Dr. A. R. Brubacher was among a number of prominent educators who spoke at a conference of teachers of Schenectady county, held last Monday and Tuesday at Excelsior High School, Stop 4, Schenectady-Albany road.

Dr. G. A. Painter has resumed his duties at College after his recent illness.

Prof. Gillett left on Friday, October 14, to speak at the New York State School of Agriculture, Morrisville, on "Time and Labor Devices in the Home."

Prof. Gillett held open house at 151 Western avenue on Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5 p. m. A large number of guests enjoyed the hospitality of the Home Management House. Prof. Gillett will be at home every Wednesday at the same time and the faculty, students and their friends are invited.

STARTLING GROWTH OF ORCHESTRA

Wanted.—Two cellists, two banjoists. Apply State College Orchestra. Castella Hees, president; Eleanor Abrams, secretary.

Qualifications.—(1) An instrument in your possession. (2) Ability to appear for practice Tuesday evenings between 7:15 and 9 o'clock.

Home Address.—380 Western avenue. Telephone West 3470-W.

You have read the advertisement—be the first to answer it.

The qualifications are easy to meet but are, however, very important. You will notice that we don't want the cellist without the instrument—we have no money with which to buy you one. You will also notice that for fear of scaring some one away we did not say anything about ability to play it. However, we judge that you will be able to read the notes and pick out the parts at the required orchestra practice. The drilling of each group of instruments over the difficult passages is especially valuable, so that if you do not know your part at first you will have mastered it with Mr. Candlyn's thorough attention to each of the parts. Opportunity is given each member to practice his part at home.

It is a necessity, moreover, that you be able to attend rehearsals regularly, whether or not you are obtaining credit in the course. The efficiency of the orchestra as a whole depends largely upon this fact.

After hearing these simple qualifications, can't you consider yourself eligible? We hope that you won't think of regular attendance as a weekly bore to you, for it is the source of thorough pleasure to the members in the orchestra at present. The enthusiasm shown by the unanimous desire of the orchestra to take the music home should be very encouraging to you.

The present registration in the orchestra is twenty-five, a considerable increase since last year. The increase in the noise we can make is proportional to the increase in our numbers.

We can boast of the following instruments as appearing in our orchestra for the first time: Trombone, played by Hayes, '25; the cornet, played by Miter, '25; the banjo-mandolin, played by Florence Dorsey, '23, and the banjo, played by Hayes. The flute, which has reappeared, is played by Crane, '25.

It is quite difficult, and, moreover, impossible for Hayes to play two instruments at the same time.

CONVOCATION TO HAVE INTERESTING SPEAKERS

College Students Invited

Addresses by State officials, headed by Governor Miller and by educational dignitaries of the United States, will mark the fifty-seventh convocation of the Regents of the University of the State of New York, October 20 and 21, in Chancellors' Hall in the State Education Building. Besides the addresses, honorary degrees will be conferred upon Dr. John H. Finley, former State Commissioner of Education, and other noted men who have made their pasts in the University. This function will be performed at the closing exercises Friday night.

The assembly will convene at 8:15 Thursday evening, with the Hon. Chester S. Lloyd, LL.D., Chancellor of the University of the State of New York, presiding. The Rev. John Kelman, D.D., LL.D., of the University of Aberdeen, New York City, will deliver the invocation address, which will be followed by the Chancellor's annual address and the presentation of Dr. Frank Pierpont Graves, LL.D., new State Commissioner of Education, as president of the University.

The principal address on Thursday will be made by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, New York City, who has just returned to the United States from a visit to Europe where he delivered the address at the laying of the corner-stone of the new college at Louvain, Belgium. Undoubtedly Dr. Butler will give a talk which will be of great interest to college students.

Thursday morning will be devoted to a reception in the rotunda of the State Education Building, tendered by the Board of Regents to guests and delegates. Dr. Brubacher, of State College, will represent this institution at the convocation.

The Friday morning session of the convocation will be presided over by the Hon. Adelbert Moot, LL.D., Vice-chancellor of the University. The feature of this session will be addresses by noted educators as follows: "What Education Means to America," Lotus D. Coffman, Ph.D., president of the University of Minnesota; a discussion led by Frederick C. Ferry, LL.D., president of Hamilton College, and Albert Leonard, Ph.D., superintendent of schools in New Rochelle; "Principles Determining the Content of the High School Course," Alexander Inglis, Ph.D., Graduate School of Education, Harvard University; another discussion led by John H. Denbigh, Ph.D., principal of Packer College Institute, Brooklyn, and Sherman L. Howe, B.A., president of the Association of Academic Principals at Carthage.

