VP Harrison named in Council election dispute

By Colleen Deslaurier

Student Association elections lead to some sort of dispute, and this fall's elections are no different.

At question now is whether or not SA Vice President Steve Harrison recommended to a Central Council candidate that he falsely information to the elections commissioner in order to keep his name on the ballot after he missed a mandatory meeting.

Dutch Quad candidate Cary Munk said following Wednesday's Central Council meeting, "With the advice of an SA official, I was told to write down that I had a class, which I didn't."

Election results coverage

Many students came to Wednesday's Career Day for information about jobs, but some came to protest U.S. intelligence agencies.

Grouper law case remains undecided

By Davis Merran

Many students came to Wednesday's Career Day for information about jobs, but some came to protest U.S. intelligence agencies.
The World

Protesters detained

Moscow (AP) Human rights demonstrators who held a protest march on a holiday honoring the Soviet Constitution were detained by police for several hours, dissidents said.

EIGHTEEN members of the Democracy and Humanism group marched Wednesday to demand the release of political prisoners, said group member Alexander Rubchenko. "There's no place for ideology in the constitution," he said.

FIFTY to sixty police used force to break up the protest and detain the protesters, but no one was seriously hurt, Rubchenko said.

Nikolai Khranov, another member of the group, said police issued warnings to several protesters, including Dmitri Eisner. Protests were called off when police warned that they would use force against demonstrators.

The Skidmore College Theater (AP) Human rights demonstrators who held a protest march on a holiday honoring the Soviet Constitution were detained by police for several hours, dissidents said.

EIGHTEEN members of the Democracy and Humanism group marched Wednesday to demand the release of political prisoners, said group member Alexander Rubchenko. "There's no place for ideology in the constitution," he said.

FIFTY to sixty police used force to break up the protest and detain the protesters, but no one was seriously hurt, Rubchenko said.

Nikolai Khranov, another member of the group, said police issued warnings to several protesters, including Dmitri Eisner. Protests were called off when police warned that they would use force against demonstrators.

Baby dies in protest

Santiago, Chile (AP) Soldiers bashed rock-smashing demonstrators in the biggest day of protests against the military government in a year. A 2-year-old was killed, 10 people were wounded and nearly 400 were detained, authorities said.

The clashes occurred on the day of a national strike for higher wages, which drew little support from workers. Street demonstrations have frequently accompanied strikes aimed at the 14-year-old military regime.

Soldiers were dispatched Wednesday to support police in several areas. The troops fired automatic weapons into the air and used tear gas and water cannon to break up protests. Three people, including a toddler, suffered bullet wounds, and several people were injured by buckshot.

The Nation

Ice found polluted

Philadelphia (AP) Health officials are blaming polluted ice, manufactured by a Lancaster County firm whose well-water supply was contaminated by a flood, for making more than 1,000 people ill in two states.

Samples of the ice manufactured by Nolt's Ice Co. of New Holland were found to have bacteriological contamination, Randall Hirschlor, chief of food protection for the city Health Department, said Wednesday.

The ice company voluntarily shut down its plant Sept. 29 after the State Department of Environmental Resources said its ice may be contaminated, Hirschlor said.

The State

Sniper dies in jail

Albany (AP) A man accused of killing three people and wounding two others on city streets during a drunken shooting rampage has died in his jail cell of a heart attack, officials said.

Robert L. Beebe, 35, who had been jailed since his surrender to police in the early hours of Sept. 26, died just hours before a grand jury was to convene in his case, said his lawyer, Terence Kindlon.

Beebe was found with his cell just after 7 a.m. Wednesday by guards at the Albany County Jail. An autopsy by Coroner William Loetterle determined Beebe had suffered a heart attack.

Beebe, described by Kindlon as a "good Samaritan" who lost his head in an "alcoholic blackout," was arrested after five people were gunned down in a barrage of bullets from a .30-caliber rifle.

Cover-up charged

Binghamton (AP) City officials have accused railroad workers of trying to hide the danger posed by a recent derailment of a chemical-laden freight train.

New York, Susquehanna and Western Railway workers denied hazardous substances were aboard after Tuesday's derailment, delaying the evacuation of residents for about three hours, Binghamton Police Chief James T. O'Neil said Wednesday.

The train was carrying about four tons of corrosive acids, including hydrobromic acid, sulfuric acid, hydrofluoric acid and hydrochloric acid, O'Neil said.

Meyerson indicted

New York (AP) Bess Meyerson, a housepainter's daughter who rose to become Miss America and then a top city official, has been indicted for allegedly using her position to influence the judge in her boyfriend's divorce.

A federal grand jury Wednesday charged the former cultural affairs commissioner with conspiracy, mail fraud and bribery-related charges for allegedly giving a city job to the judge's descendant in return for a reduction in the support her "intimate companion" had to pay his ex-wife.

If convicted, 63-year-old Myerson could receive up to 30 years in prison and be fined $151,000. Arrangement was scheduled for Oct. 15.

Also indicted were the boyfriend, millionaire Carl "Andy" Capasso, 45, and former state Supreme Court Justice Hortense W. Gabel, who presided over Capasso's divorce.

---

PREVIEW OF EVENTS

Free listings

FRIDAY, OCT. 9

Pre-Law Association is sponsoring the 9th Annual Law School Fair on the U.S. campus from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the CC Ballroom.

The Friends of Chamber Orchestra will discuss secret tactics for production nights. Cold pizza will be served and a tour of the orchestra will be held.

The Class of 1989 "Fun Run" will take place around the university's Perimeter Road, with registration beginning at 8 a.m. and the races at 10 a.m. The races will take place around the campus of 1 km and 10k races, to benefit Parsons Child and Family Center. The SUNYA "Fun Run" will take place around the university.

SUNDAY, Oct. 11

The Hudson Mohawk Group of the Sierra Club is sponsoring a Fall Bike Ride. This 20-mile day trip will meet at 5 p.m. on the U.S. campus.

The Class Council of 1990 meets at 9 a.m. in the SA lounge.

The Class Council of 1989 meets at 9 a.m. in the SA lounge.

The Friends of Chamber Music begins its 39th season of concerts at 8 p.m. in the U.S. Capasso's divorce.

ACKERMANN UPS
Elections fill 12 Council positions

By Jennifer McCormick

Student Association fall elections closed Wednesday night, admitting dozens of new representatives to Central Council.

Fall Central Council elections fill slots in both the legislative branch vacated since the April elections. Forty-six candidates vied for the 12 open positions Tuesday and Wednesday, with 14 students citations contenders to fill the 17 positions on 1991 Class Council.

SA Vice President Steve Harrison, who is the only SA election official to oversee elections, said, "the elections have gone perfectly." Not only was there "a really good turnout," but election policy was "followed to a 'T,'" he said.

This year's race for off-campus representative was the "best we've ever had," said Steve Goldsmith, a member of SA's elections commission. Eleven candidates ran for four seats, secured by Andrea Corson, Ellen Fishman, Limor Nisan, and Lisa Ricchio.

Of the six running for State Quad representative, past Central Council member James Lamb garnered the most votes.

Of the six Indian Quad candidates, Bob Ritter and Dan Serafini claimed the most votes, and 11 Colonial Quad candidates ran for the seats now occupied by Michele Czobor, Alan Rafnerman and Vincent Trops.

The 15 candidates elected to the Class of 1991 are Marty DiPasquale, Jason Epstein, Laura Fox, Jason Greenberg, Lisa Greens, Susan Hengster, Jeffrey Lucas, David M. Moell, Barry Robinson, John Rois, Dan Serafini, Howie Stevens, Scott J. Trischman, Diane Venezia and Chemene Webber.

There was a "main concerted effort to follow policy," Harrison said, intended to prevent the tension of last spring's election, which led to numerous SA Supreme Court cases.

Elections were removed from the ballot for failure to follow elections policy, SA President Morgan Dood said. "There's nothing wrong with that." Dood commended the elections commission's work saying they've "done an excellent job upholding policy.

Goldsmith agreed with Harrison, saying "The three [elections] before this one were the best regulations... in this elections, procedure was followed perfectly." Both the candidates and the voter turned out this election's were considerable, "much better than last year," Goldsmith said.

"It was surprising how many candidates overlap on Central Council and Class of 91 Council," Goldsmith said. "Maybe they got better information [at freshman orientation] this year," Goldsmith said. As fall elections use paper ballots instead of the mechanical voting booths, there were no technical mishaps or dysfunctions which have marked previous elections.

"That's why it got all screwed up last year," Harrison said. To prevent such problems during the next election, the voting machines are now being primed for use in the spring, Harrison said.

Students line up on interview skills

By William J. Taverner

Interviewing skills and tips were presented to over 40 students attending a workshop Wednesday night designed to better their techniques when applying for jobs.

Directed by Brett Morgan, director of executive recruiting and placement for Maycorp, the workshop was presented by the American Marketing Association.

Morgan, who has held his position for the past four months, emphasized the importance of proper physical presentation during an interview. This includes the use of body language such as eye contact and a firm handshake.

