"NICOLAUS COPERNICUS"

Nicolaus Copernicus (1473-1543), the man who "stopped the sun and moved the earth," stands at a pivotal point close to the origins of modern science. Concerning the motivations of his achievement and its early reception, mythology abounds. Professor Gingerich will give a new (and hopefully more accurate) version of the events; he will distinguish between the cosmological and technical aspects of Copernicus' work, and show how Tycho and Kepler developed a new awareness of physical reasoning in the 16th century.

The second meeting toward organizing a Northeastern New York Chapter of the American Section of ISES will be held at 10:00 A.M. on Saturday, May 8th, in the Lecture Hall (Building No. 7, see attached map) at the Adirondack Community College in Glens Falls.

A good program has been planned to precede the business and committee meetings. Luncheon will be served. We shall be able to see the large exhibit of energy conservation and solar products the College is displaying for the weekend, which includes thirty industries and student projects.

Early registration is urged so that definite arrangements for luncheon can be made. Pre-registrations mailed no later than April 30th are $5 each, including luncheon. Late registrations, mailed after April 30th, will be $7. Luncheon cannot be guaranteed for late registrations received after May 5th. Registration for those who are not staying for luncheon will be $1, and may be paid at the door.

Please fill in the registration form and return it with your check, which should be made payable to Atmospheric Sciences Research Center, with the corner marked "Solar Meeting." They should be mailed to:

Ms. Linda Sikorowski
Atmospheric Sciences Research Center
SUNYA - E. S. 324
1400 Washington Avenue
Albany, New York 12222

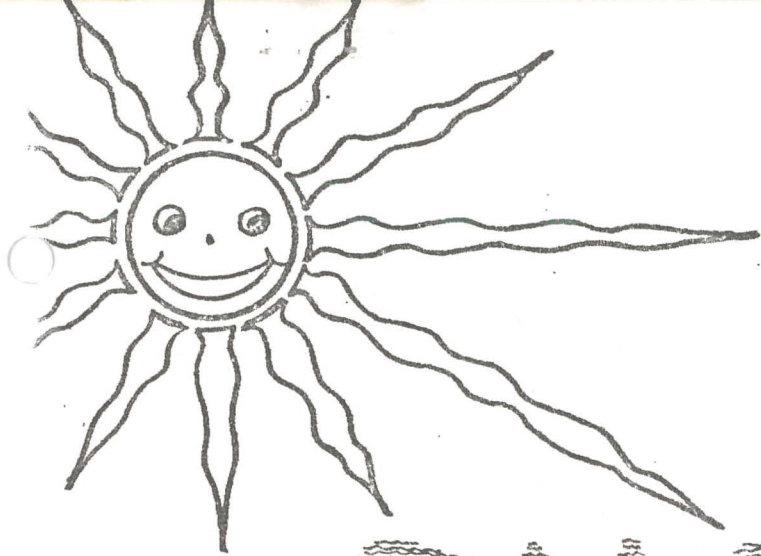

We hope you will attend and note how important solar heating and energy conservation will be to our families and to many businesses, professions, and local governments. The New York Times of March 12, 1976, reported there are now 187 solar heated private homes in the United States -- up from less than 20 in 1972. New York State has 7, but Massachusetts has 19 and Vermont has 8.

We hope you will attend.

ALUMNI HOUSE TO BE DEDICATED SATURDAY

The new Alumni House, located on the west side of The University at Albany campus, will be dedicated at 3 p.m., Saturday (May 15), as part of the activities of "Star Spangled Alumni Weekend 1976." The Alumni Affairs Office will move into the new facility on May 27. The office has been located in the Administration Building.

Among participants in the dedication ceremonies will be Albany Mayor Erastus Corning or a representative; University President Emmett Fields; Alumni Association President Eunice Whittlesey; Henry Madej, chairman of the building committee; Nathan Kullman, president of the board of directors, Benevolent Association; Katheryn Fitzgerald, chairman of the 1976 Annual Fund; Joy Longo, chairman, Alumni Council; Carl Walters, Town Supervisor, Guilderland; and representatives of the Niagara-Mohawk Power Corporation, Atmospheric Sciences Research Center; building architects, and contractors.

