1936 TO ATTEND WELCOME TONIGHT

Freshmen Will Hear Traditions and Sophomore Rules at Annual Party

College traditions and the rules adopted by the sophomore class for the freshmen will be explained to the members of the class of 1936 at the annual Freshman Welcome party, to be conducted in the auditorium of Page hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock, Clifford Rall, president of the sophomore class, announced today.

The welcome is given by the sophomore class under the supervision of Myskiana, senior honorary society. Rall will preside. Freshmen will be escorted to their seats by sophomore ushers. Rows of seats will be marked with alternating class colors, green and white for the sophomores, and yellow and white for the freshmen.

Only entering students, members of the sophomore class, members of Myskiana, and the faculty will attend, Rall said. Thurston Paul will act as general chairman. Each freshman will be presented with a bib upon which his name is written. These bibs are to be worn all next week, according to the sophomore rules.

The class song leader will lead in the singing of the College alma mater. A member of Myskiana will explain college traditions. Rall will read the sophomore rules for freshmen as outlined in the freshman handbook. A reception will be conducted in the auditorium of Page hall immediately following the conclusion of the formal meeting. Freshmen will have an opportunity to meet members of the faculty in attendance. Dining will be conducted until 11:00 o'clock.

1935 TO ENFORCE FRESHMAN RULES BEGINNING MONDAY

Sophomore rules for the freshmen will go into effect Monday, Zava McAlahan, '35, chairman of the rules committee, announced today. Six new rules have been adopted, and several others, originated by preceding sophomore classes have been included this year. The new rules provide that from Monday, September 26 through Friday, September 30, freshmen women will be required to wear black cotton stockings and a light dress. During this same period, the men of 1936 will be required to wear a yellow bow tie each day. Bibs containing their names are to be worn by the members of the entering class during this week. The period during which to linen buttons are to be worn lasts from September 26 until Christmas recess. Another innovation this year is the requirement that the class shall know thoroughly the facts printed in the freshman handbook.

The string of "bibs" is very different in assembly on Friday, September 30, the requirement that no freshmen are to dance in the gym from October 11 through October 21, and regulation that no high school insignias, such as pins, chains, during the school year, are among the rules which were retained.

The commencement of the observance of these rules marks the first instance of the sophomore-freshman rivalry which will continue through the year until Moving-up day, Friday, May 19.

FRESHMAN CAMPS

The successful completion of the freshman camp for both men and women marks another step forward in the student activities of the freshman matriculation procedure. This is the third freshman camp which has been conducted for the men, and the second camp for the women.

The united co-operation of the faculty and the men of the student association made possible the success of the men's camp on Lake Cossayuna last week-end. The men came here ignorant of the ways of the College, its traditions, its activities, and its personnel. Those who attended the camp returned with a good idea of these things and in addition a realization of the possibilities which State has to offer in the way of friendships and chances to live a college life to its fullest extent.

The large attendance of upper-classmen and faculty at this year's camp was brought about by the diligent and particular work of the camp directorate and by the help of faculty advisors of the committee. They have given the freshmen a good start in assuming their positions as a vital part of State.

Last year the women's camp was first conducted by members of the faculty. A minimum number of upper-classmen attended. This year the second camp for the freshman women was conducted by the Girls' Athletic association, with the assistance and advice of members of the faculty. Twenty members of the upper classes attended, along with fifty-one of the freshman class. The women were given a glimpse into the activities and life of State college, and returned from the camp eager to begin their new life, to enter their new surroundings, and to set forth upon the work of this year.

The presence of a larger number of upper-classmen assisted in the completion of the picture of the College which the freshmen received. Members of the faculty were eager to cooperate, and it was through such co-operation that this second camp for the women was brought to a successful culmination.

The idea of freshman camps is now a definite part of the student curriculum. It is firmly established in the minds of both faculty and undergraduates as a desirable activity for both the upper classmen and freshmen. Each year new plans and changes in the camp programs should be tried in order to maintain the high standard of the camps and to give the fullest possible program.

VALE!

It is with deep regret and a feeling of personal loss that we have learned of the death of Helen Zimmerman, 27, former business manager of the NEWS, on Friday, September 20, 1932. Miss Zimmerman was swept off her feet by a stair-step during a fire this summer, while en route from Vera Cruz to Philadelphia.

Her death is a today sorrow to the NEWS. Her Zimmerman's earnest effort and hard work. As business manager in 1926-27, she had charge of the business department of this newspaper when the size of the publication was increased from a three column paper to the present size. It was her work that made the NEWS of that year a financial success.

Miss Zimmerman, upon graduation from State college, taught at Warrensburg for three years, and was to have entered Columbia university this year for graduate study.

To Miss Zimmerman's family and many friends, the NEWS extends sympathy. In her death, we share in their loss.