"The most important aspect of an interview is the initial impression, someone who is showing energy and interest in the company. That shows the company that you're interested and you've done your research," said Morgan.

Morgan and Cummings were chosen by Joe Bybel, president of A.M.A. Bybel said that he liked their format of using video equipment and the question answer and question session, as opposed to traditional lecture.

Using this format, the speakers posed five general principles of interviewing. The first is based on preparation.

A well-designed resume is crucial to a successful interview. This one-page self-analysis allows the interviewer to learn about the person even before the interview.

Morgan's fourth and fifth principles: asking appropriate questions and directing one's own interview.

"The former shows one's extended interest in the job. However, while showing interest in the job, it is essential not to show off, Morgan cautioned. This is easily detected and can hurt a student's chance.

All these principles were reinforced through a video tape of an interview. The interview's strengths and weaknesses were discussed among those in attendance.

"The video tape was a good way to get the point across. It was nice how they broke it up and allowed time for questions," said George Hawver, one student in attendance.

Minorities welcomed at reception

By Laurie Stillwell

University President Vincent O'Leary welcomed SUNYA's undergraduate minority students in a special reception Thursday in the Patroon Lounge.

Sponsored by Minority Student Services, it took on a different character than past receptions. Gone was the lecture-type format of speeches; the atmosphere was very relaxed and informal — "a chance for people just to talk," O'Leary explained.

About 70 students, faculty members and administrators gathered to discuss matters relevant to minority students at SUNYA.

Topics ranged from cafeteria food to financial aid to graduate study support programs.

O'Leary did address the crowd briefly to reiterate his enthusiasm about SUNYA's programs to increasing minority enrollment.

The number of minority students attending SUNYA has been growing steadily over the last few years, and this year has reached a high of 17 percent of all students.

"The efforts we made to make this campus more like the outside world are not just to be nice... we need you!," said O'Leary.

O'Leary commended minority students for "reaching out for new experiences" and "getting SUNYA where we want to be.

All four graduating classes were represented at the reception, all well as a diversity of ethnic backgrounds, including black, Asian Pacific, and Hispanic.

Among the faculty and administration present were vice presidents of the Offices of Student Affairs, Research and Graduate Studies, and Academic Affairs.

Also attending were members of the departments of Regional Planning, Anthropology, History, the sciences, African studies, Educational Opportunity Program Life, Institutional Research and many others.

The reception was organized by Yolanda Nix, direction of Minority Student Services, a division of the office of Student Affairs. Refreshments were served and catered by University Auxiliary Services.

Commissioner of Student Affairs, and the student assembly.

To attract a diversified student body, SUNYA has focused on minority student recruitment and enrollment for the past four months, emphasizing the importance of proper physical presentation during an interview. This includes the use of body language such as eye contact and a firm handshake.

"The most important aspect of an interview is the initial impression, someone who is showing energy and interest in the company. That shows the company that you're interested and you've done your research," said Morgan.

Morgan and Cummings were chosen by Joe Bybel, president of A.M.A. Bybel said that he liked their format of using video equipment and the question answer and question session, as opposed to traditional lecture.

Using this format, the speakers posed five general principles of interviewing. The first is based on preparation.

A well-designed resume is crucial to a successful interview. This one-page self-analysis allows the interviewer to learn about the person even before the interview.

Morgan's fourth and fifth principles: asking appropriate questions and directing one's own interview.

"The former shows one's extended interest in the job. However, while showing interest in the job, it is essential not to show off, Morgan cautioned. This is easily detected and can hurt a student's chance.

All these principles were reinforced through a video tape of an interview. The interview's strengths and weaknesses were discussed among those in attendance.

"The video tape was a good way to get the point across. It was nice how they broke it up and allowed time for questions," said George Hawver, one student in attendance.

Minorities welcomed at reception

By Laurie Stillwell

University President Vincent O'Leary welcomed SUNYA's undergraduate minority students in a special reception Thursday in the Patroon Lounge.

Sponsored by Minority Student Services, it took on a different character than past receptions. Gone was the lecture-type format of speeches; the atmosphere was very relaxed and informal — "a chance for people just to talk," O'Leary explained.

About 70 students, faculty members and administrators gathered to discuss matters relevant to minority students at SUNYA.

Topics ranged from cafeteria food to financial aid to graduate study support programs.

O'Leary did address the crowd briefly to reiterate his enthusiasm about SUNYA's programs to increasing minority enrollment.

The number of minority students attending SUNYA has been growing steadily over the last few years, and this year has reached a high of 17 percent of all students.

"The efforts we made to make this campus more like the outside world are not just to be nice... we need you!," said O'Leary.

O'Leary commended minority students for "reaching out for new experiences" and "getting SUNYA where we want to be.

All four graduating classes were represented at the reception, all well as a diversity of ethnic backgrounds, including black, Asian Pacific, and Hispanic.

Among the faculty and administration present were vice presidents of the Offices of Student Affairs, Research and Graduate Studies, and Academic Affairs.

Also attending were members of the departments of Regional Planning, Anthropology, History, the sciences, African studies, Educational Opportunity Program Life, Institutional Research and many others.

The reception was organized by Yolanda Nix, direction of Minority Student Services, a division of the office of Student Affairs. Refreshments were served and catered by University Auxiliary Services.

Commissioner of Student Affairs, and the student assembly.

To attract a diversified student body, SUNYA has focused on minority student recruitment and enrollment for the past four months, emphasizing the importance of proper physical presentation during an interview. This includes the use of body language such as eye contact and a firm handshake.

"The most important aspect of an interview is the initial impression, someone who is showing energy and interest in the company. That shows the company that you're interested and you've done your research," said Morgan.

Morgan and Cummings were chosen by Joe Bybel, president of A.M.A. Bybel said that he liked their format of using video equipment and the question answer and question session, as opposed to traditional lecture.

Using this format, the speakers posed five general principles of interviewing. The first is based on preparation.

A well-designed resume is crucial to a successful interview. This one-page self-analysis allows the interviewer to learn about the person even before the interview.

Morgan's fourth and fifth principles: asking appropriate questions and directing one's own interview.

"The former shows one's extended interest in the job. However, while showing interest in the job, it is essential not to show off, Morgan cautioned. This is easily detected and can hurt a student's chance.

All these principles were reinforced through a video tape of an interview. The interview's strengths and weaknesses were discussed among those in attendance.

"The video tape was a good way to get the point across. It was nice how they broke it up and allowed time for questions," said George Hawver, one student in attendance.

Minorities welcomed at reception

By Laurie Stillwell

University President Vincent O'Leary welcomed SUNYA's undergraduate minority students in a special reception Thursday in the Patroon Lounge.

Sponsored by Minority Student Services, it took on a different character than past receptions. Gone was the lecture-type format of speeches; the atmosphere was very relaxed and informal — "a chance for people just to talk," O'Leary explained.

About 70 students, faculty members and administrators gathered to discuss matters relevant to minority students at SUNYA.

Topics ranged from cafeteria food to financial aid to graduate study support programs.

O'Leary did address the crowd briefly to reiterate his enthusiasm about SUNYA's programs to increasing minority enrollment.

The number of minority students attending SUNYA has been growing steadily over the last few years, and this year has reached a high of 17 percent of all students.

"The efforts we made to make this campus more like the outside world are not just to be nice... we need you!," said O'Leary.

O'Leary commended minority students for "reaching out for new experiences" and "getting SUNYA where we want to be.

All four graduating classes were represented at the reception, all well as a diversity of ethnic backgrounds, including black, Asian Pacific, and Hispanic.

Among the faculty and administration present were vice presidents of the Offices of Student Affairs, Research and Graduate Studies, and Academic Affairs.

Also attending were members of the departments of Regional Planning, Anthropology, History, the sciences, African studies, Educational Opportunity Program Life, Institutional Research and many others.

The reception was organized by Yolanda Nix, direction of Minority Student Services, a division of the office of Student Affairs. Refreshments were served and catered by University Auxiliary Services.

Commissioner of Student Affairs, and the student assembly.
Physicist considers possibilities of alien life forms

By Matthew DiTomasso

Although E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial was a product of Steven Spielberg’s imagination, at least one professor ponders the possibility of similar life forms existing somewhere in the universe.

Dr. Alan Meltzer, a physicist and systems engineer at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, spoke on just that Tuesday evening in LC 7.

Meltzer described the problems of contacting intelligent extra-terrestrial life forms using radio telescopes or space travel — it’s practically impossible.

The main problem of establishing contact, he said, is distance. The distance between our Sun and the nearest star is so great that it eliminates the possibility of travel and communication by our current means, explained Meltzer.

He also talked about life in the universe from an astronomical point of view. Meltzer said that while searching for life in the universe, the “important thing to look for is not stars, but the things that go around stars:” planets.

He showed the audience slides of eight of the nine planets, Mercury through Uranus, and their respective moons. The conditions on Earth are the only ones conducive to life as we know it, explained Meltzer.

He also pointed out that temperature is one of the main factors that sets Earth apart from the other.

The Earth is the only planet, “that in one and the same instant, water can be solid, liquid, and gaseous...” This is important in the production of life, he added.