Niagara-Mohawk and ASRC were involved with development, installation, and operation of the building's unique solar energy system.

Alumni Weekend activities will begin Friday afternoon with a Bicentennial presentation chaired by Professor Emerita Martha Egelston and featuring Harry Price, history, Ray Falconer, Atmospheric Sciences Research Center, and other faculty members. The title of the program is "A Revolutionary 60 Minutes."

TWO FROM ALBANY HONORED FOR EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

Two University at Albany associate professors are among 87 State University of New York faculty on the 64 SUNY campuses chosen to receive this year's Chancellor's Awards for Excellence in Teaching. They are Stephen Brown, biological sciences, and Josiah Gould, philosophy.

Most of the 15,000 fulltime faculty in State University are eligible for consideration for the awards, which provide one-time cash awards of $500. Selection is made by a university-wide committee and recommended by undergraduate students, faculty, and administration. This is the fourth year for the awards, based on easy accessibility to students, constructive attempts to help students attain academic excellence, demonstrated mastery of teaching techniques, and scholarship in the field of discipline.

Dr. Gould, who joined the Albany faculty in 1969, is a graduate of Lynchburg (Va.) College. He holds advanced degrees from Florida State University (M.A.) and Johns Hopkins University (Ph.D.). Prior to coming to Albany, he had taught at the University of California Santa Cruz, Claremont (Cal.) Graduate School, The Rockefeller Institute, and American University. In 1970, his book, The Philosophy of Chrysippus, was published by the State University of New York Press.

Dr. Brown earned his B.S. at George Washington University, and his M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. He has been a member of the Albany faculty since 1967. He also has served as visiting assistant professor at Michigan and at the University of Oregon.

The State University Research Foundation provides the funds to support the Excellence in Teaching award program.

DEWEY ELECTED TO FELLOW POST BY AMERICAN GEOPHYSICAL UNION

The American Geophysical Union, a scientific association of more than 12,000 members, has elected Dr. John F. Dewey, professor of geological sciences at The University at Albany, to the grade of Fellow. This is one of the few honors that AGU offers; it is awarded a member in recognition of their acknowledged eminence in some branch of geophysics. Dr. Dewey has been recognized by the Union for his distinguished research in applying the concepts of plate tectonics to the geologic record.

At no time does the number of fellows exceed three percent of the entire membership.

Dr. Dewey, considered a world renowned authority on continental drift, the formation of ocean basins, and mountain building, joined the faculty at Albany in 1970. He came to Albany from the University of Cambridge where he was an associate dean and Fellow of Darwin College. He is a graduate of the University of London and of the University at Cambridge.

He was among six faculty members and administrators at Albany selected as Outstanding Educators of America for 1975.

UA SCHOOL OF NURSING HOSTS COLLECTIVE BARGAINING WORKSHOP

The University at Albany's School of Nursing's Continuing Education is hosting a workshop Unit/on "Negotiating and Living with a Collective Bargaining Agreement" on Thursday and Friday, May 20-21, at the Hyatt House across Washington Avenue from the uptown campus.

The workshop is planned for directors of nursing service and other top level administrators in health agencies who are facing/living with a collective bargaining contract. The workshop is designed to provide participants with increased understanding of labor relations in personnel management and greater skill in the art of negotiation.

Content will include the legal basis for employee negotiations; the rights of employees and employers; leadership styles; role-strain of the director of nursing as a member of the negotiating team; practice in simulated negotiation sessions and the handling of grievances.

Leaders of the workshop will be Muriel Poulin, professor and coordinator of programs in nursing administration, Boston University and Michael Noonan, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Registration fee is $65 and must accompany the application.

Further information concerning the conference may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Judith G. Whitaker, Director, Continuing Education, BA 121, School of Nursing, State University of New York at Albany, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany, 12222.

