STUDENT CONVOCATION

Dean Pierce addresses Freshmen

On Thursday last the formal opening of the College took place. Dr. A. R. Brubacher presided and Dean H. H. Horner, Miss Anna E. McClelland and Dr. L. Richardson occupied seats of honor. After the singing of "Materna" by the student body, and the reading of the Scripture by Dr. Richardson, Dr. A. R. Brubacher and Dean Horner delivered addresses. The exercises were closed with the singing of "America."

Dr. Brubacher took for his subject "Antagonistic Ideals Behind the War." His aim was to set before the students who are preparing to be teachers and guides of the youth of the nation the fundamental antagonisms between autocracy and democracy. He said in part:

"America entered the war because her democracy was threatened by the piratical practices which made war on non-combatant women and children and invaded the inner sanctity of friendly nations. We are keenly alive to the menace against integrity of free peoples and constitutional government. We recognize an inherent antagonism between a government that engages in such unethical practices and the destiny of our democracy.

"The war had joined the issue between a free government and an absolute autocracy. The autocrat with airplanes, submarines, flame projectiles, gas bullets, among peace loving democracies, is like the highwayman with a six-shooter, among peaceable, unarmed village folk. Either the autocrat must be restrained or democracies must cease. And the event is not a foregone conclusion. Autocracy has the virtue of age and achievement. Democracy has the weakness of blundering youth.

Democracy Looks to Teachers

"To the teacher this is a very responsible moment. For behind and beneath the struggle lie antagonistic educational ideals. Autocracy uses educational means of a distinctive kind to secure efficiency and obedience to its units. Democracy uses its own appropriate means to secure its enthusiasm and individual initiative. Shall democracy renounce obedience? Shall autocracy win the day because it can command the slavish obedience of an efficient man-power?

"It is generally accepted that Germany is to-day reaping the fruits of a well-defined philosophy of life, effectively taught by its schools and universities during the last fifty years, a philosophy that has dominated its ruling class for two centuries. The German nation exemplifies this philosophy today; the masses exemplify it in that wholesome unconsciousness which Nietzsche commends in them; the military or efficient class exemplifies it and skillfully inculcates it as a national system, as a national educational creed. It is especially desirable, therefore, that the teachers in our great democracy should fully comprehend this educational creed of autocracy.

"Germany by its whole educational system glorifies the exceptional man, to whom it subordinates the great human mass which counts for nothing save as cannon fodder in the army. America on the other hand glorified the common man; seeks to educate him, to increase his comfort and his individual worth to himself.

"The educational system carefully provides for the maintenance of the distinctions between the cultured class and the bread winners. The high exponent of the doctrine of the superman says: 'The future of German Kultur rests on the sons of Prussian officers.' And again: 'The masses were born to serve and obey; and every moment in which their limping or crawling or broken-winded thoughts are at work shows what trade mark (nature) branded thereon.' He says the masses are fit primarily for 'cannon-fodder' while the master caste are the 'hierarchy in the kingdom of the intellect.' For them is reserved the 'aristocracy of culture.'

"The purpose of education in an autocracy is clearly defined by Nietzsche's philosophical arguments therefore. It is to make the master conscious of

REMEMBER OCTOBER 1st

Let this be your slogan for the rest of the week. At one of the students' assemblies it was voted to have a blanket tax to cover the expenses of college publication and basket ball. The amount of the tax was to be decided by Myskania. All plans have been completed for the collection of this tax on October 1st.

October 1st is the day when each and every one will have a chance to show what they are made of. Be sure and do the HONORABLE THING for not only will you be judged by your response but by the college as a whole. The amount will be announced in a few days. The collection of this money will take place under the supervision of Mr. Chester J. Wood, who was appointed treasurer by a special faculty committee. Watch the bulletin boards as to the place of payment!

his superiority, disdainful of the masses, proud of his culture. It is to teach the masses that the master class is irresponsible. It is to perpetuate the servitude of the masses, their submissive obedience, their instinct of loyalty.

"The successful attainment of Germany's educational system is impressive and even ominous. That a nation can in a single generation advance from industrial obscurity to industrial preeminence by means of systematic educational effort is a great tribute to its schools and teachers, to all schools and teachers. But Germany has been just as successful in its other educational purpose, the propagation of the doctrine of the superman, the philosophy of hardness and harshness; superiority to morality; conscious disdain of the common man; lack of sympathy for his lot.

Goethe's Germany Gone

"The Germany of Goethe and Schiller and Beethoven has given way unconsciously to a part of the masses, consciously and designedly on the part of the autocracy, to a nation of cruelty, of unscrupulous ambitions, of almost superhuman ingenuity. The philosophy of Nietzsche has found concrete expression in the German people of to-day. They have been

COME OUT FOR THE NEWS

It is with deep regret that we find that four members of the "News" board have not returned to College. Alfred E. Dedicke '18, Editor-in-chief of the paper last year, whose untiring efforts and ability made the State College News a reality and successful enterprise, is a commissioned officer in the Regular Army. Henry L. Greenblatt '18, who devoted so much time to the management of the "News" has been appointed manager of a local business establishment. Kathryn Linehan '19 and Arnold Nolde '20, although they had been elected only recently, had displayed ability which would be of great value to us this year. We wish them success in their new undertakings.