Another issue Meltzer addressed was possibilities of life in our galaxy, the Milky Way, and in other star clusters. There are approximately two hundred billion stars in our galaxy alone, Meltzer said.

Stars are formed by clouds of gases and particles called nebulas. In theory, “it is impossible to form a star without forming planets,” Meltzer said. This makes the potential for life on other planets in other solar systems very great, he added.

How life started on Earth is unknown, Meltzer said. One theory of life’s beginning on Earth, Meltzer explained, is that the physical conditions and elements in existence after the Earth formed were ideal for the creation of the chemicals needed for life.

All known forms of life are composed of some combination of twenty-six amino acids, according to Meltzer, and all amino acids contain carbon. This makes carbon the building block element for life, Meltzer added.

Meltzer also discussed the theory that the evolution of life is unique because of the many variables involved in the process of evolution. Therefore, there is probably nowhere in the universe where one will find life forms that resemble those of the Earth’s in appearance.

Meltzer has worked with the National Astronomical Society the past 15 years, having lectured at more than 150 campuses.

This lecture is the first in the 15th annual National History Lecture Series, organized by Dr. Raymond Falconer, a former research assistant in SUNYA’s department of atmospheric sciences. Other lectures in the series will be held every Tuesday through November, with the exception of November 3. All lectures will be held here in Lecture Center 7 at 8 p.m.
Career Day draws students’ interest, protests

Firms, businesses offer information while Peace Project demonstrates

By Jeanette Rodriguez

A record 72 firms were represented at the 13th annual Career Day Wednesday in the Campus Center Ballroom from 9 to 4 p.m.

But two employers — The Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigations — drew loud protest from a group of students who dispute the agencies’ policies and agenda and their recruitment of college students.

However, speakers and recruiters continued to advise students on job opportunities and recruit prospective employees.

Besides the events chairpersons, Peter Liaskos and Risa Risnick, there were two other speakers at the reception, the former and present deans of the Business school.

Former Dean William Holstein told of the importance of fraternity to “help with the interface between education and practice. It eases the transition.”

Dean Laurie Larwood also spoke. The current Dean, recently transferred from the University of Illinois, briefly mentioned how impressed she was with the SUNY students.

After the speakers delivered the welcoming address, the Ballroom opened for students.

At one point, a group of students demonstrators, including representatives of Peace Project, interrupted the flow of events by noisily storming into the ballroom, according to an AYCO-Corp. representative, to protest the presence of a CIA recruiter.

Carrying signs displaying such statements as “Stop the recruitment of secret police on college campuses,” the group later took their posters and their message to other points on campus.

After the outbursts, the demonstrators remained standing behind the CIA recruiting table with signs denouncing the CIA, according to the AYCO representative.

But a few firms asked to have their tables moved because of the protest, he said.

The CIA recruiter, who asked not to be identified, said that the protesters did not bother him. “They have a right to protest, just as I have a right to be here.”

He said as long as the demonstration remained peaceful, he would remain neutral about it.

“Career Day is an informational seminar that tries to create a bond between the firms and the students. It lets students know what’s out there,” said Peter Liaskos, co-chairperson of Career Day.

The goal of this year was to appeal to a more diverse student population by introducing them to many various firms, said Liaskos.

He said that although Delta Sigma Pi, the fraternity who sponsored Career Day, is a business fraternity, “we (wanted) Career Day to appeal to as many students as possible.”

This explained the presence of such firms as Abraham and Strauss, McDonalds, U.S. Coast Guard and the Albany Symphony Orchestra to name a few.

The fraternity contacted firms through the Albany Chamber of Commerce to invite them to participate in Career Day. The cost of a table was $30, proceeds of which went towards funding Career Day.

The cost of sponsoring Career Day was roughly $4,000, about $1,000 over budget. The difference will be paid by the fraternity.

University Auxiliary Service donated $400, which went toward the breakfast reception given at 8 a.m. of the same day in the Patroon Lounge.

GRADUATE STUDIES IN BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH

Basic Medical Science Department
Active Research Programs
Seeking Qualified Applicants

Tuition and Stipend
Support Available

For Further Information Contact: Graduate Committee
Department of Physiology
Albany Medical College
Albany, N.Y. 12208
(518-445-5651)

SHERWOOD CAPITAL, INC.

One of the Largest
- Full Service OTC Brokerage Firms
- NASD Member Firm
- Over 30 Offices Nationwide

For individuals interested in a career in the financial services industry, we offer an extensive training program. Opportunities for advancement into management are also available.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE IN OUR HUNTINGTON, LONG ISLAND OFFICE.

CONTACT CAREER PLANNING OR SEND RESUME TO:
Sherwood Capital, Inc.
Attn: 313
33 Walt Whitman Rd.
Huntington Station, NY 11746

SUNYA students.

Students perused entrepreneurial offerings at Career Day Wednesday.

SAVES
Save the round trip train fare to New York. Buy some clothes. Maybe even a new pair of shoes.

And eat at Michael's On Madison. The area's only authentic New York Style Deli. With a full menu of quality deli items, entrees, gourmet specials and Sunday Brunches previously available only at the parties and receptions catered by Michael’s of Green Island.

To eat in or take out. Tuesday through Sunday, 11am to 11pm.

MICHAEL’S
ON MADISON

851 Madison Avenue (at Ontario) Albany, New York 458-9757
Stage center

It's funny how tradition catches up with you. You try to clean up your act and all of a sudden there's your past staring you in the face. It happened to Macbeth. It happened to Blanche Dubois in A Streetcar Named Desire. And it happened to SA Vice President Steve Harrison.

The setting: For as long as anyone can remember, SA has had some trouble coordinating their elections — candidates names are left off ballots; ballots aren't counted; and sometimes it's even hinted that foul play was involved. Let's face it — SA had a bad reputation.

So to redeem its virtue, SA cracked down on its elections policy. As usual, candidates for both Class Council of '91 and Central Council were required to attend a mandatory pre-election meeting or their name would be taken off the ballot. Twelve candidates didn't show, and all twelve were removed from the ballot. So far, so good. But as Lady Macbeth could tell you, wanting isn't as easy as it looks.

Act I: Enter Cary Munk, a candidate for Dutch Quad representative to Central Council. He missed the mandatory meeting but still wanted to run, so he sought SA Elections Commissioner Alissa Lawrence. Finding her unavailable, he went to Harrison, who ultimately oversaw elections proceedings, felt he could get away with a little rule-bending because the elections are over and on that ground is bringing his case before SA Supreme Court sometime soon. (Never mind there's only one member currently on the court, at least it's easy to look.)

Act II: The plot's pretty simple up to here, but what follows in Act II depends on who you talk to. Munk says Harrison told him to lie to Lawrence and tell her he missed the meeting because of a class. Harrison says he merely outlined for Munk the three valid reasons for missing the meeting — illness, personal emergency and having a class — and that Munk did from there was his own business.

Act III: This scenario is pretty straightforward... Munk gives a letter to Lawrence saying he had a class; she says his name will go on the ballot; due to a typo, his name's left off the ballot; she apologizes and says SA will re-run the election; she and Harrison talk about this; Lawrence somehow finds Munk didn't have a class (n.b. some editions of this act say Harrison was the one who tipped her off, but this is mere speculation); so she Munk never belonged on the ballot in the first place; re-running the elections are scrapped; and Munk, who assumed his name was on the ballot, can't even tell his friends to vote for him as a write-in candidate because the elections are over and on that ground is bringing his case before SA Supreme Court sometime soon. (Never mind there's only one member currently on the court, and he's Harrison's housemate — that's for another play yet to be written.)

So what's the theme of this little play that caused so much trouble? Did it happen to the next week's Council meeting? Did Harrison encourage Munk to blatantly lie to Lawrence? Probably not. Will anyone know for sure? Probably not. But what is probable is that Munk, who has run for other positions before and is acquainted with SA election proceedings, felt he could get away with a little rule-bending because it was done so often in the past. Finale: So as the curtain closes, it seems that despite wishing for the best and perfectly good intentions, SA could not rise above the legacy of past election mishaps. But if Harrison and the rest of the SA cast tightens up their act some more, perhaps next year's elections won't have to be another flawed performance.

Credits

Some students liked him. Many hated him.

Accounting professor Harold Cannon was an institution at SUNYA, almost more of an institution than the University itself. But professor Cannon died Thursday morning after three weeks of heart complications.

Many students knew him as the man who stood between them and one of the best business schools in the country. Financial Accounting (ACC 211) has always been a requirement for the Business School, but until recently Harold Cannon was the sole professor teaching the course. Students only had to decide whether they should take it before 8:45 or 11:15 class. They had to sit in LC 7. They had to watch him manipulate three overhead projectors at once. They had to bear his commanding, don't-even-whisper-in-the-back-row lecturing voice. They had to do the weekly homeworks. They had to take — and more than pass — his standardized exams. And they had to take him home. But ironically it was Cannon's high academic standards that made most students want to try to get into SUNYA's Business School in the first place.

And for that he deserved more credit than most had given him.