G. A. A. TO HAVE SNAPPY FROLIC

The first gym frolic of the year is going to be in the College gym on Friday evening, October 21. The gym frolics are given by the Girls' Athletic Association, and this is the first opportunity of the year for all the G. A. A. girls to "get together." Let everyone who enjoys a hilarious time come dressed in bloomers and middie. Pull out your old sneakers, or buy new ones, and give them an initiation before wearing them to gym class. Show your spirit and wear your class colors.

There will be new stunts, and a refreshment committee has been appointed. So you will be sure of eats (perhaps lollypops). All ye people who are searching for the fountain of eternal youth come to this frolic. You will feel as youthful as a child of twelve when the lights are snapped out and you are unceremoniously forced to leave a long time before you are ready.

TO THE PACIFIC IN 80 DAYS

By Dr. Gertrude E. Douglas

To complete the western picture, some cowboys sprang up from nowhere and gave us a fine exhibition of horsemanship. We appreciated this the more later, when we missed the round-up at Cody by a single day, owing to car trouble.

The Yellowstone trail led us through some weirdly beautiful country in Wyoming, over prairie roads, mere trails in many cases, through rugged red and yellow cliffs, almost bare of vegetation and with very few traces of human habitation. We wondered indeed where the children lived who attended the fine rural schools which we passed frequently—and still more who paid the taxes to keep them going. For many miles we followed the old Oregon trail and our respect for the pioneers increased as we penetrated farther and farther into the desert and realized the hardships which they must have endured. We entered the park from the east, through Cody and the Shoshone canyon, and, let me advise you, if you are contemplating a trip to the park some day, to go this way by all means. As far as scenery goes, the rugged canyon of the Shoshone river can boast of more beauty than the park itself. Can you imagine our delight upon camping for the first time in a real primeval forest with pine needles, a mossy creek, wild flowers resembling those we find at home, with the sun setting behind a huge crag of deep red rock?

I am appalled at the idea of telling you anything about the Yellowstone! I can simply say that the book descriptions are not overdone, and that the photographers can never do it justice. You must go and see it for yourself! I smile now as I recall my first impressions, culled from geography books. I thought it a great barren waste of colored limestone, with hot

A PLEA FOR THE FUTURE

The interest of the world will shortly be centered upon the conference on the limitation of armaments at Washington.

That the young people of this country realize the magnitude of its importance to them and to future generations is evidenced by their attitude at the present time. One of the farthest reaching religious organizations, embracing the youth of several nations, has taken for its slogan "A Warless World by 1923."

A few weeks ago President Hibben of Princeton University, in his matriculation sermon, suggested that an association of students in the nation's universities be formed to assist the Washington conference to end the international race for supremacy in armaments.

As a result 1,200 students of Penn State College have unanimously resolved to challenge the students of Europe to join the undergraduate bodies of America in such a concerted effort that there will be no doubt that the men of the future desire permanent peace.

They further propose that every college in the land send delegations on December 3 to the Disarmament Conference to present their pleas in the name of the nation's young manhood to "end wars."

When one considers that war eats at the foundation of the future, that it claims the young men as its victims, such resolutions and movements have particular significance.

THE LIFE OF ABBIE A.

Abbie Augusta is a junior; yet no one is really aware of the fact. The reason for such a calamity is this: Abbie came to college with one desire, "to go through" college, and that is precisely what she is doing, just as she might walk through a park, unchanged and unchanging. When she was a freshman she was afraid to go anywhere for fear of spilling ice cream on her second best, or being obliged to get acquainted with someone. She never went to a class meeting, never used the front door, never spoke to an upper classman and never, never did anything for anyone but herself. And all this time the other Co-Eds were having the time of their lives, making friends, teasing the sophomores and getting "billets doux." Sophomore year Abbie Augusta kept right on "going through" college, with only a few people, such as registrars and professors, knowing she existed. As a junior, even the professors regard her as a mere name on a class card. To climax her college career she will be listed in the Ped. under the title "a senior." Could any college biography be more pathetic than this? No, never!

Now dear Abbie A's in the bud or flower, because there are a lot of you right here now. Wake up! Start in making friends, no matter what class you are in; do something for someone if it be only carrying books, telling time or listening sympathetically to a tale of woe. Be a sport—give and take! Don't just "go through," but dive into college life. Make a big splash, because here is the place to be seen and heard!