RICKEY PORTRAITS AT THE UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY ART GALLERY

Eighteen portraits of Edith Rickey, the wife of sculptor George Rickey, make up a fascinating, didactic exhibition at The University at Albany Art Gallery, May 9-30.

Peter Morrin, director of the Vassar College Art Gallery and organizer of the exhibition said, "This exhibition has been an especially interesting one for me to work with because I have been struck by the broad range of the kinds of possible images contemporary artists can bring to portraiture. In this exhibition the range includes caricature, portraits with quite exact delineations, psychological portraits, satirical portraits, and photographs."

The chronological range in the exhibition goes from a 1947 portrait of Mrs. Rickey done in St. Louis when the German artist Max Backman was living there, to a 1974 portrait by Oskar Kokoshka. The latter portrait is thought to be one of Kokoshka's last works, possibly his last, as he lost his sight during that period.

Among other artists whose portraits of Edith Rickey are included in the exhibition are David Hockney, Phillip Evergood, Arnold Newman, and Donald Mochon. There are two works in oil on paper by Mrs. Rickey's husband.

The exhibition may be seen during the gallery's regular hours, 9-5, Monday through Friday; 1-5, Saturday and Sunday.

ALBANY PROFESSOR, STUDENT STUDY FEAR-AROUSING INSTITUTIONS

Internal Revenue Service, doctor/dentist, hospital personnel, politicians, and police are among the most fear-arousing institutions as perceived by residents in the Capital District, according to a study conducted by Associate Professor Nan Lin and graduate student Walter Ensel, both of the Department of Sociology, The University at Albany.

In the survey, conducted last summer and fall, 413 residents in a representative sample of the households in the Tri-City area were asked to indicate the degree of nervousness they felt toward 32 social institutions. The data shows that institutions in the spheres of economy, security, medical services and politics induce relatively greater degrees of nervousness from the residents than do other institutions. The findings were presented by Dr. Lin and Mr. Ensel at the Conference on Community and Policy Research, held at the Albany campus, April 30.

The survey also shows that all segments, rather than any specific segments, of the population express nervousness toward these institutions. However, different segments do show different degrees of nervousness toward specific institutions.

For example, those persons with higher incomes tend to be more nervous than others toward the IRS, while those in the lower occupational categories are uneasy toward medical institutions and personnel. Politicians induce greater nervousness among the younger residents, the white residents, and residents with large families. The unemployed residents are nervous toward the social security personnel.

ALBANY PROFESSOR, STUDENT STUDY FEAR-AROUSING INSTITUTIONS

Professor Lin and Mr. Ensel speculate that individuals, in acquiring services and resources from these institutions, provide information about themselves in return. The information gathered by these institutions on the individuals then may be manipulated and used by these institutions in further exchanges with other institutions and the individuals, resulting in the inequality of exchange and power differentiation. The nervousness of the residents toward these institutions is an indication of the individual's awareness of the power differentiation, the researchers believe.

Since these institutions exist to provide important services to the residents, Dr. Lin and Mr. Ensel emphasize the need to improve the manner in which personnel from these institutions interact with the public. One method, they suggest, may be by providing the individual with information about the institution and its personnel in the exchange.

Nan Lin, Department of Sociology, The

ALBANY HISTORY PROFESSOR AWARDED GRANT FOR STUDY IN NORWAY

H. Peter Krosby, professor of history, The University at Albany, has been awarded a $1,500 travel grant from the Norwegian Foreign Ministry and the Norwegian Information Service in the United States. He will spend part of the summer in Oslo, Norway, doing research on Norwegian World War II history.

Dr. Krosby, a native of Norway, also has been invited to attend an international symposium of historians in Oslo, August 15-19. The symposium, sponsored by the Norwegian commission on Military History, will have as its topic, "The Great Powers and the Nordic Countries, 1939-40."

Dr. Krosby was born in Norway and attended elementary and secondary schools there. He served in the Norwegian Army in 1948-49, then emigrated to Canada in 1952 and became a Canadian citizen.

