French Fete Tonight

FRENCH PLAYLET TO BE PRESENTED

Again the hands of time announce for State College the annual French fete which will be held in the college gym. Friday evening March 2. This fete is the big event of the year for the French Club and through its great successes in former years, it has won for itself a fine reputation.

This year it will be better than ever, for what is not better each successive time, and will hold many surprises in store for those who attend. Committees have been at work for several weeks planning for the different booths and articles to be sold. There is a chance to buy French perfumes and all the other dainty luxuries and toilet articles you can imagine with quantities of novelties you will just have to buy as soon as you see them. Besides these booths which appeal to your sense of beauty, there will be one booth of French candies, about which nothing more need be said, for we all know what they are like and will surely save some of our money for them.

But the greatest attraction in store for us will be the doll booth. Those who attended last year will remember how darling the little dolls were, and will know what to expect this year. These dolls are not only just ornamental but they are to be dressed in costumes which will give those of us who are not inclined to be French an idea of the custom and style of clothing used among the peasants. As a rule few are acquainted with the clothes of the provincial people, for influence of the Parisian models in our daily life prevents us from going

Hamilton Overwhelms State

CATON PLAYS GOOD GAME TEAM TO GO ON TRIP

State's basket-ball five were defeated Thursday, February 15, by the Hamilton College five, the score being 45-18. The first five minutes of play were the hardest for the visitors for after that they continued to pile up the score rapidly. Our five put up a good strong fight at the start of the contest and it looked as if it were to be a struggle to the end. Doane, varsity center for Hamilton, broke into the scoring game during the first minute of play. He followed this up with another two points shortly afterward. Hornung placed State on the scoring side with a field goal and a foul point. For several minutes the game was a close guarding contest with neither side being able to pile up any scores. Hatch put the visitors on their feet by scoring twice in rapid succession and Doane added another on a one-handed toss. Hamilton continued to add scores until at the end of the first half they were leading with a score of 16 to 7. Caton added the only other goal from scrimmage for State. The second half was decidedly in favor of the Hamilton tossers for they ran up 29 more points. Hornung and Caton were the only State men who were successful in locating a basket.

Doane and Hatch played the fastest game for Hamilton, Doane making six shots thru the net and Hatch piling up five field goals.

Hornung and Caton played the best game for the Purple and Gold. They were responsible for the only scores made by State, each man making three shots from scrimmage.

This game was the close of the basket-ball season on the home court for State.

Storm of Applause Greeted

The State College Concert

PRIMITIVE SONGS BY MOHAWK CHIEF AND WORK OF CHORUS, ORCHESTRA AND GLEE CLUB SUPERB

The State College Music Association, assisted in its concert last night in Chancellors' Hall by Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton of the Mohawks, raised a storm of applause as violent as any that ever swept over the forests through which the redskins 200 years ago in their war paint ran silently until their war-cry burst with startling suddenness.

The atmosphere of bygone savagery and Indians stalking prey in the forests, or white men stalking Indians, was effectively recreated at the outset of the Mohawk chief's recital of primitive music by his song behind the scenes, accompanied by the steady beat of the tom tom, an Indian form of the drum.

When Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton appeared at the end of this song, his audience was in the mood for primitive music and responded visibly and very audibly to his interpretation of the earliest music on the American continent. He sang, always accompanied by the tom tom, the lullaby songs, the campfire songs, the war songs of the Indians, and also three others, "By the Waters of Minnetonka," "Blanket Song" and "Pale Moon." He held the large and distinguished audience in tremulous quiet until the deep rolling sounds of his voice died away, and the colors of the pristine forest conjured up in the imaginations of the audience had faded and the atmosphere was again that of Chancellors' Hall at a college get-together.

Chorus, Orchestra and Glee Club.

Excellent work was done by the Women's chorus, the College orchestra and the Men's Glee club, all under the direction of Harold W. Thompson and T. Frederick H. Candlyn. A "Shadow March," composed by Candlyn, was particularly well sung by the Women's chorus, as well as three Negro spirituals. "Highland Patrol, the Wee MacGregor" was exceptionally well liked among the work of the orchestra.

The audience filled almost every seat in the large hall and was very

WORK vs PLAY

The lazy feeling that warns of the springtime is just beginning to make itself felt. Mid year exams are over and finals in June are a long way off. The days are becoming longer and sometimes the sun shines. It is indeed hard to study under these conditions. It is a lot better for our comfort to rest on our glorious records for the past semester than to seek any more glory during the present semester.

It is a wise move, however, to keep in touch with the general trend of the courses in order that when a test happens along we may at least know what chapter of the test to consult for the needed information. There is a certain definite ratio between amount of study and amount of play. It is indeed a well educated student who can balance the two so that he can safely get to the end of the course without tumbling off on either one side or the other.

Now is a good time to make out a little plan for the rest of the year. How much play and how much work? That is the question.