A QUESTION

When twenty-two was a freshman class, June exams began June second; by the end of the first week the freshman's year was over, and by the end of the next, upper classmen were free. The large number of girls who had planned to go to the Silver Bay Conference were able to go. State College sent a delegation of about thirty, enough to compare favorably in numbers with the groups sent from Mount Holyoke, Vassar, Welles and other colleges of the vicinity.

In the year 1919-1920 it was decided to give us two weeks' vacation at Easter, and to prolong second semester one week in June. Students favored the longer Easter vacation enough not to object to the later close of the semester. Although a large number of girls had planned to go to Silver Bay, the delegation was reduced to two. Examinations conflicted with the conference. Consequently we heard much less about Silver Bay last year, and received less from the delegates' contact with students of other colleges.

Last year the Easter vacation seemingly snapped back to a one-week period automatically, and as June approached inquiries brought out the fact that the time of closing in June was not to snap back a week. Y. W. girls who were able to go to Silver Bay at all, did so only after arranging for special exams. The delegation numbered ten. The girls who attended the conference very naturally observed that we were among the very last colleges in time of closing. Most colleges were closed at least a week before State. Perhaps it is a matter which only those who intend going to Silver Bay need consider, but the objection to the lengthening of the college year seems to become more general as time goes on.

May we hear the opinions of others who may or may not have a different point of view?

ED SAYS:

Gee, Louie,
I may have been a wreck when I came here, but I sure am reckless now. Yep, they want me to be on the football team, now. I told you that I'd get there some day. And 'tain't because they's only eleven men in Collidge, neither. They's twelve, counting a lame guy. Leave it to me, Louie, eh? They can't keep a good man down, can they? Here's one they can't—by jiminees.

Say, Louie, did I tell you what happened to me last week? I was going up the stairs right in back of a swell pair of Janes. All of a sudden, one of them dropped her hankachif. I don't suppose you'd a known what to do in a case like that, would you, Louie? I didn't think so. But I didn't buy Pumpernickel's "What to do in Parlor or Piazza and at Parades" for nothing. No sree, bob. I just leaned over nachal like and got it for her.

You'd orter heard the compliment she paid me.

"Gee, he looks as if he had a strong back," she says aloud to her friend. Then she said sumpin more under her breath that I couldn't quite ketch. Alls I could hear was sumpin about "mind." But she was sportin her girl friend that she thought I must have a strong mind, too, eh Louie? It kinda makes a fellah feel good to hear some one besides himself talk about how slick he is once in a while, eh Louie? You bet!

Then, "You saved my life," she says kinda thoughtful like.

I knew she was goin to say that. Leave it to me, Louie. I can tell what theyre thinkin', can't I, Louie? You bet. So's I was ready for her.

"Give me a nickel, thats all its worth," I says meanin thats all her life was worth, Louie. Pretty good, aint it? I'll say so. Besides you know how devilish I am, Louie. I'm just so full of the devil that I can't keep it in all the time, can I Louie. You're right, I can't. I just got to let it out once in a while.

And, would you believe me, here's what she slings back at me. "Where was you when that was pulled off first?" she says, sarcastic like. "I know where you was. You wasn't," she says. "That stuff may be new in Colioes," she says, "but it was passé in the Mayflower." Can you beat that.

Well, sir, you could a knocked me out with an elastic crow bar, I was so goldarned riled up. But you gotta admit that when it comes to handin it back as fast as you get it, I'm like the handle on a teapot, Louie—I'm there, eh? You bet. Not always there and never in it, either.

"Your folks don't keep a pig any more since you came to Collidge, do they?" I says just as sarcastic as her.

And I'll be gosh hanged if she didn't haff right out in my face. Yes sree. Thats what she did.

She kept on a laffin so that I commenced to get het up around the ears. And she would stare at my collar which I just had sharpened—or I mean cleaned—at the laundry.

All to once she says, "Look out," she says, "or you'll set that celluloid collar o' yours on fire if you don't stop blushin'" she says.

I declare, Louie, these wimmen'll be the death o' me yet. Aw Shucks, when they're handin' it to me theyre layin' offa somebody else, what do you say, eh? Aint that right.

The Prof that teaches me my same old sore is the one that taught the French to say "They shall not pass." Am havin' an awful time with the course.

Hopin' you're the same, EDDIE.

ORGANIZATIONS

Music Club.

The Music Club will meet Friday, October 21, in room B at 4:15. There will be a program and very important business will be taken up. Will every member for the following year please be present?

French Club.

French Club at its first meeting elected Elisa Kigonard, president; Ruth Heminover, vice-president; Elizabeth Renner, secretary and treasurer; and Dorothy Bennit, reporter.