He earned degrees at the University of British Columbia and from Columbia University. Before coming to Albany in 1968, Dr. Krosby had been chairman of the department of Scandanavian studies at the University of Wisconsin and had been on the faculty of Fairleigh-Dickinson University, Rutherford, NJ.

His primary professional interests are in 20th Century European diplomatic history, the history of World War II, and Scandanavian foreign relations.

ALBANY TO HOST "AMERICAN FAMILY" INSTITUTE

The University at Albany will host on Wednesday (May 19) one of the five sessions of the 1976 Institute of the New York State College of Human Ecology, Cornell University. The theme of the 16th annual institute is "The American Family: Who Cares?" The seminar at Albany will begin with registration at 1 p.m., followed by a three-hour program in the Campus Center Ballroom.

The featured speaker will be Urie Bronfenbrenner, professor of human development and family studies at the College of Human Ecology, and one of the nation's foremost authorities on child development and the family. In 1975 he received the American Educational Research Association award for distinguished contributions to educational research. He also was co-chairman of a delegation to the first United States-USSR seminar on early childhood education.

Following Mr. Bronfenbrenner's address there will be a panel discussion among other faculty members of the College of Human Ecology, and a general discussion.

The Human Ecology Institute has served as an annual forum for identifying contemporary issues of concern to New York State since 1961. Last year more than 1,200 persons attended the three regional sessions. This year's expanded schedule includes stops at Rochester, Binghamton, Oakdale (L.I.), and Tarrytown, as well as Albany.

Further information may be obtained from county Cooperative Extension offices.

The Voluntary Action Center (VAC) of Albany will hold its annual dinner Tuesday evening, May 18, at The University at Albany Campus Center Ballroom, beginning at 5:30. Awards will be presented to winners of the art and essay contests sponsored by VAC throughout Albany County schools. Among the presenters will be Albany Mayor Erastus Corning.

The theme of the art and essay contests is "200 Years of Volunteerism." Winning entries are on exhibit at the Albany Institute of History and Art through May 22.

In addition to the awards ceremony, the evening's agenda includes an address by Mary Burke Nicholas, director, Women's Division, Office of the Governor, State of New York. Also, certificates will be awarded to those individuals who have completed training for potential board members in VAC's Affirmative Action/Impact Program. Newly-appointed members of the board of directors will be introduced.

The May 18 dinner is part of the celebration of National Volunteer Week, May 16-22, intended to make people aware of the contributions to individual and community betterment being made by millions of volunteers nationwide.

FULBRIGHT-HAYS SCHOLARS CONVENE AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

"Goals of Higher Education in an Interdependent World" will be the topic of the four-day Eastern Regional Conference for Visiting Fulbright-Hays Scholars at The University at Albany, May 31-June 4. Some 45 visiting scholars from throughout the world, who are being hosted this year at colleges and universities in the Eastern United States, are expected to attend the conference at the university's new Alumni House.

Albany Mayor Erastus Corning and university President Emmett B. Fields will welcome the conferees Monday evening, May 31, following registration, tours of the Albany campus, a reception, and dinner. The program will begin Tuesday morning with the keynote address, "The Purposes of Education," to be delivered by Stephen Bailey, vice president, American Council on Education, at 9:15. Smaller groups then will discuss his address.

On Tuesday afternoon, five workshops are scheduled simultaneously. Sherman Spector, history professor at Russell Sage College, will lead a discussion on "Nationalism and Parochialism in Universities Around the World--What Are the Present Trends?" Paula Brownlee, Union College dean of faculty and professor of chemistry, will lead the discussion on "What Is the University's Responsibility To Aid the Preservation of Cultural Diversity?" Hilton Power, dean of Albany's College of General Studies, will serve as discussion leader for the topic, "Continuing Education Programs To Enhance Understanding of Other Cultures and World Problems." UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY NAMES NEW ENGLISH DEPARTMENT CHAIRPERSON

John Gerber, former chairman of the English department and director of the School of Letters at the University of Iowa, has been appointed professor and chairperson of the Department of English at The University at Albany, effective Sept. 1.

