Sellers Helps Out Danes In More Ways Than One

Albany pitcher Ed Sellers is an outgoing person as well as an excellent athlete. The Hartwick baseball team cannot argue about the athlete part, but they don't exactly see eye-to-eye with Sellers.

They hate me. I'm not sure why, but they do. During the game, they kept on yelling things at me."

Actually, Sellers does know the reason for the dislike. "This was my second one-hitter against them. I threw one against Hartwick last year too. The same guy got the hit both times."

After his sparkling performance in the first game, Sellers could not rest on his laurels. In the second game, coach Burlingame pencilled in Sellers name for the designated hitter spot. "I couldn't believe it. I wasn't up to bat in a game for two years. I didn't even take batting practice, so I felt tense up there."

Sellers struck out badly his first time up, but connected for a long out to centerfield his next time up. In the sixth, with Plantier on second base and down by one run, Sellers was instructed to bunt. "I couldn't remember the last time I'd bunted. Not for a long time, that's for sure."

Sellers laid down a perfect bunt, sending Plantier to third, from where he would score the tying run on the next play. The sweep was in the making, thanks to Ed Seller's "hated arm" and "inexperienced

Larry Scorzella, the newest Dane, promptly doubled Nelson home, arming Sellers with the only run he would need. Scorzella turned out to be the hiting star of the opener, doubling home another Albany run in the third inning.

With Sellers having little difficulty containing the Hartwick bats, the same could not be said for the Albany batters. The Danes picked up their final run in the sixth, with Chris Siegler up and the bases loaded. Siegler chalked up an RBI the easy way, waiting out a base on balls to send Grimaldi in from third.

Pitching into the seventh inning, Sellers showed no signs of tiring and finished up strong. With the big lead. Sellers threw strikes, and a strikout, pop-up, and groundout was the best Hartwick could do.

For Sellers, it was a masterful effort allowing Hartwick one scant hit, a line-drive single past Scorzilla at third in the third inning. The first victory of the spring for the talented Dane hurler gave Albany their maiden win of the spring season, as

Italy May Negotiate For Moro's Life

ROME (AP) Italy's ruling Christian Democratic Party has indicated it might modify its refusal to negotiate for the life of former Premier Aldo Moro, kidnapped by terrorists a month ago, but the Communists urged the government to remain firm. Christian Democratic leaders met for three hours Sunday to discuss the announcement from the Red Brigades terroris organization that a "people's court" had sentenced Moro to death, A statement issued after the meeting said the party, while "aware of our dutie. before the nation" was "anguished about the life of (Moro) and therefore of the humanitiarian level we feel that this life must be spared by all juridically possible and legitimate means." The party, of which Moro is president repeatedly rejected demands by the Red Brigades through letters written by Moro for the release of jailed terrorists. Fifteen of them are on trial in Turis on charges of sedition. However, the Christian Democrats never have ruled out the possibility of buying Moro's freedom with ransom money from his

Talks Called to Avert Nursing Home Strike

NEW YORK (AP)Private mediator Eric J. Schmertz called both sides bac together Monday in an attempt to prevent a continuing nursing home dispute from erupting into a new strike. Officials of the Metropolitan New York ome Association and Service Employees Local 144 wer summoned to a midtown location that was not made public. Peter Ottles president of the local, meanwhile scheduled a meeting of his delegates for the p.m. Tuesday at the Americana Hotel to report on the new crisis resulting from refusals by employers to pay a negotiated wage increase until highe Medicaid reimbursement rates are effected. The state stepped into the new dispute last Friday, threatening to take over the nursing homes, in which 17,000 elderly patients felt the impact of a four-day stride. That strike was ended April 7 by recommendations made by Schmertz, serving as a lederal mediator. Schmertz said Monday that, as arbitrator of the new contract he plans to expedite examination of the finances of the 84 nursing homes that are members of the association or follow its pattern. The purpose will be to see if their Medicaid rates are adequate to cover operating costs

Lost Nuclear Device No Cause For Alarm

NEW DELHI, India (AP) Prime Minister Morarji Desai said Monday that a nuclear monitoring device was lost in the Himalayas in 1965 during a massion carried out jointly by the United States and India "with the approval of the highest political level of the government of India at the time." But the prime ainister told Parliament there should be no cause for alarm about possible radiation poisoning. In a 1,200-word report to Parliament, Desarconfirmed the basic details of an American magazine srory published last week which outlined super-secret expeditions into the world's highest mountains in the 1960's to plant devices to monitor missile development in China. The device's power unit, containing two to three pounds of plutonium-238 in "leaktight capsules," was left behind in a blizzard about 23,000 feet up Mount Nanda Devi, Desai said. It could not be found the following spring because of an avalanche, he said. "It unfortunate that nature intervened to present for the future, as we now find it, a continuing source of apprehension and anxiety." Desai said. "However, as far as I see, no cause for alarm on grounds of health or environmental hazards exists '

Did I want a nickle bag of grass? He eets me midway on the steps, pulling out a little manila envelope from his beige shoulder bag. "Five dollars," he smiled. One tooth was missing in his lopsided grin. One lace was untied on the Pony sneakers that had JACKIE written across the yellow tips in red Magic Marker.

