MOVING-UP—AND OUT

The ceremonies of tomorrow will be regarded with inescapable sentiment by the members of the four classes, particularly the seniors. For the others it will herald the realization of hopes and ambitions and a part in a beautiful pageant. But the seniors realize that it will be the last time they will move up as undergraduates and that they must follow the inevitable tradition of College and life—to move on in order to make place for others.

But the seniors are not going to feel overwhelmed with grief. True, they will regret the loss of pleasant College contacts and particularly the curtailment of friendships made at one time or another during the four years. Aside from this, there is an eagerness to enter the world and strive in hand-to-hand combat with all of its difficulties. The exuberance of youth and its confidence in its strength are assets sorely needed by the world today. State college will send out reinforcements of nearly three hundred fighters to aid a cause that is wavering between victory and defeat. And that addition will make itself felt in a decisive way.

ON DEBATING OXFORD

Never before in the history of State college has such an unusual opportunity in debating presented itself to State college men and women. This June will witness the graduation of three women and four men who have taken active parts in intercollegiate debating. Their places will have to be filled by members of the under classes.

The field will be entirely open. Only freshmen and sophomores have given any promise to step forward and fill the vacant places. Juniors should be eager to take advantage.

The debate schedule for the coming year is one of the finest ever to be tentatively scheduled. Oxford university of England, one of the most sought after teams in the world, will come to State college under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America. For any college to schedule this team is a distinct honor. For the men who will represent their alma mater and cross tactical sword with opponents of such renown is to reach the highest aim of every intercollegiate debater. When the Oxford team does come here it will be the first appearance of representatives of the famed university in the Capital District. The proposed schedule includes in addition contact with outstanding local and state colleges and universities.

There is additional reason for great enthusiasm and interest in the fall. This college has accepted the position of host for the members of the New York Association of Coaches of Intercollegiate Debate. The annual meeting of that body will be here and will give State a powerful impetus toward leadership in upper New York intercollegiate debate.

These are manifestations of growing interest and participation in debate here. They must be appreciated and furthered in every possible way.

SENIOR MEMORIAL

The choice of the senior class for its graduation memorial to the College will be a useful one. While a scholarship or prize of some kind would have been exceedingly desirable, the addition of some five hundred dollars toward the alumni athletic field is certainly deserving of commendation.

Both men and women athletes of the College have been forced to seek fields from Albany organizations and have often been handicapped by lack of a College field. Any step which will hasten the elimination of this difficulty will be regarded in a desirable light.

The fund has almost reached the point where a site can be purchased, partly in cash and partly with promises to pay. This additional sum has taken up a precedent of other classes and has revived a good one for succeeding groups.

TO THE NEW BOARD

The last story has been written and the last proof passed into the hands of the printer as the 1932 board of the STATE COLLEGE NEWS hands over its privileges and responsibilities to successors of proved abilities. It brings to a conclusion issue twenty-eight of volume 16 and the undergraduate journalism careers of the retiring board and staff.

It must be remembered that the responsibilities of journalists are equalled only by their opportunities and that in assuming charge of the NEWS, the new board takes in hand a potent instrument for doing service to the association. It must be kept non-partisan, always seeking for the advancement of causes needing support, whether current opinions approve or not.

BOOKS:

PARENTS IN EDUCATION; EXPRESSION IN AMERICA

By G. P. R.

(For Sale in Co-op)

Parent Education. By the President's Committee on Child Education. Century Publishing Company, New York. 357 pages. $2.00.

President Hoover fulfilled his pre-election promises by appointing a committee to investigate child health and development. This volume is section three of the findings of that commission and sets forth its views on parent education.

The problem is taken up from three angles, the types, contents, and methods of parent education. New principles of educational procedure, stressing the parent-teacher-pupil relationship, are outlined in detail. The modern parent will find himself in the position of being compelled to bring up his children in the manner which the dictates of rapidly changing society demand, the editors of the book declare.

This volume, from the viewpoint of advancing educational procedure, does little. It presents no new philosophies and does little to modify old ones. Its aim is not to present new ideas, however, but to strengthen and clarify the position of the old. As a piece of research work, it is outstanding. It has material gathered from a wide variety of sources on a subject where philosophies are quite intangible and where scholarly research is at a premium.

Contributions of individual leaders in the field of education and educational research are of great interest. The list includes such names as: Dr. Edward C. Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work; Sidonie M. Gruenberg, director of child study association of America; Flora M. Thurston, executive secretary, National Council of Parent Education; and Dr. George D. Stoddard, director, Iowa Child Welfare Research Station at the University of Iowa.

Expression in America. By Ludwig Lewisohn. Harper and Brothers, New York City. $1.00.

Mr. Ludwig Lewisohn adds considerably to his reputation as a critical analyst of American literature by the publication of this volume of analytic and prophetic writing.

This work was unmeasurably difficult, trying as he was to produce a volume of criticism in a field already encumbered by numerous poorly written works and lighted by a number of really scholarly and brilliant ones.

The work is historically as well as literally complete. It begins with a discussion of the literary productions of the Puritans and carefully selects the names of all writers who have any shadow of claim to a place in the hall of American writers.

Every critic must or necessarily have some philosophy by means of which he justifies his opinions. Some insist upon the painting of things as they are, but Mr. Lewisohn seems to indicate that his creed calls for the ability of a writer to cast off the shackles of traditions and background and strike out for teachers far above these things. His comments and elections would seem to back the opinion. But by the process he very clearly shows the evolution of the American writer and of his output. The American, he says, is a composite of literary experiences.