Dr. Gerber, a renowned scholar in 19th Century American literature, had been at the University of Iowa since 1944 and had served as its English department chairman since 1961. He has written a variety of books and professional articles, and has delivered papers throughout the world.

The new Albany academic leader also has held offices in a number of professional organizations, including the presidency of the National Council of Teachers of English and of the Midwest Modern Language Association. He recently completed a term as member of the Executive Council of the Modern Language Association and of the board of directors for Iowa Public Programs in the Humanities.

ALBANY HISTORIAN RECEIVES GRANT TO STUDY IN ENGLAND

William Reedy, Jr., an associate professor in the Department of History, The University at Albany, has been appointed a Fellow of the American Council of Learned Societies for one year beginning in July. The ACLS distinction carries a stipend that will assist Professor Reedy in his efforts to complete a volume of selected Basset Charters for the Pipe Roll Society of London. He will spend a year in London to work with original Latin manuscripts and other texts and books that are accessible only in special libraries in England.

Professor Reedy is one of only two Americans permitted to write an annotated volume of documents for the Pipe Roll Society. His scholarly work will have implications for virtually all of medieval studies, and involves the studying of charters which are, perhaps, the most important documents of the Middle Ages. Charter scholarship has been pursued actively in England since the 1890's, but has not yet been pursued as vigorously by American medievalists. The procedures for conducting the research are tedious, and include detailed study of diplomatics (the study of forms of documents), of paleography (the study of old handwriting), of chronology (dating of documents), and sigillography (the study of seals). Sealing in wax was the official means of authenticating all documents in the Middle Ages.

While he is in England, Professor Reedy will continue working on another project as well. It involves microfilming all unprinted English religious cartularies extant for religious houses founded before 1250. The effort will help to complete the British Manuscripts Project conducted by American scholars from 1941-1945. With support from the American Council of Learned Societies and The Rockefeller Foundation, an unprecedented effort was made during World War II to microfilm important English historical documents and to send them to the United States where they have been stored in the Library of Congress.

A religious cartulary is a book of charters or deeds that has been prepared by a religious foundation, such as a monastery or a cathedral. To date, Professor Reedy has had microfilmed almost 40,000 pages of such documents, covering 146 foundations. The films eventually will be donated to the Library of Congress.

In addition to his ACLS stipend, Dr. Reedy is receiving support from the University Awards Committee of The Research Foundation of State University of New York. The printing of the volume for the Pipe Roll Society will be financed in part with funds from a small grant from The British Academy. Dr. Reedy will be on sabbatical next year while he is in England.

UA SCHEDULES ENVIRONMENTAL WORKSHOP FOR JULY 18-23

The University at Albany's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation are co-sponsoring an intensive one-week environmental workshop for community leaders, local planning boards, and members of environmental councils from July 18-23. The program will be held at the Old Marble Mountain Ski Lodge located just off Memorial Highway leading to Whiteface Mountain. The lodge has been converted to the ASRC Whiteface Mountain Field Station.

Keyed to informal presentations and discussion oriented, the workshop has been chosen to assist in providing more effective local citizen action toward environmental matters. Topics to be discussed include air quality, water resources planning, land use, solid waste management, environment law, and citizen action/participation.

Among the consultants for the program are Raymond Falconer, research assistant, ASRC; Harry Hovey, associate director, Air Resources Division, NYS Department of Environmental Conservation; James Moran, Office of Environmental Manpower; Richard Kenyon, dean, College of Engineering, Rochester Institute of Technology; and Per Moberg, director, Bureau of Community Assistance.

Cost for the program is $150 which includes supplies and teaching aids, room and board at the ASRC Whiteface Mountain Field Station. Persons wishing to stay at nearby motels may register for the workshop for $25 and will receive limited accommodations for meals at the field station.

GERMAN GROUP TO VISIT ALBANY UNIVERSITY CAMPUS

A group of 25 citizens, representing the city of Wurzburg located in the northwestern section of Bavaria in West Germany, will be visiting The University at Albany campus on Friday, May 28. They will be stopping en route from Rochester, described as a twin city with Wurzburg, to discuss common problems of cities. Wurzburg has an estimated population of 118,622.