CHIEF OS-KE-NON-TON SPEAKS OF INDIAN LIFE

Bedecked in our modest war paint and feathers (on our hat) we timidly approached the most modern tepee of Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton. For once we were speechless. Expecting to have our carefully curled scalp-lock pulled in way of greeting, and a thunderous war whoop, we were quite taken back by a most civilized "How do you do!" Thrills just Kentucky-derbied up and down our spine as we shook hands with a real live Indian with a jolly smile and delightful sense of humor. We racked our memory in vain for the correct pleasantries to say to Indians but our memory failed us as usual. Then we suddenly began to feel at home, as if we had been in the habit of calling on Indians all our lives. We entirely forgot ourself in listening to this man of the romantic people as he told us tales of his first trip to New York on eighteen dollars; of the time he had stage fright because of the size of his audience. We could not credit his stage fright because we are sure that such determined looking Indians never have stage fright.

We ventured the subject of dances and were rewarded by being shown the Deer Dance, horns and all, and the Bear Dance of a kind and good natured bear.

All at once our genius for asking questions returned, and being of a childish frame of mind we looked curiously at the gorgeous headdress of many feathers and asked, "What for, how, why?" The obliging answer was most descriptive and satisfying. "Decoration which belonged to my grandfather, on the head, to display the small pieces of hair dyed in the blood of the enemy." We learned that the Indians are most fond of decorating their head-wear with hair dyed in hostile blood. We shuddered and turned the discussion to war paint and costumes.

The war paint Os-Ke-Non-Ton wore was very vivid. It was in the form of crimson moons surrounded by black spikes. We made a mental note to try the effect at some time. The suit that he wore fascinated us: it was made of deer skin through which the deadly bullets had passed which caused the animal to be made into a garment. We certainly envied the chief his suit but we know that we could never hope to be as handsome in it as he.

He told us how each summer he paddled his own canoe and lived a real nature life among his people. He permitted us to take into our own hands that mysterious thing, the Tom Tom. He told us how very, very much he liked Albany and our nice big "Ed" building. When he shook hands and said good bye, we felt that forever after we would remember what a very pleasant person our first Indian acquaintance was. We know that the first American must have been exactly like this amiable chief, and we are proud, very proud of it.

They That Are Faithful

Once upon a time in the days of long ago there was a great kingdom. And in this kingdom there had been established a great institution of learning by order of the kings. At the head of the institution was a great wise man; and together with other wise men he instructed the young of the kingdom.

Now after many long weeks of labor certain questions were given to the young to answer. Those who answered them well remained; and those who answered them poorly were requested to seek advantage in other fields.

Those who remained again sought their studies with new inspiration and burned long the midnight oil. Then one morning when the remaining oil in many lamps was exceeding low, and many pupils were gathered to hear one of the wise men, he failed to arrive. And soon a great many questions arose as to where the wise man could be. Then a messenger came and said the wise man was ill of a great malady and would not appear.

From part of those assembled arose a cry of joy and they rushed happily from the rooms; and from the others arose the murmur, "And to what avail was all the burning of the midnight oil?"

And the Gods on Olympus who were watching, smiled at the great consternation. And they instructed that it be written down in the books of men, "They that are faithful even into the burning of midnight oil—"

Two Kinds of Silence

"Sir," said the young man. "I have come to demand the hand of your daughter!"

"Demand!" exclaimed the father.

"What do you mean?"

"Her hand, sir, the price of my silence," was the reply.

The father was beside himself with rage and went to the telephone to ring up the police, when the young man intervened.

"One moment, sir. I know nothing of your affairs, and I do not for a moment imagine you guilty of any misdeed. The silence to which I allude is of another sort. I am the young man who plays the trombone next door."

"Oh!" exclaimed the father. "Take her, my boy, take her!"

Two colored stevedores unloading a vessel at a dock were passing complimentary remarks about each other. Every time they met the discussion was renewed with added sarcasm on both sides.

"Yo' jest keep on pesticeating," remarked one of them, "an' yo' is sho gwine to be able to settle a mighty big question for de sciumtifice folks."

"What question dat?" countered the other.

"Kin the dead speak."

A brawny Irishman leaned over the big glass case in the chemist's shop and asked: "Wud ye plaise give me somethin' to kill moths?" and was promptly supplied with a packet of camphor balls.

He soon returned red with anger. "Ar-re you the monkey-faced piece that sould me these balls?" shouted the enraged one. "Just you come home wid me an' if ye can hit a single moth with one of these little pellets, I'll spare ye the thrashin' ye'll get otherwise to say nothing about the lookin'-glass an' ornaments meeself and the missus broke."

Dumm—How did you come out with your "exams"?

Dummer—Oh! I knocked them cold!

"Howzat?"

"Got zero!"

One day, as little Jimmy was sitting on the steps, a man came over to him and asked:

"Little boy, is your mother home?"

"Yes," was the reply.

The man rang the bell, but no one answered. He rang again, but still no one answered. After ringing a short while he turned to Jimmy despairingly, and said: "Little boy, I thought you said your mother was in?"

"She is, but I don't live here," was the prompt reply.

Eddie Candor was telling a friend about a poker game he played in. "Gee, the first pot a guy calls me and when I show my cards one of the gents says that it ain't necessary because it's a gentleman's game!"

"And how did you come out?" says the friend.

"Oh, I won every pot but the first one."