COLUMN

It is Written

Someone older and wiser once told me that writing a book was a privilege reserved for those who transcended the bounds of mortal men. At the time, I had no idea what he was talking about. As I sit in my dorm stop In- dian Quad Tower, with ice water leaking on my roommate's bed and stereo system, I finally think that I understand what he meant. What I fail to understand is why it's snowing in October.

Miles Z. Epstein

Today, anyone can write a book. And everyone does. Politicss who leave office in disgrace, women who have affairs with famous men, and athletes who can't even spell their own names. These people need not have writing talent. A former hostage from any crisis can get a book published by the next month. The journalism bug bites them all.

I think the "stuff" that publishing companies produce is interesting. I wouldn't classify a lot of the books as classics, however, there are exceptions. There are many intelligent athletes, knowledgeable politicians, and wild women who have news-worthy life stories.

I can't imagine the level of writing being any lower than that of many college texts-told at the bookstore for list price. Books are often written by people who messed up their lives and want to tell how. I'd be delighted to see a book that has another plot besides, "I got hooked but now I'm clean." Overweight people write books on how to stay slim, drug addicts write on how to stay away from drugs, and strength training books are written by someone who hasn't seen a gym since High School.

There is nothing wrong with having a good idea and publishing it in a book. But if you were a student, however, be more selective about who occupies the shelves. Anyone who can chew bubble gum in syncopated rhythm is qualified to be an author. This is a sad fact.

Writing books used to be a craft. Now, it is a business — and only that. It has reached the point where the success of athletes, the college professors, can be measured by the number of books published. The 1986 World Champion Mets had a book published by almost everyone in the lineup, as did the Super Bowl Champion Giants. The Mets can play baseball and the Giants are the best in the NFL. They didn't get there because of their journalistic skill.

"Today, anyone can write a book. And everyone does. Politicians who leave office in disgrace, women who have affairs with famous men, and athletes who can't even spell their own names..."

The NFL is on strike. The books about the walkout are probably being prepared right as we witness the sale of books by the Fat Boys. Comic books. Autobiographies. Posters. T-shirts. The NFL is an instant celebrity. And just as quickly, a distant memory. The public has a short memory when it comes to sports.

I guess there are more serious problems than the regulation of low quality literature. Nevertheless, it would be nice to read books that have a bit of substance. The best part of this attitude is that there aren't many books that qualify.

If you ever make a mess out of your life, don't despair; write a book. The less you know, the sooner it will be published and the more money you'll make. In the meantime, enjoy the creative ways the written word is abused.

The writer is Editorial Page Editor of the Albany Student Press.
Aspects
October 9, 1987
Takes You Out To
The Ball Game
Shaughnessy's Towne Tavern
99 Washington Avenue

Great Aspects

All right, all right. Maybe I am spending too much time with my Riverside edition of The Complete Works of William Shakespeare, but when I woke up Sunday morning it sure seemed like someone had rewritten one of Bill's plays and made it A Midsummer Night's Dream. Sure, it may sound funny, but try living it. (Sorry, I guess you already did that.)

Nonetheless, this new-fangled, bastardized version and its original forefather have more in common than one might think. (For those of you who have avoided "The Shakespeare Experience" here at good old Albany State, — and everywhere else! — I'm speaking of everybody's favorite, A Midsummer Night's Dream.)

Case in point: They both were unexpected. Granted, a very good friend of mine, who just happens to be an atmospheric science major, did predict some type of snowfall, but honestly! It was only October 4! (By the way ... while we're on the subject of meteorologists, did you know that David Letterman started out as a television weatherman?? Just a little T.V. trivia for you.)

Yet, in spite of all that "forewarned is forearmed" nonsense, and the late night on Saturday running in and out to check the precipitory status of the downfall (to see if it really was snowing yet), I still found it a bit hard to believe.

'Get serious,' I remember thinking. 'Snow? I won't even see my winter coat until Parents' Weekend.' I should have known.

But, the snow went almost as quickly as it had arrived. By midday on Monday, apart from the random snowpatch or occasional snowman, it was as if it had all been a dream. A sick dream, but a dream just the same.

Case in point: (As is the custom after the first snowfall of the season,) there was an awful lot of frolicking going on. (Do they do this off-campus, too?)

Motherless children running around in t-shirts, cut-off sweatpants, and untied hiking boots, engaged in the ever-popular first snowball fight, while disrupting any sleep patterns one may have been pursuing that morning. Who dresses these people anyway???

Case (barely) in point: What's up with the squirrels? Sure, this may sound weird at first, but think about it. Did they know all of this was going to happen? Were they as prepared to wait out the storm as many of us were, with popcorn, hot chocolate, and Trivial Pursuit? Who does their weather?

And what about the really stupid ones? Do they have any clue as to what's going on? I mean, it was warm again within two days. Do you think they realize that that's not all there is? 'Cause if they're stupid enough, they might not understand that winter isn't over after 24 hours of snow.

Conclusion: So, that's it. The truth about Bill Shakespeare and his plays comes out — they're more like real life than you might think.

I don't know how acceptable this will be as a term paper for my Shakespeare class, but at least the sun's out again (and remember this: temporary sunshine is better than none at all).

Top Ten albums for the week of October 5

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Artist</th>
<th>Album</th>
<th>Label</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Public Image Ltd.</td>
<td>Happy</td>
<td>Virgin</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ramones</td>
<td>Half Way to Sanity</td>
<td>Sire</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chesterfield Kings</td>
<td>Don't Open Till Doomsday</td>
<td>Mirror Twelve</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Big Black</td>
<td>Songs About Fucking</td>
<td>Touch and Go</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smiths</td>
<td>&quot;Strangeways, Here We Come&quot;</td>
<td>Sire</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verlaines</td>
<td>Juvenilia</td>
<td>LSR</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jesus &amp; Mary Chain</td>
<td>Darklands</td>
<td>WEA</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alex Chilton</td>
<td>High Priest</td>
<td>Big Time</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Droogs</td>
<td>Kingdom Day</td>
<td>Passport</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tom Waits</td>
<td>Franks Wild Years</td>
<td>Island</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

October 14, 1987
8 p.m. — Free!
Performing Arts Center
Recital Hall
The University of Albany
State University of New York

"Foodfright", a cabaret dramatizing women's obsession with food, weight, and body image - has a message for anyone fighting the "Fear of Fat". The presentation is a unique blend of music, humorous skits and personal narratives created to depict and explore the pressures on women to be thin.

The play was created to help educate the public about anorexia and bulimia.

YOU WON'T WANT TO MISS
Bride weds comedy and adventure

(“The Princess Bride” with Cary Elwes, Mand dy Patinkin, Chris Sarandon, Christopher Guest, Wallace Shawn, and Robin Wright. Directed by Rob Reiner from Twentieth Century Fox. Rated PG.)

T
here are several ways a movie can become a classic. One is by being completely entertaining everyone who sees it. It must also be so unique that the viewer has never seen anything quite like it, and probably never will in the future. Classics are very rare, but Twentieth Century Fox’s The Princess Bride is a very good candidate. Not only is it the best love story to come around in a very long time, but it also handles the comedy and a rip-roaring action adventure.

Ed Vaira

The limitless plot begins on a snowy day. A little boy is ill, and his grandfather (Peter O’Toole) tells him a story about a beautiful princess, a fierce dragon, a giant and other things that seem to come out of a fairy tale. As the boy listens, he is transported into a fantasy world.

The book is a gift and reads it to his grandson. He can’t believe how fascinating the book is and asks his grandfather to tell him another story. The grandfather then tells him the story of the book.

The book tells the story of the true love between Buttercup and Westley. Westley was captured and killed by the Dread Pirate Roberts, who is on a mission to rescue Buttercup. The lovers are separated; Westley is killed and subsequently revived by a wizard and returns to rescue Buttercup. As always, they live happily ever after.

The Princess Bride is a very positive, and even comforting, reassurance of humanity in 1987. The film never degenerates into its own codswallop, but handles the romance, the comedy, and the adventure completely entertaining everyone who sees it. It must also be so unique that the viewer has never seen anything quite like it, and probably never will in the future. Classics are very rare, but Twentieth Century Fox’s The Princess Bride is a very good candidate. Not only is it the best love story to come around in a very long time, but it also handles the comedy and a rip-roaring action adventure.

Raymond Rogers

When it comes to pop bands, Squeeze is the exception to the rule. This intelligent, inven tive band does not follow the “flavor of the month” routine, but rather incorporates a varied blend of rock and roll, rhythm and blues, and soul into a mainstream pop-opera. Just as appealing as their sound are their lyrics: tales of love, lust, joy, and sorrow, all with the Difford and TIlbrook wry sense of humor and sarcasm. With this album, Squeeze should well en joy the fruits of commercial success. Unlike 1981’s Gin Fan Tales Imit, with its many temporal mood swings, Babylon And On is check-full of singles. This is not to say that the band has lost their identity; they’ve simply redefined it, as they do with each new album. Every song on this album is a definite Squeeze song, complete with the pop quirks, humor, and intellect. The dif erence is, this time the songs have been fashioned into a much more marketable piece of work.

