Prominent Graduates List: Normal School through New York State College for Teachers compiled by Geoffrey P. Williams, University Archivist with assistance from Marla P. Krause, SLIS graduate student, July 3, 1996, with additions, October 2005 by GPW,10/26/05.

Compilers Note: This list must be used with great caution for it in no way claims to be a comprehensive list of all alumni/ae who were prominent. It is meant to give convenient examples of people who were prominent in a field. Entries were selected from individuals who reported their employment or other accomplishments to the Alumni Association and whose notices were published in the Echo, a monthly student literary magazine/newspaper/alumni magazine published from 1892-1918, and from the Alumni Quarterly, the Alumni Association's magazine published from 1919-1967. The authors have included some individuals whose careers are listed in the Historical Sketch of the State Normal College and a History of Its Graduates for Fifty Years (Albany, 1894) but that source has not been completely surveyed, leaving out many prominent 19th Century graduates. It must be remembered that only a small percentage of any class regularly, or even occasionally, keeps in touch with the Alumni Association, so many prominent people are inevitably excluded from a list such as this.

In order to avoid conflicts over who was a prominent individual, the first criterion for selection is that the individual is deceased, but with many of the graduates of the classes in the 1930s and 40s that may not be the case. Individuals are for the most part assigned to the work or service category where they made their mark. Many individuals had accomplishments in many fields. The compilers have chosen to give a full listing only once, but provide a cross reference from a minor field of endeavor to the major field where the individual is listed. Individuals are listed under the name they were known when they were prominent. There are cross references from maiden names. With some categories it was impossible to list every individual. For instance, the category Educators: Primary & Secondary would have had thousands or tens of thousands of entries. In that case only someone who did something unique or worked in a unique institution is mentioned. With other categories such as Educational Administrators: Higher Education the compilers have tried to be as comprehensive as possible. The list of people in the category Military Service is also incomplete. The most complete list of students and graduates who served is on the Veterans Wall. That list does not include sources of information or information about where people served so the list below was not stricken. A complete list of prominent graduates would have to use the Deceased Alumni Files of the Alumni Association, class reunion lists of their class members and careers, and possibly development office files.