President Emmett B. Fields will host the group at an informal luncheon. Among the guests will be Albany Major Erastus Corning; Wurzburg Mayor Klaus Zeitler; Richard J. Connors, president of the Albany Common Council; John M. Spalek, chairman of the university's department of German; and James W. Hall, president of Empire State College. After a tour of the Albany campus the group will tour downtown Albany.

The University at Albany has had an exchange program with the University of Wurzburg for 11 years. During that time some 250 UA students have studied at Wurzburg and an estimated 40 students from Wurzburg have been students on the Albany campus.

Included in the delegation Friday will be several of the Wurzburg mayor's assistants, and a number of Wurzburg Councilmen, bankers, educators, and homemakers. The group's visits to Rochester, Albany, New York, and Washington are being made in observance of the nation's Bicentennial celebration.

HOLD FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, MAY 30, 2 P.M.

Excerpts from commencement address "Thoughts on the New American Era" by Dr. John C. Sawhill, president of New York University, at The University at Albany:

We in the United States have seen the end of abundant natural resources and cheap plentiful energy which brought us a standard of living beyond the dreams of most men and women on earth. The next century for America and for the world will be very different. Your generation will face three central tests. The first is to assure enough economic growth to raise the living standards of the poor, here and abroad, and to achieve this growth without undue damage to the natural environment. Second, given limited growth, you will have to create political and economic means to insure social justice, through redistribution of income, without destroying the incentives for capital formation that make growth possible at all. Third, you will have to redesign progress itself so that moral, intellectual, and political advances become as highly valued as material aggrandizement...

We need what might be called "cultural medeators"--people who can grasp the meaning of scientific and technological developments and to tell people what they hold in store, for good or for ill. Other people who can articulate human needs in terms that can prompt the necessary work by scientists, engineers, and administrators...

As problems become more and more complex, you will often find that simple questions and simple answers help best to solve them. Walk into any large organization today and ask how a certain thing is done. Your respondent could confidently and fluently explain "how" for an hour. Then ask why that certain thing is done. The answer will be longer in coming and shorter in logic...

We need more than incisive minds to solve the problems ahead for complexity is often just uncertainty in disguise. We need a new humanism, one based on some old certitudes, and one which we must embrace as citizens and insist on in our leaders...

We have come through a generation of worshipping what works yet it only takes a quick look around to see that things just don't seem to be working.

FULBRIGHT-HAYS SCHOLARS CONVENE AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

"Goals of Higher Education in an Interdependent World" will be the topic of the four-day Eastern Regional Conference for Visiting Fulbright-Hays Scholars at The University at Albany, May 31-June 4. Some 45 visiting scholars from throughout the world, who are being hosted this year at colleges and universities in the Eastern United States, are expected to attend the conference at the university's new Alumni House.

Albany Mayor Erastus Corning and university President Emmett B. Fields will welcome the conferees Monday evening, May 31, following registration, tours of the Albany campus, a reception, and dinner. The program will begin Tuesday morning with the keynote address, "The Purposes of Education," to be delivered by Stephen Bailey, vice president, American Council on Education, at 9:15. Smaller groups then will discuss his address.

On Tuesday afternoon, five workshops are scheduled simultaneously. Sherman Spector, history professor at Russell Sage College, will lead a discussion on "Nationalism and Parochialism in Universities Around the World--What Are the Present Trends?" Paula Brownlee, Union College dean of faculty and professor of chemistry, will lead the discussion on "What Is the University's Responsibility To Aid the Preservation of Cultural Diversity?" Hilton Power, dean of Albany's College of General Studies, will serve as discussion leader for the topic, "Continuing Education Programs To Enhance Understanding of Other Cultures and World Problems." Discussion leader

William Reese, professor of philosophy, UA, will lead the discussion on "University Communities in the Developing Worlds."

The keynote address at 9 a.m. Wednesday will be given by Michael Flack, professor of international and intercultural affairs, Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, University of Pittsburgh. His topic will be "Goals of Higher Education in an Interdependent World--How Do We Do It?" Again, the discussion groups will follow.