In fact, the first single, “The Hourglass,” hit the Top 40 after only a few short weeks on the charts. This cut is the first track on the album, and it gets things off to a very promising start. With its very jazzy horn back ing the catchy chorus, “The Hourglass,” about our crazed, timeedent world, is sure to explode all over the American and English charts.

The choice cuts come one right after another. On the bass-laden “Footprints,” a summer hit, the band finds itself in a state of bewildering, “ringing numbers, walking miles, and watching Cream’s blues guitarist, Clapton, perform on a stage that’s miles away. In the future, the band will be able to see all American and English charts.

After such a strong first side, Squeeze comes back again with a flipside to match. Stories of love gained and lost abound here. Difford gets his turn on lead vocals, on “Striking Matches,” to expostulate and ex erate over the previous night’s affair. Guest vocalist Monique Davies’ high pitched tone on backup makes for an interesting complement to Difford’s deep voice on this quick-picked pop eccentricity.

The character in “The Song of a Single Man” is the most touching of all. This poor human race finds his life going from bad to worse to death. No doubt about it, after hearing Difford’s haunting question “What you got to go home to?”, all who cannot answer will be searching for a home.

Another of the album’s best is the soul-flavored “The Waiting Game.” Tillbrook’s soothing, honest voc to turn melancholy as he awash his love in this mellifluous romant ic’s treasure.

Despite all its good points, the album ends on a sour note with a depressing pot shot at Ronald Reagan and the American public in “Bush’s Bay Me.” The final cut on this album, Difford’s surreal, “Politics of Chance,” is not only a criticism of the political garbage to Bono. The album’s best song, “The Prisoner,” is a very positive, and even comforting, reassurance of humanity in 1987. The film never degenerates into its own codswallop, but handles the romance, the comedy, and the adventure completely entertaining everyone who sees it. It must also be so unique that the viewer has never seen anything quite like it, and probably never will in the future. Classics are very rare, but Twentieth Century Fox’s The Princess Bride is a very good candidate. Not only is it the best love story to come around in a very long time, but it also handles the comedy and a rip-roaring action adventure.

Ed Vaira
Three Aspects of

Diamonds are forever
by Peter LaMassa

No sport is as closely scrutinized as America’s pastime, baseball. Maybe the sheer simplicity of the game has allured Americans the need to compile all the statistics – the numbers which can fill volumes of books or an immense “Diamondvision” scoreboard. Because art imitates life, it seems as though for every baseball statistic, there is a story, a comedy routine, a song, or a piece of art. These extensions of the game help take the personalities, events, and folklore of a century of baseball, and turn them into a fraction of that time.

Many of these pieces are on exhibit at the New York State Museum, one of several stops of the national tour of “Diamonds are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball,” sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. The 100 works of art and literature will be there through November 15.

Proceeding the art and literature is a 30-minute video entitled “Humorists and Musicians on Baseball.” Some extremely funny segments can be found here, such as George Carlin’s “Baseball vs. Football” routine, the magic-come-by team of Penn & Teller performing their warpie version of the 19th century poem “Casey at the Bat,” and two versions of the classic “Who’s on First.” routine, first, of course, by Abbott and Costello, and then by Sammy Davis Jr. (actually Billy Crystal) and Brother Theodore, from Crystal’s HBO special “Don’t Get Me Started.”

Moving into the main part of the program, pictures and artwork are visible, and crowd noises, which have been piped in over the public address system, fill spectators’ ears. The only missing element is, as Lesley Hazleton of the New York Times put it, “...the combined smell of hot dogs and marijuana drifting over the stands.”

The exhibits range from the expected, such as the late Andy Warhol’s oversized oil painting of Pete Rose’s 1985 baseball card, commemorating his 4,192 basehit (eclipsing Ty Cobb’s record), to the exciting, different and unexpected. Standing out among the exhibits were:

“The Non-denominational Church of St. Babe,” a wood, brass, plastic and film structure by Jim Marowich that looks like a regular house of worship until an up-close examination of the windows verifies that they are stained-glass renditions of such baseball greats as Ernie Banks, Casey Stengel, Stan Musial, Bob Gibson and many others, all complete with halos.

Death of the Umpire. It’s as if the artist, Elbert Davis had heard a phrase that has been thought, muttered, blurred out, and exclaimed at every baseball game, at any level. “Kill the umpire.” This oil painting depicts a baseball field empty except for the man in blue lying halfway between second and third base, face down in a pool of blood.

Jacob Kass’ “Picking a Team,” a colorful oil painting that was painted on an ordinary, everyday saw blade.

Photography is also well represented. A series of ten stop-action pictures shows Rickey Henderson successfully stealing second base, and 35 photos present: 3-pitch led Gaylord Perry going through his endless series of gesticulations leading up to a pitch.

The pieces of literature on display are every bit as colorful as the art, comparing baseball to everything from a war to a circus sideshow to good sex. The list of authors reads like a literature all-star team: Thomas Wolfe, Roger Angell, and Philip Roth, among others.

The free exhibit provides the public with the flavor of the sport and certainly is worth the trip downtown.

On the road to Montreal

A couple of Sundays ago, I went to Montreal for the Expo game. Being a New Yorker, my original motivation was to see the Mets. One of my friends knows knows an Expo player who said he would be able to get tickets. He got the tickets, and then we realized we had read the schedule incorrect! — the Phillips (not the Mets) would be in town. We decided to go anyway. We also decided that while we were in Canada, we would definitely have to buy some good Canadian beer.

It was a Sunday morning at 8 o’clock when we left for Montreal. We took my car. The weather on this day of monumental driving was, of course, rainy. At this point, you just kind of get the feeling that other purpose: BEER. And thirdly, I do possess an adventurous spirit, and this was sure to be an adventure. We all packed food for the day, and by 9:00 a.m., somewhere in the northern Adirondacks, Bob (not his real name) chugged a beer. Yes, a beer.

We ended up buying a 12-pack of Molson product with twice the alcohol content. I was smug about this, but I knew I had been in the car.

To Annoy Canadian Border Guards

“Get out of the car,” said the Canadian border guard. “Excuse me,” I replied, fingering the “GET OUT OF THE CAR NO QUESTIONS ASKED” sign. “You guessed it. They started to laugh. We all cracked up because they knew we were Norwegian. I turned to him and said to my other friend Jim, sure enough, they were Norwegian, so we decided that if they were going to be nice, we would do likewise.

I hope they don’t check under my car for anything illegal, and I just wanted to annoy the guard. This went on between me and the guard until it reached a joke, but they knew we were being kind.

They were really mad because no one drank any beer. Most supermarkets were closed, and the only place to buy beer was a convenience store.

This went on between me and the guard for almost 30 minutes. One guard decided to go with another guard.

We ended up buying a 12-pack of Molson product with twice the alcohol content.
I went to Montreal by Ian Berns

I always knew I had nothing illegal in the car, says the guard. "But if you want to check under the back seat," I said, feigning deafness. "The car NOW!"

They started to search the car. I went out because I didn't have to. I just wanted to get to Olympic Stadium, so we could I buy beer, I'm going to bust my chest. I'm not going to bust under the back seat," I said, "because I don't have to worry about you checking my car."

The guards lifted the seat and saw the game and decided to watch ... from behind the chain-link fence directly in back of home plate.

I stepped up to the game right in the middle because the kids were really distracting. The crowd was pissed off, which was good because it worked for me in- stead of against me. They knew me and knew I was enticed to stop the game, as the umpire. So, they started yelling at the kids to get the ball out there.

I had to tell you... I was wearing my Mets jersey, in the middle of a pennant race. While I was on line, all the French-Canadians were giving me dirty looks. I understood the language, and at that point, I didn't care.

It wasn't until the fourth inning that I knew what was going on. That's when we decided to get to find Bob's friends on the team. While we were walking in the left field, I began to notice all these beautiful women. I started fantasizing about doing unremar- knable things with them (Hey ~'m not gonna lie to you... but I could tell that he was screaming his head off.

"So, I pointed to another umpire who was standing near enough to hear the whole thing, "See my friend over there?" I asked the kid, pointing. "Well, he dared me to beat the shit out of you. The kid's eyes got really big, and he just took off."

It's not all fun and games, however. There is a tough side to the job. The spectators always think they're right and sometimes try to pressure the umpire into relenting about his decision. Yelling at the umpire becomes almost as integral a part of the viewing as knowing whose kid is up at bat.

To succeed, one must have faith in his own calls and stand behind them. That is as important as being in authority. And sometimes, overzealous parents must be quieted with controlled remarks that let them know they're being blown off.

When I told my friend I was going to use all this as an article, he was very pleased. And, just before we hung up, I quoted him.

"Thanks for the input, buddy."
Endless Summer Party

99 GFM

AND

Miller Genuine Draft
Present

Hooters

LIVE ON STAGE!

