FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Telephone: Judson 6-0450

John Hay Summer Fellowships for 1963 have been awarded to 170 public senior high school teachers and 84 school administrators, it was announced today. The Fellowship winners will attend four Summer Institutes in the Humanities, June 29-July 27.

These Institutes are unique, Dr. Charles R. Keller, director of the John Hay Fellows Program, points out. They are in the humanities, they include both teachers and administrators, and there are no examinations or grades. Participants study simply because they want to study, not for credits. At the Institutes they read and discuss significant books, take courses in philosophy, literature, and history, and attend special lectures on music and art.

The Institutes, financed by the Ford Foundation, will be held at Bennington College, Bennington, Vermont; Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colorado; the University of Oregon, Eugene, Oregon; and Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts. The faculty at each Institute will include six professors from several colleges and universities.

Each participant will receive $300 for the four-week period, plus $60 for each dependent, and travel expenses up to $100. There is no charge for tuition.

This year several school systems are sending teams of teachers to the Institutes and are underwriting part of the cost. These teachers will then help to develop the humanities in their schools.

JOHN HAY FELLOWS PROGRAM

DATE March 25, 1963

FOR Nominating Officials of 1963 Summer Institute Participants

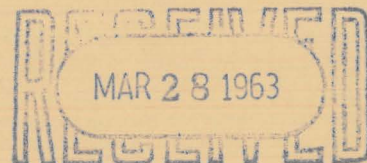

FROM Charles R. Keller and Bernard S. Miller

We are now enclosing a press release and a list of participants at our four Summer Institutes in the Humanities. Your local newspapers have been sent a copy of this material. Please feel free to publicize this Fellowship award in any appropriate manner.

More public high school teachers and administrators applied for our Summer Fellowships than ever before. We will have a fine group of educators at each of the four Institutes.

We thank you again for your cooperation with the John Hay Fellows Program, and we wish you well.

About 200 area high school students are expected to attend the annual High School Dramatic Festival presented by the Dramatic and Arts Council of the State University of New York at Albany. The three-day program of events begins Friday, Apr. 26, at 3 p.m. and ends Sunday, Apr. 28, at 1 p.m.

This year there is an innovation in the program which provides for seven workshops and several plays to be analyzed critically. In prior years participating school drama clubs presented plays to be judged in competition for awards. The new program is primarily educational in scope.

Registration will be at Richardson and in the evening there will be entertainment presented in Page Hall by the university council. A coffee hour will follow. Saturday there will be morning workshops at Richardson and lunch will be served at Brubacher. Workshops continue in the afternoon and in the evening play rehearsals will be held. Sunday morning seven of the twelve participating area schools will present dramatic programs and a coffee hour will conclude the festival.

Workshops will be offered in acting, lighting, makeup, costumes, properties, sound, and set construction. Critical analysis of the plays will be given by Dr. Jarka Durian, associate professor of English at the university and faculty advisor for the council and festival; James M. Leonard, associate professor of English at the university; Sharon House, president of the council; and Baron Jurewics, council vice president.

Lillian Schmidt, festival chairman, is being assisted by Constance Amelio and Paye Nadler. All are members of the Dramatics and Arts Council.

2 Musical Programs Slated in Page Hall

Students at State College in Albany will stage their annual spring music festival tonight and Thursday in Page Hall on the campus.

Each of the two programs begins at 8 p.m. and is open to the public at no charge.

The symphonic band, led by Anthony J. Salatino, assistant professor of music, will be heard tonight.

Features of the band concert will be a clarinet solo by Jerome Bunke, a student at the Milne School, also a trumpet solo by Robert Fairbanks of the university. Bunke will play Carl Maria von Weber's "Concertino." Fairbanks will play Leroy Anderson's "Trumpeter's Lullaby."

On Thursday night, choral ensembles directed by associate professor Karl A. B. Peterson, will be heard.

These include the Collegiate Singers with Calvin Fenton and Harriet Rossoff, accompanists; the Woman's Chorus, with Ann Lybarger and Miss Rossoff, accompanists; the Festival Chorus, and the Statesmen with Mr. Fenton and Nicholas Argyros as accompanists.

An extra feature Thursday will be a chamber music work, the finale to a G. major string quartet by Mozart, played by a student group: Thomas Locke, Barbara Leibman, John Meyer and Carol Hamann.

Among the works to be heard tonight are Copland's "An Outdoor Overture," Milhaud's

7968 KN 5/7/63
"Suite Francaise" and the finale of Shostakovich's Symphony No. 5, all rearranged for band. Also a "Symphony Moderne for Band" by Mr. Salatino himself.

On Thursday, works by Shaw, Christiansen, Bruckner and Dieterich and others will be sung by the Collegiate Singers; works by Schubert, Brahms and Samuel Barber by the Women's Chorus; Grieg, Schubert, Dvorak and others by the Collegiate Singers, and works by Randall Thompson among others, by the Festival Chorus.
