book you would care to read. Why not come out of that poetry-proof shell of yours for a minute and see what the new world of verse holds for you in a new sort of adventure. Try it, won't you?

How to be a Hermit
 - Will Cuppy

Did you ever feel like getting in a row boat and rowing? Has our conventional life ever bored you? With spring fever in your soul, you will appreciate Will Cuppy's eagerness to start a fresh page in the book of his life history by becoming a hermit. But even in this free life, many difficulties present themselves. For his stay in solitude, the author chose a small island in Long Island Sound. It was a convenient spot in the summer for wide-eyed children of tourists would throw morsels of food at the strange recluse, but winter - ah, there was the season! Starvation was possible or even likely. Only Mr. Cuppy can describe to you the feeling of being snowed in, with only a small can of beans in the larder.

If you are in a low state of mind over the coming regents, may I suggest this truly enjoyable book. Humor flows easily from the prolific pen of this amiable author. It will surely touch the spot.

How to be a Hermit may be found in the Milne library.

CLEAN SHAVIN'*

Haskins (to Zabin, playing with window cord): Whatcher doin'?

Zabe: Knotting.

Weighty questions of the week

1. Does Bob Ely eat grape nuts or wheaties for breakfast?
2. And Bill Tarbox - would waterwings be an appropriate graduation present for him?

* Because these jokes have no wisdom.