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10th, 7PM
RPI FIELDBOUSE, TROY, NY

TICKETS ARE ON SALE NOW AT:
RPI Fieldhouse Box Office
All TICKETRONs & CBO Outlets
Or Call (800) 922-2030
and of course, at the door

TICKETS
$7.00

See exhibits, demonstrations and displays by the following co-sponsors:

99 Cent Store
Mills

SUNYTUNES

Albany’s Record Co-Op
Enters Our Long Awaited
10th Anniversary Year!!

Check out our new c-d selection!
and our newly stocked import section
Maxell and TDK SA90 cassettes at embarrassing discounts!
Look for our big Inventory Clearance Sale!

SUNYTUNES - Campus Center
First Floor Next to Food Co-Op

Today’s Music at Yesterday’s Prices!
I saw a werewolf with a Chinese menu. A little old lady got mutilated late last night. Warren Zevon of London again...

Danielle M. Gagnon

Classic "Werewolves of London" and its bizarre surf-guitar version have gained a secondary primary hallmark, but there's a lot more to the artist than that. "Werewolves" is actually one of his softer songs, as fans who saw him in the Capital District: within the music industry, Zevon is best known for his punk-oriented sound.

The Warren Zevon tour is significant to the Capital District: within the music industry, Zevon is best known for his punk-oriented sound. The Warren Zevon/X show is significant to the Capital District: within the music industry, Zevon is best known for his punk-oriented sound.
Cine 10 (439-8300)
1. Like Father Like Son (PG-13) 2:05, 4:45, 7:15, 9:50, Fri, Sat, 12:05
2. Princess Bride (PG) 1:45, 4:10, 6:25, 9, Fri, Sat, 11:10
3. No Way Out (R) 2:10, 4, 6:45, 9:25, Fri, Sat, 11:50
4. The Principal (R) 1:40, 4:15, 6:50, 9, Fri, Sat, 11:30
5. Fatal Attraction (R) 1, 3:40, 6:30, 9:20, Fri, Sat, 11:50
6. The Pick Up Artist (PG-13) 2:40, 4:30, 7:25, 9:45, Fri, Sat, 11:40
7. Bojo Cop (R) 1:35, 4:25, 7:10, 9:40, Fri, Sat, 12 midnight
8. Someone To Watch Over Me (R) 1:25 3:45, 6:35, 9:15, Fri, Sat, 11:35
9. Three O’Clock High (PG-13) 1:10, 3:50, 7:05, 9, Sat, 11:45
10. Hell Raiser (R) 2:10, 4:10, 7:40, 10, Fri, Sat, 12, 05

Colonie Center (459-2170)
1. Hell Raiser (R) 7:50, 10:25, Fri, Sat, 12:25

Crossgates 12 (456-5678)
1. Stakeout (R) 7:20, 9:30, Sat, Sun, Mon, 2:15, 4:40
2. Wish You Were Here (R) 7, 9:15, Sat, Sun, 4:15

Fri, Sat, midnight showings of:
A. Rocky Horror (R)
B. Pink Floyd’s The Wall (R)

Spectrum (449-8995)
1. Pray For The Dying (R) 7:10, 9:15, Sat, Sun, 4:15
2. Wish You Were Here (R) 7, 9:15, Sat, Sun, 4:15
3. M*A*S*H (PG) 6:30, 9:25, Sun, 4
4. UA Hellman (459-9322)
1. Surrender (PG) 7:15, 9:25, Sat, Sun, Mon, 2, 3:45, 5:35
2. Dirty Dancing (PG-13) 7:30, 9:30, Sat, Sun, Mon, 2, 3:50, 5:30
Fri, Sat, midnight showings of:
A. Heavy Metal
B. Monty Python’s The Holy Grail

Univserity Cinemas
1. Outrageous Fortune (R) Fri, Sat, 7:30, 10 in LC18
2. Blue Velvet (R) Fri, Sat, 7:30, 10 in LC7

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Nerds in hell

“Consider yourself fortunate, Belsky... As curses go, that sure beats having your descendants strangled in the night by a walking corpse.”
To the Editor:
This letter has been written in response to one written by Mr. D’Angelo concerning the Bork confirmation. I agree with Mr. D’Angelo that the Senate should not proceed with Bork’s appointment. While Mr. Bork may say he is becoming less rigid in his voting tendencies, his record as a Supreme Court Justice is far superior to his record as a lower court judge. The court can Roe v. Wade gave women the constitutional right to a safe and legal abortion. Mr. Bork has stated publicly that he would vote to overturn that decision. While Bork would probably not intentionally do so, his voting record indicates he would make it illegal. This would result in court-buscher abortions, back alley and leads to the death and mutilation of countless women.

Granted, 200 years ago, abortion may have been the farthest thing from the framers’ minds, but protection of the citizen’s was not. So concerned were they, that they created the Bill of Rights giving the Constitution the ability to grow when needed, and to protect when needed. It is the Constitution’s job to protect its citizenry, of which women are a part. And, an amendment exists to reinforce this decision and risk the lives of a substantial number of this citizenry would be gross negligence of duty on the part of the government. I am about to have an open and volatile subject, but so are the unnecessary deaths of women that would be a result of Bork achieving his goal.

In fact, as Mr. D’Angelo says, there is a more rational basis for differential (preferential?) treatment of men and women other than simply sex attitudes, and I would argue that Mr. Bork’s actions go beyond the issue of separate bathrooms and the checking of boxes on scanner sheets. Where is the rationale behind a male having a low dropout rate, while a female college graduate (N.Y. Times) or a woman earning only 68 cents for every dollar a man earns at the same job? While Bork may not be the chairman of the board of the famed “He-Man-Woman-Haters” club (Our Gang Comed), he is certainly not the champion of the “different but equal” concept Mr. D’Angelo tries to put across.

I regret that Mr. D’Angelo suffered so at the hands of S.A.S.U., can say on only that an issue such as this emotions run high and can tend to lose sight of all else in pursuit of their end goal. I also regret that instead of seeking a balanced judiciary as a goal, many students are attempting to obtain a tool in the door of politics for their own special interest. I do hope people will be able to use the facts on Mr. Bork to come to some sort of rational position, and then act on that. I would rather see people play a part in their government than to see Bork get appointed because he’s certain c Bethlehem native. I am not at that point in time that we will then have to call the entire system into question, not just one facet of it.

Cabbie Crimes

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to Roderick William’s article “Student Activist Keeping Tabs on Wrongdoings.” (Friday Profile, October 2, edition) I describe NYPIRG member and alumni, a student, depicted “little cheese” “freshmen from New City,” in-advertently stumbling on a Taxi-rate scandal, speecheading an investigation of the corruption, and cur-rently “working with the city about the ... abuses found.” The story of the individual’s quixotic struggle against an unfair system is unrealistic, optimistic as a Baker bridge drive, and an insult to the intelligence of the reader. We are to believe that NYPIRG has made a shocking discovery, 16,000 students gasp in horror, and a just resolution will soon come about? Anyone naive enough to believe this has probably by now skipped down to Indian Lake in a taxicab and been thrown in the woods naked. The whole thing sounds like an old “Quincy” re-run. I sym- pathize that a student has been harassed, but I also have some news. Virtually any student who has ever caught a ride from a downtown bus station, has had a story. Have they’re kidding? Must we as students collectively pay by John D’Angelo concerning the Bork confirmation, try. While Mr. Bork may say he is becoming less rigid in their funding policies? Certainly not. The reasons are obvious. Our “Public Interest Research Group” has with a great deal of money, but he would be able to make this choice more clear and so onto the fare. The cabbies did it when I was a sopho- or to the fairest of them all, women’s rights. Women have been a part, and an amendment exists to reinforce this decision and risk the lives of a substantial number of this citizenry would be gross negligence of duty on the part of the government. It is at that point we will then have to call the entire system into question, not just one facet of it.

Cabbie Crimes

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to Roderick William’s article “Student Activist Keeping Tabs on Wrongdoings.” (Friday Profile, October 2, edition) I describe NYPIRG member and alumni, a student, depicted “little cheese” “freshmen from New City,” in-advertently stumbling on a Taxi-rate scandal, speecheading an investigation of the corruption, and cur-rently “working with the city about the ... abuses found.” The story of the individual’s quixotic struggle against an unfair system is unrealistic, optimistic as a Baker bridge drive, and an insult to the intelligence of the reader. We are to believe that NYPIRG has made a shocking discovery, 16,000 students gasp in horror, and a just resolution will soon come about? Anyone naive enough to believe this has probably by now skipped down to Indian Lake in a taxicab and been thrown in the woods naked. The whole thing sounds like an old “Quincy” re-run. I sym- pathize that a student has been harassed, but I also have some news. Virtually any student who has ever caught a ride from a downtown bus station, has had a story. Have they’re kidding? Must we as students collectively pay by John D’Angelo concerning the Bork confirmation, try. While Mr. Bork may say he is becoming less rigid in their funding policies? Certainly not. The reasons are obvious. Our “Public Interest Research Group” has with a great deal of money, but he would be able to make this choice more clear and so onto the fare. The cabbies did it when I was a sopho- or to the fairest of them all, women’s rights. Women have been a part, and an amendment exists to reinforce this decision and risk the lives of a substantial number of this citizenry would be gross negligence of duty on the part of the government. It is at that point we will then have to call the entire system into question, not just one facet of it.