WELCOME, FRESHMEN

It is again the privilege of the faculty and student body of this College to extend a welcome to the freshman class, and to await with eager curiosity the impression of the College upon the members of the class, and the similar results upon the College. The class of 1936 is entering with a scholastic average rating that is more than two percent higher than that of any previous class. They are the select of the select, and much may be expected from them.

One of the greatest problems which the new freshman will encounter is that of making choices and decisions, both social and scholastic. He will encounter a bewildering number of extra-curricular activities which call for attention. He should remember however, that it is better to excel in one or two activities than to wear the insignia of every club or organization on the campus. The inauguration of an "Activities Day" three years ago has been a forward step in assisting the members of the entering class to acquire a fairly clear idea of the possibilities and extent of the activities. Remember that no one will receive from any activity what he is not willing to give to it.

The new scholastic independence which the freshman will discover differs from the methods of his high school or preparatory school. No one will camp in his trail to see that his studies are kept up. He will study when he pleases and what he pleases.

Try to mix studies, friendships, and school activities in such proportions as to insure the benefits of all without the disadvantages of over-indulgence in any of them.

Freshmen will soon learn that with unity and class spirit alone can they succeed either as individuals or as a class. We extend a welcome to '36; we are anxious to meet you, to know you, and to show you the ways of State.

BOOKS

POUND WRITES OF PENNS; MORLEY DISCUSSES BOOKS

For Sale in the Coop

The Penns of Pennsylvania and England. By Arthur Pound. Macmillan and Co. 339 pages. $2.95.

Biography has been called with some truth the essence of history, but as it is impossible to separate an individual from family influence, multi-biography in some cases may fix historical truth in print more convincingly. This is an adventure along that line—a family history of the Penns of Pennsylvania and England.

Arthur Pound is a resident of Slingerlands and is well-known in the capitol district. He presents an admirably complete reading list at the end of the book, and explains in his preface the references he has used, and the portraits of the various men of the Penn family which are included in the fifteen illustrations in the book.

The Penn cycle begins in 1642 on the waterfront of Bristol, chief English port on the western ocean, and closes in 1869 with the death of the last male Penn, the Reverend Thomas Gordon Penn, Pennsylvania's castle on Portland Isle in Dorset, which had been the property of the Penns since James I, was sold out of the family to an outsider in 1887, and this marks a convenient place for a historian of the family to say "done."

The history of the Penn family is an unusual one, involving political drama, royal scandal, colonial history, and naval maneuvers on a broad, eventful stage. Several American colonies were born of the will of princes to benefit their friends, but no other has so unmanly an origin as Pennsylvania, which can be traced back to a royal blood-bath on the high seas and a resulting intrigue of such vigor that a Penn could save the face, perhaps the throne, of a prince who would be King of England.

The Penns of Pennsylvania and England. By Arthur Pound. Macmillan and Co. 339 pages. $2.95.

No better introduction to these charming tales on book collecting can be found than Christopher Morley's own words:

"I am not a bibliographer, I am not even in any exact sense a bibliophile. ... Because what interests me is the actual impact of a book upon the mind, and anything in the nature of romantic or noble association or excessive bulk, or elegant editing. For no ornament of any sort, interiorly with the intrinsic interest of the work. ... I divide bibliography, as we do mathematics, into pure and applied. ... scientific and pure bibliography is not my field. ... I confess and flounder in the gutter of the printer or the binder, which mean you, the reader, are not to drink to the scientific bibliographer, they are his use and purpose. For the sake of I suggest that we begin our conversation to what we call amateurish or applied bibliography."

In 1926 Dr. A. S. W. Wheelock founded a fellowship in bibliography at the University of Pennsylvania. Christopher Morley was appointed the first fellow under this foundation. The book contains the nice talks he delivered at the university in the autumn of 1931. In the author's notes, Morley states that these are not lectures but conversations. He adds: "Those who sat through these afternoons at the University will remember there was only one assigned subject, to suggest without ulterior pretension a better about books which is frankly personal and unacademic."

A year's observation of these reveals the fascinating character of this volume. Sir John Harrington, Elizabethan operator of it, who wrote "to show what Rabelaisian parrot could do pouncing." Catalogues, Philadelphia's attitude toward Walt Whitman, George Meredith with his lavender gloves for manuscript reading, Conrad's visit to America, the amorous reputation of Voltaire overcoat, Rachel Landau's passion for youth, Rupert Brooks, Petrarch's golden florins, and many others.

Morley's ability to stimulate an enthusiasm for the quest of books and the grace which he displays in all his writings is aptly demonstrated in these "conversations." He is writing of the thing nearest his heart—literature in which one finds "the lighter air of the mountain peaks of human life."

"a more pleasing taste and aroma"

Enough Turkish, but not too much, that's Why!

Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what seasoning is to food... the "spice," the "sauce." You don't want too much seasoning in food. Or in a cigarette. But you do want enough!

Chesterfield uses just the right amount of Turkish tobacco. Not too much, but just enough to give to Chesterfield the finishing touch of better taste and aroma.

Smoke a Chesterfield... and taste the difference.