Wednesday afternoon will feature a visit to Empire State Plaza, meetings with Lieutenant Governor Mary Anne Krupsak and other members of State government, and an outing at the university's Mohawk Campus.

The conference will conclude Thursday morning with reports from the discussion groups of keynote addresses and summary statements by selected participants.

45 VISITING FULBRIGHT-HAYS SCHOLARS TO CONFER AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

The University at Albany, in cooperation with the Council for International Exchange of Scholars, will host the Eastern Regional Conference for Visiting Fulbright-Hays Scholars. The conference will be held from May 13 to June 3 in the new Alumni House.

Approximately 45 visiting scholars from throughout the world, who are being hosted this year at colleges and universities in the Eastern United States, will participate. Among the many countries which will be represented are Finland, United Kingdom, Korea, Poland, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Iran, Portugal, India, Japan, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, China, Rumania, France, Argentina, Netherlands, Denmark, Spain, Lebanon, Norway, Austria, and Israel. The scholars also represent a wide-range of academic fields, including language and literature, bio-sciences, sociology, art, archaeology, chemistry, journalism, engineering, psychology, geography, physics, law, mathematics, economics, political science, music, and business administration.

The theme of the program is "Goals of Higher Education in an Interdependent World." Two major speakers will address different aspects of the parochialism and isolationism, preservation of cultural diversity, and the role of the university in assisting developing countries.

A highlight of the conference will be a tour of the Empire State Mall and a meeting with Lieutenant Governor Mary Anne Krupsack and other members of the New York State Government. The Faculty

Wives Club at the university will provide services to the families of the participating scholars which will include visits to points of interest in the Capital District.

A university spokesman said that hosting the conference provides an opportunity for the institution to contribute to world understanding and to seek ways in which colleges and universities can assist government and other agencies to solve common problems.

UA'S SCHOOL OF NURSING TO HOST THREE WORKSHOPS

The Continuing Education Unit of The University at Albany's School of Nursing will host three workshops, beginning with the June 16-17 session on "Nursing Supervision in Long Term Care Settings." The second program, June 24-25, is "Toward More Understanding of Aging and Death," and the third session, July 7-9, is on "Performance Evaluation."

The first two workshops will be held at the Albany Hyatt House across from the university campus on Washington Avenue. The third program will be conducted in the Assembly Hall of the Campus Center. The fee is $65 for each program. Interested persons may obtain further information by contacting Judith Whitaker, Director, Continuing Education, School of Nursing, State University of New York at Albany, Albany, NY 12222.

Leaders for the June 16-17 session will be Meribah Stanton, director of chronic disease nursing, Boston Department of Health and Hospitals, and Carol Ahern, coordinator of staff development, Long Island Hospital, Boston.

The session will include such topics as purpose of supervision, theories of leadership, motivation (myths and realities), management objectives, issues in building communication, and goal setting and reinforcement.

Registrations should be received by June 10.

NURSING WORKSHOPS

The program concerning more understanding of aging and death will be led by Margaret Armstrong, assistant professor, School of Nursing, University of Rochester. The workshop will focus on ways by which nurses help individuals--including patients, themselves, and colleagues--work through the final process of adjusting and responding to losses which occur in the later and final stages of life. Applications for the program should be recieved by June 17.

The final workshop will focus on the pros and cons of performance evaluation, basis of performance evaluation, analyzing performance problems, review of measurement methodologies, and constructing a measurement tool. The program will be led by Dorothy del Bueno, associate director of nursing and director of staff education, Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, New York City.

Applications should be recieved by June 30.

Acceptance hours are 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Thursday, Friday, and Saturday; and 1-4 p.m. Sunday. The exhibition is open to all artists living within a 100-mile radius of Albany and Schenectady.

The regional exhibition is jointly sponsored by the Albany Institute of History and Art, the Schenectady Museum, and the University Art Gallery. The three institutions take turns in hosting the exhibit.

