Party, Party . . .

Long ago and in another country, the idea of political parties on campus was brought up as a possible answer to student lack of interest in government. Last Wednesday in Senate, the first political party at State came into existence with the passing of the constitution of the Ped Politi-

Basically, the idea of political parties is good, and the aims although at times a bit idealistic, of the Ped group are worthwhile and necessary. However, there are a few deficiencies in this system not altogether attributable to

First, is the obvious one that the Ped party is the only political party on campus. We find it hard to imagine To the Editor: any great campaigns with only one party on campus. You can always see that the News has again failed campaign for your nominees, but without some other politito do any reporting on its own. But Mons cal slate to compete against, we're afraid elections will be with this usual lack of information as dull as in the past.

We're not necessarily in the muck-racking class, but two big trips to Dippikill. The we'd like to see a little action this coming February.

Next comes the almost unbearable thought, that even look over the property and try to own monsters. if we had two political parties what issues could they differ on to make people vote one slate or the other? Actually to see what they have to look forthe problem here is not getting political parties to arouse ward to. Without reservation, they interest, but a concrete issue to talk about at election time all had fun; they were all for the development of the camp; and they to make people feel they want to vote!

The one thing that the Ped party has done that is There are meetings at Bru every gratifying is to recruit members that have not before open- Wednesday night at 7:30 where ly participated in government. All In The Game:

Change In The Sports Scene

By JACK LEWIS

The AMIA football league was brought to a close on Sunday afternoon when the league champs, Potter Club and the All Stars slipped and sloshed to a scoreless tie in the final exhibition of the season.

Although there seem to be varying opinions on either side who would have swamped who, had the ground been dry, it was generally conceded that the score gave a fairly accurate picture of the relative strength of each team.

The third quarter brought out the Potter offense as the Club moved down to within two yards of the All Star's goal, only to be held by excellent defensive play. In the final quarter the situation reversed as the All Stars took to the air and gave the champs several breathless moments. With the Stars last thrust being thwarted by lack of time, captain Joe Hill completes hold. another season closed out as this game provided the touch of finality which seemed to be lacking in previous years.