"Do you want this?" he pushed the envelope at me.

No. I said. Do you want some lunch? We walked to the Burger King on 82nd Street, I ordered a coffee; he ordered a Whopper, coffee and apple pie. I took out money but he pushed my hand away. He'd pay. A roll of thick bills came out of his didn't pay with the bills. He counted

Island's Good Rats 'Rat-On'

By AL BACA

ithin the past few years there has been a rising trend originating in Long Island and gaining national rominence. Blue Oyster Cult and Billy oel are just two examples of Island artists who have gained national notoriety. The Good Rats is another ong Island band striving to make it big with a national following. As part of their method for taking their music to places which are not "Rat Cults," they played a one night gig at the Hullabaloo on

In a way it was not surprising to see that here were a lot of Rats fans in the udience that night, given the number of Islanders who go to school in the Albany area. perform such popular numbers as "Does was too low. Playing a mixture of songs songs as "Dear Sir," and "Victory in Make You Feel Good?" and "Injun Joe." Of course, the Rats fans in the audience went wild, but what was really surprising to see was that everyone else was getting into the music as much as the diehard fans. This was probably due in part to the very personal stage presence of the band and also to the use of all the "Rat" paraphanalia used by lead vocalist Peppi Marchello. This included the traditional wooden baseball bat which Peppi played as a guitar, a garbage can filled with rubber rats which were thrown out into the audience, and a wooden toy guitar which Peppi played during the second set. The band is sued to being on audience, so when the audience reacts favorably to their songs, they play better and longer. This was the case on Sunday

From the beginning of the night, it was obvious that Peppi wnated to start a oneto-one relationship with members of the Starting off their first set with "Taking audience. He took requests from the fans, and also raised the volume of the sound from their new album and their previous two albums, the Rats continued to build up an aura of energetic excitement in the audience that no one ever expected.

Peppi introduced members of the band during the song "Coo Coo Coo Blues." Drummer Joe Franco received a big round of applause when it was announce that he was from Albany. Guitarist John Gatto, bassist Lenny Kotke, and lead guitarist Mickey Marchello were equally well received even though they were from Long Island.

After the introductions were over, the Rats finished off the first set with a few can filled with rubber rats. He began throwing them out to ecstatic members of the audience. The black rats became cherished possessions of those lucky enough to catch them as they went sailing through the rafters of the club.

After a break of about 45 minutes, the Rats came back onstage to rejuvinate the excitement created during the first set.

From Rats to Riches, the band went on to system when someone complained that it The band showed their versatility on such Space," both from the new album. Peppi Marchello demonstrated his vocal talent

What made the evening even more enjoyable was the fact that the members of the band seemed to be having as good a time as the audience. At one point in the show, Peppi picked up John Gatto and put him on his shoulders. Gatto continued playing guitar for a few minutes on top Peppi's shoulders while Peppi went strutting around the stage.

By the end of the second set, the audience was still waiting to hear more of songs from their new album. It was at this the Rats, so the band was cheered on for an extremely personal basis with the time that Peppi brought out his garbage an encore. As most people know, bands usually plan to come out for at least one encore, so no one was really surprised when the Rats came right back on stage to play a couple more songs. What was surprising though, was when the Rats left the stage after their encore. What happened to the audience at this point is hard to explain. It was obvious that the Rats did not plan on coming out again, but the place went wild all the same. At first, people were merely yelling and applauding for more music. This built up to people banging beer bottles and glasses on the tables. The Rats still weren't coming out, so people began to bang tables and chairs on the floors. It got to the point where it seemed as if the roof was about to collapse. Then some authority-type person came out to say that there would be no more music. This was obviously the wrong thing to say since the people went even more crazy.

