VOL. X No. 3

NEW PEDAGOGUE WILL BE LARGEST TO DATE

Staff Commences Collection of Senior Data And Pictures

WILL COST OVER $4,000

Preparations for the publication in May of the 1926 Pedagogue, began this week, with a year-book forecast that will be the largest and most complete of its kind yet produced at State.

Minnie E. Greenaway, '26, editor-in-chief, and Caroline K. Coleman, '26, business manager, with a large staff of assistants began collection of data.

Two hundred and sixty pages will be included in this year's volume, an increase of four pages over last year. The 1925 Ped was the largest book yet published. The cost is expected to be between $4,000 and $5,000, probably about $4,400, which has been the average cost of each Ped of recent years, Miss Coleman said.

Contract for the photography has been awarded to Lorey's studio. The work was done by the Obenaus studio last year. Sittings are to be from nine to four o'clock. An effort will be made to have all pictures taken before the Thanksgiving recess. Students will be given an opportunity to sign up on the college bulletin board for sittings. All the pictures of seniors will be new, and underclassmen will be offered the opportunity to have new pictures made.

Hilda Klunkhart, '26, photography editor, is interviewing representatives of sororities and fraternities regarding publication of cuts of their officers and houses.

The Empire Engraving Company of Albany has the contract for the engraving. The Brandow Company of Albany will do the printing again.

Definite formulation of plans for new features has not been completed, but Miss Greenaway said it is hoped to make the book show an improvement over any hitherto published.

ATTENDANCE REQUIRED AT STUDENT ASSEMBLY

Compulsory assembly attendance for all students will be the result of the plan announced Friday by President Brubacher, whereby two sessions of student assembly will henceforth be conducted.

President Brubacher explained the plan at student assembly Friday. It will go into effect October 16.

The 532 seniors and sophomores will have their assembly at 10:55 o'clock. The 534 juniors and freshmen will meet at 11:35.

"We have a student body in round numbers of 1,100," President Brubacher pointed out, "and our auditorium seats only 700."

Assembly Friday, will be at 10:55 and will be for all four classes.

STUDENTS TOO MANY, CLASS SEEKS CHURCH

College Buildings, Fall to Hold Institution's Largest Enrollment

CROWDS IN MILNE HIGH

Over-crowding at State College developed into a serious situation this week, when college classrooms were unable to house all the students seeking admission.

President A. R. Brubacher's prediction that the increased enrollment would bring about a crisis in housing requirements was justified, as one large class sought rooms in a church for its meeting. In Milne High school, two practice teachers are in some cases teaching in one room because there are not enough rooms to make possible division of the class into two sections.

Other large classes are in some instances crowded into rooms too small for them.

On account of lack of space Professor David Hutchinson's Government 2 class students have migrated to the Sunday school room in the Unitarian church at the corner of Washington avenue, Robin, and West streets.

Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 12:15 period, students brave the weather to reach their destination.

It was found that room 201, where the class was scheduled to meet, would not hold the one hundred and thirty-three students.

PLAN DIRECTORY POLL AND HORNER ADDRESS FOR CHAPEL PROGRAM

Data cards for the Student Directory will be distributed today in assembly. The directory, started last year following a suggestion in the student opinion column of the News, proved a great aid in strengthening relationships among students. It will contain the names, addresses and telephone numbers of the faculty and students and will be on sale before Thanksgiving. Marion Rhodes, editor-in-chief, will be assisted by a committee of five: Abbie Crawford, Lorena M. Shaffer, Winifred Casey, Ruth Lane, and Mildred Lansley.

Dr. Harlan H. Horner, former dean of State College and now field secretary of the State Teachers association and editor of its publication, "New York State Education," is to be asked to address a coming session of the student association, the student council has decided. Plans for other coming sessions are also being made, Richard A. Jensen, secretary, said. Cheer and song practice will also take place in early sessions.

President A. R. Brubacher returned yesterday from the convention of county teachers at Lake Placid. The convention met Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Dr. Brubacher spoke on "Ethics of Teaching."