Students of American literature will read with surprise the positions accorded some of the American writers when they have counted as really great Herman Melville, the subject of a literary boom in recent years, is relegated to the background with Pound and, while the comparatively minor Theodore is recalled from his isolated, dogmatic exile to a position along with masters of really outstanding achievement.

A particular challenge to modern writers comes from the pen of Mr. Lewisohn who sees in the present stage but another step of moral evolution preparing the United States for a really Golden Age in literature.

College Publications Record Evolution Of Annual Moving-Up Day Since 1914

By FRANCES W. KELLER, '32.
SENIOR ASSOCIATE EDITOR, STATE COLLEGE NEWS

A tradition of nineteen years standing will be continued tomorrow when 1,200 students move up. The first record of a Moving-up day is found in the 1913 Pedagogue, which includes in its list of events for the year "Moving-up" day scheduled for May 2.

The next year, a more detailed account of the Moving-up ceremonies was included in the 1914 Pedagogue. They began at 11 o'clock with brief addresses by the president of the College and the president of the senior class. After the singing of college songs, the classes moved up, and marched out-doors.

In the first file of the NEWS for 1916-17, there is recorded the first "tapping" of Myskania by the original body selected by the faculty. At that time, the junior class marched by the original Myskania, who pulled the members chosen out of line as they passed. The Moving-up exercises were conducted earlier than usual that year because so many men were leaving for training camps, and included the presentation of the senior class gift which was a contribution to the Athletic Field fund, started by the class of 1916.

In 1918, the Moving-up day program began with the freshmen-sophomore banner rush the evening before Moving-up day. The object of this rush was for each class to get its banner to the highest possible point on the campus.

That year, the exercises began at 11 o'clock and included the class speakers, the presentation of the senior class gift, and the senior class president's speech. An unusual feature of the day was the unveiling of a College Honor Roll of 50 men who were in the service, by a member of Myskania. The new Myskania was "tapped" in the same way then that it is today. The chairs of the absent members of Myskania were covered with flags. The planting of the ivy and the class stunts were also conducted in the morning. In the afternoon, the classes, led by the senior class, marched to Ridgefield park for interclass athletic events; and in the evening there was the step sing and the interclass sing.

The next year, a tree memorial for State college heroes and heroines was conducted, following the Moving-up exercises. In anticipation of Memorial day, trees were planted on the campus. Dr. Leonard Richardson, former head of the Latin department, was the speaker for the occasion.

In 1921, the events of the evening preceding Moving-up day included, in addition to the banner rush, a tug-of-war between the girls of the freshmen and sophomore classes. The regular exercises included the presentation of News pins by Dr. A. R. Brubacher, president of the College, and the formation of class numerals on the campus.

Other additions to the Moving-up day program in the next two years include a Pedagogue board dinner the night before, the awarding of the Quarterly prizes for the best prose and poetry, and the award of athletic letters.

In 1924, the Pedagogue conducted a dinner for seniors the night before Moving-up day at which time they distributed the yearbook to seniors. In the banner rush afterwards, the sophomores, when they saw the frosh banner flying from the roof of Draper hall, attempted to lift their banner from the roof of the science building with the aid of balloons, but the frosh stole their balloons so the plan didn't work.

The next year, the banner rush was changed to a pole rush as we have it now. At 11 o'clock, on Moving-up day, the Dormitory fund began a $400,000 campaign with a parade downtown to the Plaza. Dr. Brubacher, Mayor Hackett, and Governor Smith led the parade. Each class, instead of having a class stunt, had a float in the parade, which also included two bands. On the way back uptown, the classes sang college songs on the steps of the Capitol.

In 1927, the Home Economics club conducted a benefit dance the night before Moving-up day for the Mississippi Flood Relief fund.

On Moving-up day, 1928, the cornerstone of Page hall was laid. Dean William H. Metzler officiating in the absence of Dr. Brubacher who was then abroad. In the cornerstone, there were placed copies of the four college publications, a copy of the catalogue and the morning paper. Dr. Richardson was the speaker.

In nineteen years, Moving-up day has evolved from exercises lasting two hours to a program lasting from 7 o'clock the preceding night to midnight of Moving-up day itself. It is the annual "All College" day, but it has also been the occasion of many advances in State college history.

College House Dance To Be Saturday Night

College house will conduct its annual spring formal dance in the Lounge of Richardson hall Saturday night at 9:00 o'clock. There will be a formal dinner at the house preceding the dance.

Dr. Donald V. Smith, assistant professor of history, and Mrs. Smith will be the chaperones. The music for the dance will be furnished by "Gordie" Randall and his Hotel Van Curler orchestra.

Phillip Ricciardi, '34, is general chairman of the dance. The committees include: music and programs, Charles Robson, '34, chairman, Lloyd Moreland, '32, dinner, Donald Benedict, '34, chairman, Anthony Dorcino, and Robert Robinson, sophomores; decorations, Robert Robinson, chairman, George Ketchum, Robert Meyer, sophomores; floor, Ormond Guyer, '33, chairman, Theodore Eckert, '34, and Samuel Spector, '33; refreshments, Frank Young, '33, chairman, and Fay Blinn, '32.