Gym. Teacher (to girls)—Lots of girls use dumb-bells to get color in their cheeks.

Bright One—And lots of girls use color in their cheeks to get dumb-bells Kansas Sour Owl.

Little Girl (in theater)—Mother, when do the Indians come in?

Mother—Why, there are no Indians in this show.

"Well, then, who scalped all the men in the front row?"—Yale Record.

"Did you see any train robbers on your trip West?"

"You bet I did! I took two chorus girls out to dinner."

An Irish recruit in the rear rank was undergoing his first drill. The hard-boiled sergeant gave them "Squads rights," and other movements of similar nature. Suddenly Pat left his squad and sat down in the shade of a nearby tree, with the drill sergeant yelling behind him, "How do you get that way; who are you, Pershing?"

Pat disgustedly replied: "You don't seem to know which direction you want to go. I'll wait here till you make up your mind."—Judge.

THE COAL SHORTAGE

The inmates of the K Δ P house are again feeling the results of the coal shortage. A few weeks ago they were burning soft coal as could plainly be seen, but now they are out of even soft coal and there are no chances in sight of getting any more. Sunday morning the last shovel full of coal was put in the furnace with many misgivings. Monday the men came to college complaining of the extreme cold weather. Certainly the K Δ P men will have to spend their evenings elsewhere until warm weather does away with the necessity of coal.

During the last coal shortage the men entertained several of the alumni apparently with success. Who will they entertain during this one?

Classes will without doubt suffer as a result, for arising in a cold house is apt to be more or less of a burden; and the desire to use the allotted number of cuts will be very hard to combat.

It is hoped by the men that winter will soon pass. If it does not some are thinking of collecting coal in baskets. Coal is scarcer now than many other things so a warning to guard the coal bin is not out of place.

G. A. A. FROLIC SATURDAY

Don't miss the G. A. A. gym. frolic next Saturday, March 4, at eight o'clock. Those who are cheerfully inclined are especially urged to be on hand as candidates for the standing broad grin, discus throw, and other athletic events. No ban has been placed on the refreshments in spite of the athletic nature of the frolic. Nellie Maxim will see to it that all performers are given their entire quota of eats.

We want those who are not subjectively humorous or hilarious to act as spectators, and so forget the cares which do so easily beset them. Ruth Moore has taken the responsibility of the program upon her capable shoulders.

MUSIC ASSOCIATION PRESENTS
NEW YORK TRIO

The Music Association will present the New York Trio on Saturday, March 10, in Chancellors' Hall.

The New York Trio is one of the greatest of its kind in the country. The pianist, Clarence Adler, is a famous solo pianist. Scipione Guidi, violinist, is concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Cornelius Van Vliet, Cellist, is first violinist of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Among the numbers on the program will be two of the most popular of trios, played by request. One is a solemn, sombre thing by Tschalkowsky. It is a trio on the death of a great artist. The other is a jolly, joyous trio by Schubert. It is perhaps the most popular of trios. The third group will be made up of a series of dances.

Tickets will be $1.50. They may be secured from Dr. Thompson, Mr. Candlyn, members of the music council, and members of the women's chorus. Students will be admitted, as usual, on their student tax tickets.

Farewell to Kitty

You can keep all the kisses I gave you;

You can keep every golden caress; You can keep all the sweet tricks I taught you,

And the jokes you made me confess.

You can keep whatsoever you care for—

The cold cash I wasted on you.

On Friday night, March 2, State will play the basket-ball five of Clarkson on the opponent's court. The last game of the season will be played between State and St. Lawrence Saturday evening, March 3. This is also an out of town game. These two games mark the closing of the basket-ball season for State this year. The recent games have shown some good work on the part of our varsity five, and these last two games will be hard fought battles.

much further in our knowledge of the different styles in the provinces. So these dolls will have a value other than just being artistic. At 8:15 a program will be presented. A great deal of care and work has been extended in this direction, and a fine entertainment is promised. There will be some French folk dancing and solo dancing. The final number on the program will be a playette given in French which everyone will be sure to enjoy. All these treats have been promised us and all we have to do is to come ready to enjoy ourselves, not forgetting the trifling sum of ten cents, which is required as an entrance fee. Later in the evening there will be an orchestra which in itself means a good time. Surely with all these inducements everyone will want to come and have a good time.

THE FEBRUARY QUARTERLY

I would that this review might approach the witty keenness of Dr. Hasting's TRIP WITH A. E. F.—scandal among the faculty—impossible!
 One feels sorely in need of a CONTRIBUTORS COLUMN in which he might become acquainted with the three new authors of '26 and the one of '24. They are evidently worth knowing. If "writing poetry is a disease," we hope it is catching; for such a number of uniformly delightful verse we have not found between QUARTERLY covers in a long while. In fact, every class of this college generation is represented, and one more, '22. The "eyes of youth" as they look out at us from this little book are wistful, thoughtful; but as ever they sparkle mischievously just as we begin to get too serious, in the form of THE LAQUER BOX, FRAMING CLARENCE, THE SECRETS (now no secrets) OF THE SACRED SITTING ROOM, and the class category.