COLLEGIATE DEMOCRACY

Hand in hand with the acquisition of an education should go the development of a democratic attitude toward all mankind, an attitude which in its sincerity of feeling and wideness of application will tend to unite men in closer bonds of friendship and of understanding. Yet our radical friends declare the average college man or woman today is defeating this very policy by creating social stratas with dividing lines strong enough to leave outside the circle of the "elect" many most deserving fellowmen. Persons who hold this attitude, of course, find themselves little in sympathy with modern college ideals, and, because of their narrow attitude, are doing untold harm to us today by attributing to us weakness which is not ours.

To us, then, as representative of college men and women, is the task of demonstrating clearly and definitely the falsity of this accusation that we are undemocratic. First let us throw out to them a challenge to prove their statements, for as accusers their's is the burden of proof; and secondly, let us adopt more firmly than ever a policy which shall leave no room for criticism, a policy which shall make clear even to the skeptics the indubitable fact that today college men and women are more democratic and liberal-minded than ever before.

Save Saratoga, Risley Urges Political Science Club, Calling Famed Engagement "Our Battle of the Marne"

Professor A. W. Risley addressed the Political Science club at its first meeting, Tuesday, on "Our Battle of the Marne."

"I wish to congratulate this club on conducting its tour at a time so near the anniversary of one of the battles of Saratoga," he said.

"Saratoga is the American battle of the Marne," Mr. Risley declared, "for we withstood our foe at Saratoga, as the Allies did in 1918 at the Battle of the Marne."

"We have always advocated federal or state ownership of the farm at Saratoga, and it is only until recently that a movement to bring this about has begun."

Professor Risley used a diagram to show the relation of the different historic spots: Schuylerville, Freeman's Farm, East Hubbardton, etc.

Professor Risley urged students to join in the move to make the field a national park in preparation for the fitting observance in 1777-1927 of the sesquicentennial of the Revolutionary battles.

Saratoga's part in world history cannot be overestimated, Professor Risley declared. For years, he pointed out, random efforts have been made to secure some kind of recognition of the battlefields on Freeman's farm. The present national movement, which will embrace the memorialization of the battles of Bennington and Oriskany, is the biggest advance toward realization of that aim, he declared.

Referring to William Roscoe Thayer's biography of Washington, in which the historian in referring to Washington's part in the Saratoga engagements said "The great god nodded," Professor Risley said:

"While I have no objection to New England historians as a class and certainly none to Dr. Thayer in particular, still this is not the first instance of apparent ignorance on a New England historian's part when dealing with events of New York State history.

"Washington's life story could thrive without noting a battle in which his only participation was to write letters stirring the local patriots to action. Thayer does not care to mention this correspondence, but he commits serious errors both of geography and of actual known facts, in his account of the campaign and of the two battles of September 19, and October 7, 1777, of which he mentions only the latter engagement.

"Since a historian has thus erred, it seems to me that it is high time that the well authenticated material on the subject should be given publicity."

Professor Risley deplored "the general and appalling lack of knowledge of geography, and the contented popular ignorance of events and their connection" that exists regarding Saratoga and praised the present movement as one which will tend to make this and other facts of New York history better known.

Tomorrow the Political Science club will conduct a tour of the battlefields for college students. Professor C. A. Hildley, of the history department, will accompany the group and will lecture at the different strategic points on the field.

After an entertainment put on by Betty Murray, Peg Flanagan, Marie Gentner, Julia Fay, and Louise Welch, Marion O'Connor, '26, president of Newman, explained its purposes and ideals to the freshmen and administered the pledge. Refreshments were served and dancing continued until 11 o'clock.

Dean Anna E. Pierce and several members of Myskania were honor guests. The committee in charge included Gertrude Lynch, chairman, Josephine Donnelly, Margaret Koen, Ruth Lockard, Kathleen O'Malley, Vera Rochefort, and Helen Zimmerman.