Cabbie Crimes

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to Roderick William’s article “Student Activist Keeping Tabs on Wrongdoings.” (Friday Profile, October 2, edition) I describe NYPIRG member and alumni, a student, depicted “little cheese” “freshmen from New City,” in-advertently stumbling on a Taxi-rate scandal, speecheading an investigation of the corruption, and cur-rently “working with the city about the ... abuses found.” The story of the individual’s quixotic struggle against an unfair system is unrealistic, optimistic as a Baker bridge drive, and an insult to the intelligence of the reader. We are to believe that NYPIRG has made a shocking discovery, 16,000 students gasp in horror, and a just resolution will soon come about? Anyone naive enough to believe this has probably by now skipped down to Indian Lake in a taxicab and been thrown in the woods naked. The whole thing sounds like an old “Quincy” re-run. I sym- pathize that a student has been harassed, but I also have some news. Virtually any student who has ever caught a ride from a downtown bus station, has had a story. Have they’re kidding? Must we as students collectively pay by John D’Angelo concerning the Bork confirmation, try. While Mr. Bork may say he is becoming less rigid in their funding policies? Certainly not. The reasons are obvious. Our “Public Interest Research Group” has with a great deal of money, but he would be able to make this choice more clear and so onto the fare. The cabbies did it when I was a sopho- or to the fairest of them all, women’s rights. Women have been a part, and an amendment exists to reinforce this decision and risk the lives of a substantial number of this citizenry would be gross negligence of duty on the part of the government. It is at that point we will then have to call the entire system into question, not just one facet of it.
DEADLINES: Tuesday by 3 p.m. for Friday’s issue Friday by 3 p.m. for Tuesday’s issue

RATES: $1.50 for the first 10 words. $0.10 each additional word. Any bold word is 10 cents extra.

Any bold word is 10 cents extra. $2 extra for a box. $2 extra for a extra. Minimum charge is $1.50.

Classified ads are being accepted at Couples Plus during regular business hours. Classified ads will be accepted at the time of insertion. NO CHECKS WILL BE ACCEPTED. Minimum charge for black and white is $25 per issue.

No ads will be printed without a full name, address or phone number on the advertising form. Credit may be extended, but NO REFUNDS will be given. Editorial policy will not permit ads to be printed which contain blatant profanity or those that are in poor taste. We reserve the right to reject any material deemed unsuitable for publication.

All advertising seekers or soliciting parts of the human body will not be accepted. Classified advertisers seeking an exception to this policy must receive permission from the Editor in Chief of the Albany Student Press. If you have any questions or problems concerning classified advertising, please feel free to call or stop by the Business Office.

JOBS

PART TIME HELP WANTED.

Compiling list of names for occa- sional part time help in hard- ware. Phone 472-9703, 9 to 5.

WANTED PART TIME DRIVERS to deliver extra lunch and dinnerette. Must have car. Call or apply in person. 2 Westlake Plaza, Right Central Ave., Colonie. (Next to Garcia’s) 869-9007 After 7pm.

Earn $hundreds weekly$ in your job. Part time positions available. For information call: 224-2736.

NEED YOUR PAPERS TYPED? Look no further. Fast, reliable, neat typing is only a phone call away. $1 per page. Call Tracie at 442-6371.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING AND WORD PROCESSING SERVICE. Experienced. Dependable. Call today.

ASSAYS & REPORTS 1,278 to choose from — all subjects you name. Phone 472-8453. Or write to: 820 2a. St. Essays & Reports 1220 Main Ave. #709-54, Las Vegas, NV 89109. Complete research also available at no extra cost. Call 472-8453.

GETTING PERSONAL

Hi (name), hello! See, I didn’t forget you this time. I’m not such a bad girlfighter after all!

Stew. It’s just like old times. I miss you badly. wish you could see me. Love ya.

Rae.

Thanks for your kind Hoodlum during your crisis situation — even though I didn’t take advantage of it. You’re a great friend! I love you.

Raura

Neded: Tutor for Chemistry 120, 470-419. Call 442-6716 for details.

Hi, Rumblebe.

I love you more than ever. You are undoubtedly the best boyfriend in the whole world!

Nut, nut, nut, nuttify!

WATER ON WHEELS LTD. Giant Hot Tub Rental. Delivering to all festive occasions. Private, Sanitized, Enclosed. For more details: 456-3542.

WINTER IS HERE! Get your pool ready for next year at a fraction of the regular price! Call 472-6716.

SERVICES

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

The Telegraph ‘88 Staff WANTS YOU! Watch for details on how to apply to the TELETHON ‘88 STAFF.

Readers:
The more I think about this past year the more I think about the top of my bookcase, it reminds me of many special moments from the past, but don’t be too concerned that it’s filling up rather quickly. I’ll just clear off another shelf.

— A Happy Clam

$5.00 OFF ANY SERVICE WITH THIS AD & SUNY ID

Call for Apt: 869-7817 Expires 11/30/87

Dance Nights

12 Central Avenue

Saturday, Friday

Sunday

(518) 434-2023

QE2 MONDAYS LADIES NIGHT REAL GEORGE

ALWAYS ONE FREE WITH COUPON — MONDAY (PEOPLE ARE)

May THIS BE YOUR BEST YEAR & THE BEST CHEER LAB

BIRTHDAY PARTY

At home, or in the office.

WATERMPLOYEES —

SQUISH: I know I can be obnoxious (I can't help it). Even though you think I'm not, there are, I still want to be a good friend. Sorry for the aggravation. a.j.e. Joe M.

The Telegraph ‘88 Staff WANTS YOU! Watch for details on how to apply to the TELETHON ‘88 STAFF.

Readers:
The more I think about this past year the more I think about the top of my bookcase, it reminds me of many special moments from the past, but don’t be too concerned that it’s filling up rather quickly. I’ll just clear off another shelf.

— A Happy Clam

$5.00 OFF ANY SERVICE WITH THIS AD & SUNY ID

Call for Apt: 869-7817 Expires 11/30/87

Dance Nights

12 Central Avenue

Saturday, Friday

Sunday

(518) 434-2023

QE2 MONDAYS LADIES NIGHT REAL GEORGE

ALWAYS ONE FREE WITH COUPON — MONDAY (PEOPLE ARE)

May THIS BE YOUR BEST YEAR & THE BEST CHEER LAB

BIRTHDAY PARTY

At home, or in the office.

WATERMPLOYEES —
Students urged to support fight against racism

By Allyson Morgan

The African National Congress (ANC) has been unjustly accused by Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) of being “a group of radicals intent on violently overthrowing the South African government.” In reality, the ANC, since its birth in 1912, has been a peaceful organization whose sole objective is to win reforms that would give civil rights to blacks.

In early September, YAF posted advertising the movie A Time for Candor were seen across this campus. Along with the movie advertisement being biased, racist slurs were directed at the ANC. This blatant display of racism promoted many outraged students and organizations to come forward. Within hours of the posters being viewed, a formal protest was planned, and supported by eight university organizations. George Lewis, of Minority Affairs Office coordinated a massive rally to take place in front of the Campus Center Ballroom. SA Minority Affairs, Peace Project, Pan Caribbean, Albany State Black Alliance (ASUBA), Student Association of South Africa, Young Socialist Alliance, and the Student Coalition Against Apartheid gave their full support and assistance to ANC. It was the first unification of all minority groups on campus this year.

Inside the Ballroom, YAF drew less than 30 people to view the movie. The movie A Time for Candor is a clipped version of South Africa and the ANC. The movie is distributed to foreign businessmen to show the terrorist acts of ANC. They are trying to discourage divestment, falsely claiming it will lead to Communism. What the movie fails to show is the problems of apartheid—total degradation of a race of people.

In contrast to the inside of the ballroom, more than two hundred supporters turned out. The tension due to the injustice was prevalent. Several representatives from supporting groups spoke to clarify the position of the ANC. The Reform not Revolution myth was dispelled. YAF would like to believe that change will come about slowly in South Africa. On the contrary, in a society where peaceful forms of opposition have attempted and violently suppressed, reform is not an option. In a society, freedom is limited and mass murder is a daily reality, reform is not an option. For a society such as South Africa, the only hope lies in revolution. That is the only option.

During the rally, supporters were passive yet powerful. Posters denouncing the South African regime and support for the ANC were shown. Charts of “Viva ANC” (long live ANC) and “Down with Botha” (Prime Minister of South Africa) were strongly throughout the crowd. Clergy and friends in support of the South African rights struggle proved the dedication of the protestors.

It is a sad yet inspirational thought that through blatant demonstrations do the students of the University come together. We must thank YAF for making students aware of the the need to unify against racism at SUNYA, in America, and all over the world.

The SA Minority Affairs Office would like to extend its appreciation to all those who came out to participate in the rally. The minority students showed their much needed support and the other students showed the minority students that they are not alone. We would like to thank all who made the demonstration a peacefully assertive reality.

Elections

Front Page

The candidate who unofficially won the election, Jason Epstein, cannot be installed as a Central Council representative until a decision is made on this case, Goldsmith said.