Dore Ashton, noted New York author and critic, will be the juror for the Mohawk-Hudson Regional Exhibition. Ms. Ashton will select paintings, drawings, sculpture, and prints from the entries. The exhibition, which will open on Sunday, June 27, will be shown at the University Art Gallery through August 8.

Further details on entry procedures and the exhibition in general may be obtained by calling the University Art Gallery, 457-3375.

STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIANS TO MEET JUNE 3-4 AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

The State University of New York Librarians Association will hold its annual meeting, Thursday and Friday, June 3-4, at The University at Albany. Program director for the two-day conference is Kay Shaffer, assistant librarian at The University at Albany Library. Approximately 80 persons are expected to attend.

The program Thursday afternoon will feature an idea exchange on library instruction, sponsored by the New York Library Instruction Clearinghouse. Following opening remarks by Jacquelyn Morris, of NYLIC, there will be six discussion groups. The topics and discussion leaders are "Program Planning for Library Instruction," Diane Parker, SUNY at Buffalo; "Course Related Library Instruction," Jon Lindgren, St. Lawrence University; "Library Schools and Their Relation to Library Instruction," Anne Roberts, The University at Albany; "Credit Courses in Library Instruction," Betsy Elkins, SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry; "Library Instruction for Special Groups," Ray Murray, SUNY College at Oswego; and "Library Instruction in the Community Colleges," Lillie Kinney, Onondaga Community College.

On Friday morning, the subject will be "Grants for Academic Libraries and Librarians." Addressing the topic will be Patricia Senn-Breivik, assistant dean, Graduate School of Library and Information Science, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn; John Kalas, assistant to the director for sponsored programs, SUNY Washington, D.C., office; and Sherry Goldstein, service coordinator, associates program, The Foundation Center, New York City.

SIX ARTS WORKSHOPS SCHEDULED FOR SUMMER AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

Six non-credit workshops will be offered this summer at The University at Albany under the co-sponsorship of the Department of Art (Studio) and the College of General Studies. The programs, intended for professional development, will include intaglio printmaking, metal plate lithography, raku, basic photography, a seminar on criticism: ceramic art, and procelain and white earthenware.

Registration details are available from the College of General Studies, Draper Hall 100, University at Albany, Downtown Campus, 135 Western Avenue, Albany, New York 12222 (472-7508).

The first two programs, intaglio printmaking and metal plate lithography, will be offered June 1-13. Robert Cartmell, UA assistant professor of art, will lead the workshop on intaglio techniques, while Professor of Art Tom O'Connor will lead the session on fundamental processes in the use of aluminum plates. The fee for each program is $145 for materials and instruction; $298 including room and board.

Niles Wallace, UA lecturer in art, will direct the workshop for advanced students learning techniques of the raku process, June 14-July 2. Fees are $110 for materials and instruction; $298 for room and board, as well.

The basic photography workshop will be offered June 21-July 2 by Melanie Walker, instructor in art. The fees are $110 and $298 for materials and instruction, and room and meals, respectively.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONSERVATION INSTITUTE AT ASRC WHITEFACE MOUNTAIN

FIELD STATION

An environmental conservation institute, sponsored by The University at Albany's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center (ASRC) will be held July 11-16 at the ASRC Whiteface Mountain Field Station in Wilmington. The institute is open to all secondary school teachers wishing to incorporate aspects of environmental and energy conservation education into their curricula. The course may be taken on a non-credit or in-service credit basis, with graduate credit possible for those who qualify.

The intensive, two-credit, one-week graduate course (Environmental Science 687) is a cooperative effort among ASRC, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, affiliates and branches of the American Lung Association, and The University at Albany. The institute's theme is "Conservative Use of Resources and Energy." It will treat environmental and energy conservation studies as an interdisciplinary concept. Volker Mohnen, ASRC acting director, is director of the institute.

The cost schedule includes $150 for room, board, and registration; $25 advanced registration, to accompany final application; and $81.70, tuition and fee, for those electing university credit. The American Lung Association will provide stipends to qualified teachers to cover a major ^{portion} of lodging meal costs.
