A LABOR DAY MESSAGE

from CSEA President Joe McDermott

On the highways, in school yards and the public parks, in nursing homes and hospitals and within the vast local and state government offices throughout The Empire State, CSEA members are on the job serving New Yorkers. Every day, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

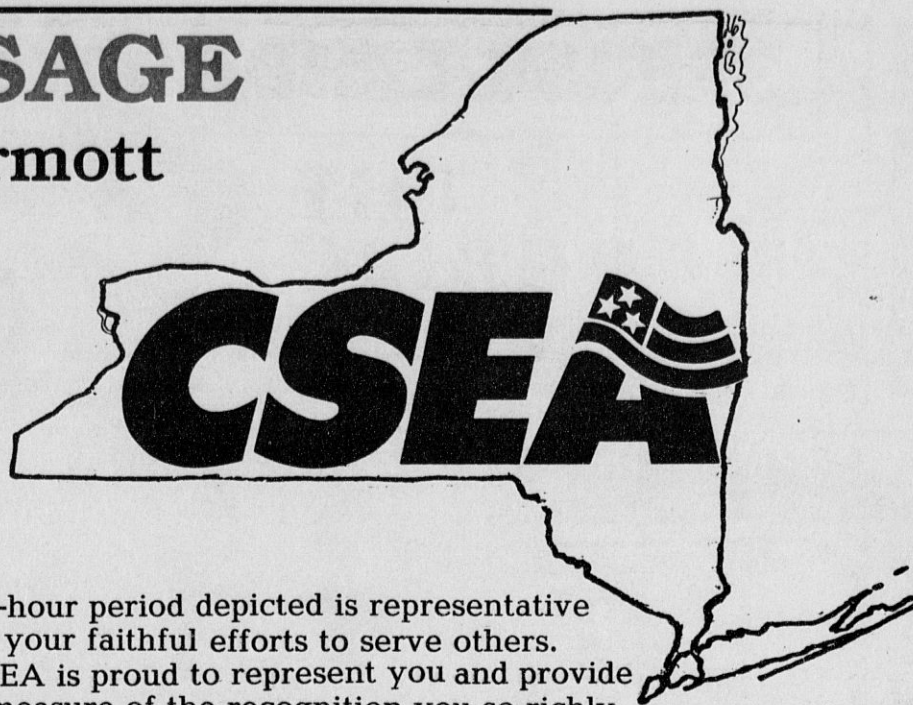

You should take great pride that your work touches the lives of all New Yorkers and contributes in an important way to the quality of life in our state.

Around the clock, every day of the year, you staff our hospitals, care for our mentally ill and retarded, respond to emergencies, repair and maintain our roads and bridges, protect our public health and our environment, drive our children to school and handle the countless other details that make New York work.

CSEA members contribute a great deal off the job as well. You serve your volunteer fire departments, serve on school boards and community boards and councils, organize food drives to help the needy and manage your child's little league team.

One measure of the excellence of the services you provide on and off the job is that your tireless effort and commitment are often taken for granted.

This special Labor Day edition of The Public Sector is dedicated to the more than 250,000 active and retired public employees represented by CSEA. The typical 24-hour period depicted is representative of your faithful efforts to serve others. CSEA is proud to represent you and provide a measure of the recognition you so richly deserve.

Labor Day is a celebration of the working people and their achievements. Labor Day is your day. Celebrate.