Currently, there is only one Supreme Court justice serving. SA policy states that seven judges are necessary to hold a court session.

Therefore, this case will not be heard until six more judges are appointed, which should be next week.

“Even if I had told the candidate to lie, that’s no good,” Harrison said. “My job is to oversee and make sure the election’s run correctly. That’s why the candidates have to write a written note to the elections commission. I must have said 20 to 30 times that.”

For more information contact Dave Clarke and Student Association Minority Affairs Coordinator George Lewis.

Grouper law

Front Page

The revised ordinance does not affect the basic law, however, and “we’re raising constitutional issues,” Zumbo said.

“There are a couple of options open to us,” he said, including withdrawing the complaint. The lawsuit would mean dropping the lawsuit until new students plaintiffs were willing to file a complaint. According to Zumbo, finding new plaintiffs might not be an easy task, since “the city is not vigorously enforcing the law.”

No new students have been charged since Zumbo began working for SA in June, and “we can’t go actively looking.”

The 26 students charged last October had their cases dismissed without penalty when they found alternative housing, according to Oliver, who agreed with Zumbo that the city has not been strict about enforcing the law recently. “We’re hopeful that the city has concentrated its code enforcement efforts on more important issues,” he said.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1987 □ ALBANY STUDENT PRESS 9
JUST SAY 'YES'
AND THE
JOB IS YOURS

✓ YES, I want to earn $5 per hour.
✓ YES, I want a 30% associate discount at all Record Town and Tape World stores.
✓ YES, I want FREE transportation to and from work.
✓ YES, I want to work one - or all - of the following shifts:
  Saturday 8am-6pm, or 8am-1pm, or 1pm-6pm.
  Sunday 8am-6pm, or 8am-1pm, or 1pm-6pm.
✓ YES, I will be one of the first 100 SUNYA students to bring the coupon below to Trans World Music Corp. recruiters at the Job Service office in the Campus Center on Oct. 13th, between 10am and 4pm.

Wow, I can earn up to $100 every weekend!

Yeah, and I'll save 30% on every record, cassette, and compact disc I want!

Name:
Soc. Sec. #:
Address:
Phone #:

Check the shift(s) you want to work:
☐ Saturday, 8am-6pm
☐ Saturday, 8am-1pm
☐ Saturday, 1pm-6pm
☐ Sunday, 8am-6pm
☐ Sunday, 8am-1pm
☐ Sunday, 1pm-6pm

Remember, you must be one of the first 100 SUNYA students to bring this coupon to Trans World Music Corp. recruiters at the Job Service office in the Campus Center on October 13th, between 10am and 4pm.
Albany booters fall to New Paltz, 2-1

By Frank Calderon

Omens can lead to great triumphs or bitter losses. But who believes in omens? In the Wednesday afternoon soccer match between the Great Danes of Albany and the New Paltz Hawks, omens played a major part in the Danes heartbreaking 2-1 loss. Albany, coming off an impressive 4-2 victory over Potsdam State, played and controlled most of the first half. Exceptional offensive aggressiveness led the Danes to hit the goal post twice within the first two minutes. This failure to capitalize would soon prove to be more foretelling than anything else. Although the Danes controlled the first half, they failed to capitalize on any opportunities.

Halfback Chris Chruma commented, "We played well but we just couldn't connect. The worst omen, of course, is a goal by the opposing team. This type of omen plagued the Danes very late in the first half. With just two seconds remaining, a New Paltz striker, touched in a deflecting ball to give New Paltz a 1-0 lead going into the second half."

"Not blaming the muddy field for our loss, but the ball just stuck in the ground," said Chruma.

The fact that New Paltz had scored very late in the half was very frustrating for the Danes. But this was to painfully appear again.

The second half again saw the Danes dominate. Finally, Albany put together the combination of striker Lee Tshanthrit to Eric Cifuentes on a long pass that Cifuentes easily booted in to tie the score at 1-1. The Danes continued to play well and control the game. However, again they failed to capitalize on plays they were creating. So, as the fates would have it, the Danes would not win today.

With just two minutes remaining in the game, New Paltz managed to cross the ball to an unmarked midfielder who promptly touched it in to seal the Danes fate.

Bill Knapp stated, "our midfield played well but we couldn't put anything together."

Twice, New Paltz had scored late in respective halves. But that is all they needed as Albany lost, 2-1. It was obvious to any spectator that Wednesday afternoon the Danes were clearly the aggressor, but this was to painfully appear as Albany lost, 2-1. It was obvious to any spectator that Wednesday afternoon the Danes were clearly the aggressor, but this was to painfully appear as Albany lost, 2-1.

The Danes dominate the New Paltz Hawks Wednesday but just couldn't put the ball in the net in a 2-1 loss. Albany, coming off an impressive 4-2 victory over Potsdam State, played and controlled most of the first half. Exceptional offensive aggressiveness led the Danes to hit the goal post twice within the first two minutes. This failure to capitalize would soon prove to be more foretelling than anything else. Although the Danes controlled the first half, they failed to capitalize on any opportunities. The worst omen, of course, is a goal by the opposing team. This type of omen plagued the Danes very late in the first half. With just two seconds remaining, a New Paltz striker, touched in a deflecting ball to give New Paltz a 1-0 lead going into the second half. "Not blaming the muddy field for our loss, but the ball just stuck in the ground," said Chruma.

The fact that New Paltz had scored very late in the half was very frustrating for the Danes. But this was to painfully appear again.

Twice, New Paltz had scored late in respective halves. But that is all they needed as Albany lost, 2-1. It was obvious to any spectator that Wednesday afternoon the Danes were clearly the aggressor, but this was to painfully appear as Albany lost, 2-1. It was obvious to any spectator that Wednesday afternoon the Danes were clearly the aggressor, but this was to painfully appear as Albany lost, 2-1.

The Danes dominated the New Paltz Hawks Wednesday but just couldn't put the ball in the net in a 2-1 loss.

Correction

Tuesday's women's cross-country article omitted the placing and time of the Danes' first place runner, Barbara Ascher. She finished in a time of 20:31 and finished eighth overall. We regret the omission.

Great Danes spike North Adams State

By Stef McDonald

The trip Albany State women's volleyball team took to Massachusetts to defeat North Adams College on Wednesday was longer than the competition itself.

"It was over very quickly — in about 45 minutes," said senior Amy Rosenberg of the Danes latest victory. "We travelled for longer than we played," added Coach Pat Dwyer.

There weren't any problems for the Danes Wednesday night in their 15-3, 15-8 pounding of North Adams. And there wasn't much excitement either.

"We didn't have to put much effort into it," said sophomore Jil Foos. "They barely returned the ball after the serves," said Rosenberg. "There were very few volleys."

In the first few games Dwyer played the six starters and rotated one replacement. "We totally dominated," said Rosenberg. "We were in control the whole match. Then for the third game, everyone played and the Danes' tried out some new rotations and substitutions. Again everyone played and they played well," said Dwyer.

A new line up was tested and the Danes concentrated on specializing at the net and working on their hitting and setting. I started with a whole new line-up which I hadn't done before," said Dwyer.

"It isn't get critical," said Dwyer. "We got a lead, they caught up a little, then we got a lead and they caught up a little. But we won." "We've done a lot of substituting," said Dwyer. "The more people play the better we can expect."
Great Dane netmen sweep local rivals

By Christopher Scriba

The Great Danes men's tennis team can truly say "two out of three isn't bad." Competing in three dual meets this week, including two in consecutive days, the Danes beat RPI and Siena but lost to Army.

Army entered the match with a perfect 3-0 record and kept up their unblemished mark by defeating the Danes, six matches to three. The winners against the Cadets were number six singles player Jeff Brennan and Adam Cohen in the number-four slot.

On Wednesday, the Danes were victorious over the RPI Engineers, seven matches to two. For the Danes, second-flight player Tom Roe beat RPI's Dave Loconts, 6-2, 6-4. Third singles player Marc Singer won over Chris Sterman 6-0, 6-2. Cohen was victorious again, this time defeating Scott Barwick 6-3, 6-0. Dennis Traver had no problem with Sid Bhavnaga 6-3, 6-3. Jeff Brennan, who, Coach Bob Lewis says "it's improving a lot as a singles player," beat Marcus Bieber in straight sets 6-0, 6-0.

The only Albany singles loss was Mike Worth, being defeated by RPI's strong first singles player, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1. On the doubles side, Albany took two out of three matches. The teams of Traver and Brennan and Worth and Cohen won and Singer and Roe lost.

Coach Lewis commented, "RPI isn't as good as they have been in the past couple of years. When you beat a team bad, it isn't always an indication of how good a team is." Looking into yesterday's Sienna match, Coach Lewis was looking "to play more younger players, a chance to help the team.""

Dane Spikers win a laugh over North Adams

By Steve Silberglied

The Dane Spikers won a laugh over North Adams. See page 11.

Dane harriers claim Hunter Invitational title

By Steve Silberglied

The Dane Spikers win a laugh over North Adams. See page 11.