It was at this time, when the noise level in the club resembled that of an SST, that the Rats came out for a second encore. By the crowd's reaction, one would have thought that Jimi Hendrix had been risen from the dead, but the Rats took it all in stride and went on to play another two songs, finishing up the evening with "Boardwalk Slasher," and a frenzied handshake session. The band captured the musical hearts of everyone in the club that night, and to witness it was an experience one will never forget, for it's really great to follow a band from their beginnings and see them finally reach the start of stardom. If the Rats get this type of reaction when they tour in other states, and if they get enough airplay on the airwayes, then it probably won't be too long before we see another Long Island

They Work So You Have Something To Do

allowed four stipends to go through his office and be paid to students who had been holding schools improtant extra-curricular

The heads of the Torch, AMIA and WIRA, and Albany State Cinema all will finally receive some bread for the jobs they've been holding down all year. The SA President, Vice President, Controller, and Central Council Chair have been receiving stipends since the beginning of the year.

This payment is the result of one year's work towards deciding who should get what for doing which job. The heads of groups who felt they deserved a stipend were forced to go before a tribunal called the SA Stipend Committee, where those requesting stipends have to assure those wielding the purse that they had been good boys all year, putting in their hours and working hard to make this place a better school.

According to the Stipend Committee Chairman, the policy for deciding who gets how much "was left vague to insure flexibility so the people who are doing the work will get

This meant that in the middle of a hard year's work at the head of one of our campus' major groups, the student leaders had to take time out to account for and document the time they have been putting in over the course of the year. Some of these group heads came away from they had asked for, and perhaps expected They had made plans for a steak dinner to celebrate the last concert, but will now have to settle for a Genny in the Rat.

These days it seems hard enough to get people to participate in extra-curricular activities on campus, let alone find someone to run them. Most people are too busy studying, or want to go home for the weekends or maybe sleep. Few people are dedicated enough to put in the time it takes to run one of the large groups on campus.

Year after year, a stipend had been set, in the groups, budget before the year started so that those contemplating running one of these groups knew exactly what he was in for and what he was to get back.

This year, they had to take the job and wait and see what kind of stipend, if any, those at SA were willing to give to them.

While you may argue that one doesn't take that sort of job for the money, and that one wants to head a group becuase he is interested in it, some sort or reward should be awarded to compensate for all one must miss to take on

To the Editor:

We would like to draw the University unity's attention to Financial Aid Hearings which will be held in the Campus Center ballroom at 2 p.m. on Thursday April 20. The hearings are being held to begin the process of addressing the numerous problems tudents face with the financial aid system. both on the campus level and on the state and

Essentially, students in the late seventies are bearing the brunt of problems which are national in scale, but local and direct in their effects. Declining enrollments, combined with inflation and a decrease in the emphasis placed on public higher education, have made it politically easier for members of the legislature to justify cuts in all educational services, and particularly financial aid. The negative attitudes that students who wish to attend the public colleges face is shown by the aundred dollar increase in tuition for the State University in 1976, the imposition of tuition for the first time in CUNY in 1976, the cuts of almost 50 per cent in EOP stipends in the last four years, and the hostile attitudes students face when confronting state financial aid

We all know of these problems. Many of us have experienced the extreme frustration that comes when one's aid has been cut, and is forced to take a second job, take a high-interest loan from the bank, or even threatened with dropping out of school for a semester. We also know of the frustration of trying to get in touch with financial aid officials who give us the run-around, of lack of understanding or sympathy to student problems when applications have to be made, and when inadequate aid is received.

What are the solutions? This, of course, is not an easy question to answer. The groups that are sponsoring these hearings seek to provide a forum in which both the general problems on the state and national level are presented, and students can follow with their own complaints about how the financial aid vstem has affected them.

A financial aid hearing was conducted by the students at SUNY Binghamton on March 16, which received considerable attention in the community, and left both financial aid officials, legislators present, and students feeling that a significant increase in understanding of the problems had been achieved, and the stage set for better relationships in the future. Most of all, attention was drawn to the problems of funding education for both the poor and the middle class, and a committment to finding

In order for this trend to continue it is necessary that all students attend this hearing, and voice their grievances.

To the Editor

On March 31, I received a ticket for parking in what has become locally known as "Writ' rip Reidy's Corner" (a legal parking slot in Mohawk Tower's lower lot, the dimens which have repeatedly confused officer Reidy during the past semester). Later that oon I filed an appeal for relief, and or Monday I received a notice from the traffic division dated Saturday, April 1, 1978 stating We have identified you as th owner/operator of the vehicle bearing the license plate number(s) shown herein: Plate No. 646-ABC, covering the period Spring 1976. A 'hold' has been placed on you

The occurrence of these two events in such rapid succession seemed to imply some causal relationship, and I felt that I was being harrassed for filing the appeal. Apparently as a means of discouraging traffic ticket appeals the division immediately initiates a search of stray matching technique connects in any remote fashion the appellant with a few previously unpaid parking tickets. A subsequent check determined that plate 646-ABC is the registration of a 1957 rock quarry grader currently operating in Herkimer County. My last name possibly matched the first name of the vehicle's operator, or maybe

With the subjective identification or traffic fines, it seems likely that one could continue to be unexpectedly charged with any number of tickets that the department cared to for payment of fines by the traffic division carry no indication of what ticket numbers are being paid for.