This year the club is going "over the top" in furnishing good times, good eats, and lively meetings for its members, who are to include all those (male and female) who have had two years of high school or one year of college French, who now have an abundance of pep and loyalty and a financial status of 25 cents a semester to be given as dues. All new members will be initiated, in order that they may appreciate to a greater extent the advantages of the club. Prospects, please sign up on the bulletin board Wednesday, October 19.

Press Club.

The original aims and work of the Press Club were outlined by Dr. Hastings at a meeting last Wednesday. He was the chief promoter of the Press Club when organized five or six years ago. Its purposes then were to bring together people interested in writing, and to act as a publicity bureau for the college. He gave suggestions for the carrying out of these aims. Miss Murray read a list of prominent newspaper men whom she hopes to bring before the Press Club as speakers.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 26.

Political Science Club.

A regular meeting of the Political Science Club will be held Wednesday, October 19, at 4 o'clock, in room 111. Professor Risley will speak on "What Men Lived Of." Meetings are held every other Wednesday. All are cordially invited to attend.

GROWTH OF ORCHESTRA

We can't speak for him, but here's a hint—if he's a good friend of yours perhaps he will give you the use of his banjo for the year. There is a mandolin which has been donated to the College orchestra by a member of the Class of '20 which any volunteer may use. If you wish to take these opportunities, please notify our officers or some other member of the orchestra.

Although the orchestra is increasingly large, there is still room for you on the Chapel platform, where we practice. We are sure that Mr. Merrit, '25, "Chair-Committee" will not object to "carting up" a dozen more chairs from the gymnasium if you decide to come.

The present orchestra members are: Violins, Castella Hees, '22, Grace Aronowitz, '23, Beatrice Crisfield, '24, Mr. Merrit, '25, Elisa Kigonard, '22, Mr. Horning, '25; mandolins, Eleanor Abrams, '24, Mabel White, '22, Ruth Ellis, '24, Marion Van Buren, '23, Augusta Conley, '23, Aileen Wallace, '24, Ethel Cummings, '23, Lela Cackener, '22, Alida Currey, '22, Dorothy Hoyt, '25, Ruth Kiddick, '25; guitars, Eunice Rice, '22, Gladys Lodge, '22, Dorothy Bennit, '24; banjo-mandolin, Florence Dorsey, '23; flute, Mr. Crane, '25; trombone, Mr. Hayes, '24; cornet, Mr. Miter, '25; piano, Dorothy Dangremont, '23.

research director of the State Board of Estimate and Control, and Frank D. Boynton, Ph.D., superintendent of schools at Ithaca, who will conduct a discussion; the Hon. Ernest W. Butterfield, LL.D., Commissioner of Education of the State of New Hampshire, who will speak on "The Problem for the Rural School"; George M. James Byrne, LL.D., and Countess Irene di Robilant, association manager, Italy American Society, New York City, will be based on "Dante." The underlying causes—economic, social, political and educational—responsible for the present conditions in Russia will be outlined by the Hon. Baron Sergius A. Korff, of Washington, D. C., who is a member of the Russian Legation.

Following Baron Korff's talk, the honorary degrees will be conferred and the recipients will deliver short addresses which will be succeeded by the benediction led by the Rev. John J. Wynne, S. J., of New York City, which will mark the closing of the convocation.

Attendance by students of State at as many of the sessions of the meeting as possible is urged by Dr. Brubacher, but in no case should a student "cut" in order to go, he said. Particular invitation has been extended college students, and Dr. Brubacher expects a large delegation from State at the affair.

springs, curious mud volcanoes and wonderful geysers. These there were, but the greater part of it is primeval pine forest, covering the slopes of the Great Divide. In it is an exquisite lake in a setting of snow-capped mountains and the Grand Canyon, tinted in all varieties of buff, orange and red, into whose depths drops a stream of clear aquamarine. It has also Mt. Washburn, upon whose sides are the gayest flower gardens I have ever seen. Only a few spots were barren, and here are the deservedly famous green and blue hot pools and geysers.

The rainbow effects on the borders of these were extremely interesting to the botanists of the party, because they are due to red pigmented algae, living plants, which have acquired the characteristic of enduring temperatures just under the boiling point. We were fortunate in seeing the Giant, the largest of the geysers, erupt, as he only pours forth his mighty stream of boiling water every 14 days. Even he with his tremendous volume, however, could not be compared in sheer beauty to Old Faithful whose graceful stream rises 150 feet into the air every 60 or 70 minutes, true to his name.