Writing out a book or two of traffic tickets a day, or skulking about with a new radar gun are certainly tasks that entail little danger, and are perhaps the most efficient ways to maintain a non-combative stance, yet, if only this security force's zealous pursuit of traffic infractions could be directed into more realistically constructive areas (such as catching some burglars or even a vandal or two), we might all have something of a positive nature to salute these officers with instead of a chuckle up our collective sleeve.

To the Editor

I'm writing to the ASP because I believe it's a good medium to express my grievance especially since it involves school policy.

On Monday our bus service undertook what I consider an unfair and unwise change. The administrators who favor this new policy (of having express Wellington service) leads one to conclude that they probably live down there. My complaint is that the bus service is now exhibiting "preferential" treatment to Wellington students. What about the rest of

I personally live off North Allen and this new "better" service only magnifies my own and many others' present situations. To be specific, anyone living above Partridge (closer to Campus)probably never get to a class that starts at 8:10, 9:10, or 10:10 on time. Countless times as many as four buses just pass me and others by too full to stop. Is this fair? Do these same administrators add special buses for students in my position? Well the answer to these questions is NO! So why do they come up with policies that only make things worse. What's even more frustrating is now to have half-filled Wellington buses pass you by. If you live

return bottles

To the Editor:

Does anybody remember returnable bottles? Taking the "empties" back to the store to get your deposit back? Where did they go? For that matter, where did clean water and breathable air go? And why is energy getting so expensive? For the past 20 years, the United States has become increasingly wasteful of natural resources and energy, shifting from ecologically sound returnable soft drink and beer containers to "no deposit-no return bottles and cans. In most stores the consumer can no longer find beverages in returnable

Before the New York State Legislature is bill that would bring back the old returnable container system, resulting in less air and water pollution, less litter, and conservation of energy. This bill would require a five cent o be put on beverage containers in New York State. A mandatory deposit law, by providing an incentive for the consumer to return bottles and cans for re-use or recycling, would help alleviate the problem of wasteful energy consumption and environmental radation. For example, a refillable glass bottle used 10 times requires less than one third the energy needed to manufacture a com bottle system will save nearly one per cent of all energy, 2 per cent of steel, five per cent of aluminum and 40 per cent of glass nationwide

Vermont, Oregon, South Dakota Michigan, Maine; and most recently, Connec ticut, have passed bills similar to the New York bill, that have proved to be successful in not only reducing litter, the use of raw materials, and energy use, but also in in-creasing the number of jobs and decreasing beverage prices.

Does a mandatory deposit on beverage containers sound good to you? There are things you can do to help this bill get passed. Write a letter to or visit your legislator

In a time where polution is a major problem and energy is getting scarce, a mandatory It's worked in other states; why not New York?

no party

Last Saturday, Dutch Quad was supposed to see the "biggest" party of this year on the upper level of Stuyvesant Tower. However after attending and working at this affair I have to question the attitudes of our Tower Steering Committee and its leader.

For those unfamiliar with this func-

12th through 21st floors' lounges each had a little something different (casino, beer, and mixed drinks) to offer the well-deserving partiers who payed $1.25 to get in. Wha started as a good idea ended on a bad (and early) note. All the mixed drinks were gone before 12 o'clock with the beer following soon afterwards. I had signed up to work the 12-1:00 shift tending bar on the 18th floor. When I went down to help out I found that everything was gone! After making my way through a crowd of disappointed faces, I wen up to the Penthouse to see about some beer. was asked to help pour, which I did, and found that the keg I was working on was the last one. Believe me, there were a great number of thirsty people waiting for a cup when that dreaded sound of an empty tap took place. Since many don't go to a party at exactly 9:30 (many arrive around 11 or so) it resulted in an early nighter for many.

Granted it was very difficult to estimate the proper amount of alcoholic beverages for such a large party. However, when I told the nittee chairman about the situation with the beer, and suggested that he call the Rathskellar to request a few more kegs, he snapped, "Hell, I don't care. People stopped paying a half hour ago."

I think the TSC had an obligation to the people already at the party. The kind of thrifty attitude that he displayed was disgusting, showing no concern for his fellow students, and the party itself. For a party that was advertised from 9-?, where the question mark was intended to be when YOU wanted to stop partying, instead, was determined by the errors of its organizers.

awareness day

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend the ASP on their articles about the physically-handicapped here at SUNYA.

As a student-attendant and participant in last year's Awareness Day, I would like to extend a personal invitation to the SUNYA community to join us in the Campus Center Ballroom on April 19 between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. and in the gym for a wheelchair basketball game at 7:30 p.m.

Come try a wheelchair or a cane. As I found out, it is an eye-opening experience you'll

Change at Draper

The alarm clock rings. You smother it with your pills w and turn over; can't gaining that blessed state of unconsciousness known as sleep. Half an hour later you become aware that something is moving around underneath you and it's not that special someone you saw over the weekend. Removing the pillow allows the shrill ound of the alarm clock to snap you into instant awareness

It's eight-thirty. You've got half an hour to get down to the Legislature before your semblyman starts asking, "Why hasn't Joe Schmoe started his filing yet?"

With only two parts of your three piece suit buttoned, you race out of your apartment onto North Allen, running like the wind toward Washington. The Wellington Bus appears on the horizon. "Thank God," you cry, only to watch the bus oom past, the driver pointing to the "Express" sign in the window.

The students who rely on the buses for transportation—those of the Alumni, off campus, and Wellington persuasion—have recently been sujects of an experiment called the "Wellington Express." Designed to ease the lives of our Wellington cousins, the Express has met with mixed reactions.

Praise is widespread from the Wellington 175. No longer must they greet the sunrise in order to make that nine a.m. accounting class. No longer are they pushed off a Wellington bus by students riding to Ontario.

Yet as in every experiment, yes, even successful experiments, there is always room for improvement. As in the scenerio depicted above, there exists a small number of students who are suffering from the experiment; those students who work either full or part-time down at the Legislature. For many, the biggest attraction of SUNYA, indeed in many cases the very reason that one selected an Albany over a Buffalo or a Binghamton was the opportunity to be near the state capitol.

For those who work at the Legislature and don't live within easy walking distance of Draper Hall, the flight downtown in the mornings can try the patience of a saint. In recent mornings, students hurrying to get downtown have had to wait for a Draper bus, catch that, wait for the Wellington bus (which due to the small number of Wellington buses can seem like an eternity) catch that, and finally wind their way to the LOB. Walking would be faster, but who wants to walk in ties and high heeled shoes?

The Wellington Express is dynamite for the Wellington students, yet it has seriously nampered the movement of a smaller but equally important segment of the student populous. The answer seems simple. If we cancelled the Express going downtown from seven a.m. to ten or eleven, we could make life easier for the legislative interns and downtown community service workers without destroying the benefits of the Express o our Wellington breathren.

Former SUNYA President Emmett Fields spoke strongly about this university's committment to public policy and the need to work with the Legislature and the city of Albany. Acting SUNYA President Vincent O'Leary stated at the beginning of the year that he was not going to scrap the concept that the three components of Albany-the city, the university, and the capitol-could interact successfully.

Let's prove that it isn't all rhetoric. Let's help encourage students to move out into the community. There are enough green buses to provide satisfactorily for the transportation needs of both those at the Wellington and those off campus and Alumni Quad residents who participate in educational activities downtown. All that is needed is a little more planning and a few revisions. When the Bus Grievance Committee meets this week to review the Wellington Express we urge them to consider how the needs of all the students might best be met.

"Though I'm an Army Nurse, I can also pursue outside interests like dress-designing and salling.
"One of the pluses of Army Nursing is the nature of the nurse/patient relationship. I don't treat patients like numbers. I follow their progress. I visit them after the acute part of their illness is over. They are so appreciative. It's really part of a nurse's job to help the patient through an illness.

Potsdam retaliated with two runs of their own in the fifth. A home run, walk and triple parrowed the Danes' lead to 7-4, and brought relief pitcher Paul Cohen to the mound to start the sixth, replacing the freshman Bittker.

"Jimmy was tiring," explained Burlingame. "He had thrown a lot of pitches in his five innings."

The fireworks were not quite over Bruce Kaczmarek walked, Chris Siegler was up next, and the Dane shortstop showed surprising power Siegler's hit proved to be the game nner, as Potsdam rallied for three sixth inning runs. Two hits and the last of Albany's six errors produced the scores. Cohen held on to pick up the save for Bittker by retiring Potsdam quietly in the seventh.

"In weather like we had, the players can't get loose," stated burlingame. "The bitter cold was responsible for many or the care.

Big innings were popular in the se-