In accordance with the management of the publication their places must be filled by students who demonstrate capacity for the work. The only way to exhibit one's ability is to write articles for publication and elections will be made solely on this basis.

No previous newspaper experience is necessary although it is very desirable. Any students who desire to enter the competition are requested to report to one of the Senior Editors.

To those students who lean toward college journalism, and to those who have been connected with other school publications the work will be most attractive.

Remember it is the students' paper and must be supported by them. Its columns are open to all students and their contributions are always welcomed. Now is the time to enter the race for it will last only three weeks.

To the Editors of S. C. News:

Expressing the general opinion of young women students, I arise to protest the usurpation of the rest room. Many of us have schedules which begin at 8:10 in the morning and continue intermittently until 4:35 or 5:30. This makes a long, tiring day particularly if one carries her lunch and is compelled to remain in the building from morning until night. The Rest Room has in the past afforded a convenient place for a student to eat and at the same time relax for a few minutes between classes. Often if a student feels faint or sickly a half hour of resting will often improve matters. This is a much better policy than waiting for an interview with Miss Pierce and perhaps missing classes, while a few minutes of rest would be sufficient. A visiting physician remarked a short time ago that it was nothing less than cruel to maintain such a small rest room for hundreds of girls. If a small rest room was considered cruelly what about no rest room at all?

attained in the battlefields; the masses have slavishly served as cannon fodder; the military supermen have been above morality, as shown in the Lusitania episode, by the insolent and wanton destruction of property, by the cruel treatment of conquered civilians.

"You, the future teachers of our free people, are at the apex of democracy in trying to educate the masses, and it is for you to reverse this sad and discouraging picture.

"In carrying out this educational purpose of democracy you are in a very real sense at war with autocracy.

"In carrying out this program of sweet reasonableness, human sympathy and intellectual humility into the lives of the great human mass, you are combatting the vicious philosophy of that autocracy whose engines of war are daily dealing death to our brave boys on the firing line. We are all enlisted in the cause of humanity in its struggle to free itself finally from the incubus of an arrogant and cruel, self-appointed master class."

Dean Horner then read the names of the young men of the College who are in military service, while the students stood in honor to them.

After which he tried to impress upon the students the immensity of the cost of the war both in money and in casualties. He emphasized the fact that we had scarcely felt as yet any of the hardships of war and were living our lives in much the same way as in times of peace. He urged us to start now to prepare ourselves in practices of economy and thrift and thereby lessen future suffering.

Dean Pierce's Address

Miss Anna E. Pierce, Dean of Women, met the members of the Freshmen class in the Auditorium on Friday morning last. She reminded them that in pursuing their college course they must prepare themselves for a part in the period of construction and reconstruction which is to follow the war. In speaking of the new life at college she compared their cases to transplanting from gardens cared by those with whom their life had been so far spent, to new gardens surrounded by hundreds of new lives. After the period of wilting which is sure to follow transplanting, she assured them that they would raise their heads and find the same glad old sun and many loving, helping hands. From that time they will feel at home and very happy.

She urged them to set about adapting themselves to their environments with a determination to make a clean sweep of all weaknesses and to establish virtues in their places, and at the same time to get in the game of real living and not to become intellectual grinds. She pointed out the value of using good common sense in matters under their control by sleeping, eating and dressing properly and then doing their appointed tasks courageously and conscientiously.

In closing Dean Pierce said: "For your new life take for your motto the watchword of the Camp Fire Girls, 'Wohelo,' the double initials of work, health, and love and may your college course be a wonderful blessing to you.

SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL ARTS

Miss Wilson met the H. E. Seniors Friday at one o'clock, and discussed plans for living at the practice house. Marion Peterson, Carolyn Birge, Clare Lally, Mabel Holliday, and Agnes Foster are living at the house now.

Miss Van Liew is director of the Albany city food conservation movement. Madge Bloodgood '15 is assistant director.

The State Education Department is launching a plan to reorganize all teachers' courses in Home Economics. When completed to the satisfaction of the Department, none but four-year courses will be offered in any of the colleges in the State.

The registration in the men's night school classes is particularly heavy. More than can be accepted have applied for admission. A careful selection will have to be made, to eliminate enough to make the classes of manageable size.

In answer to advertising propaganda put out last week, thirty men have made inquiries concerning the day courses. A meeting was held Friday night, and Professor Smith discussed the courses. Four men have already enrolled and others are considering.

Professor Smith has started a plan for work by which a man works in an industrial shop for a half-day, and comes to college for classes the rest of the day. This system of working on a cooperative basis is used with great success in the engineering courses of the University of Cincinnati. Two men are now studying at this college under this plan. They are employed at the Consolidated Car Co. One works in the morning and comes to college in the afternoon, while the other attends college in the morning and works in the afternoon. Every officer of the Consolidated Car Co., from the president down, have shown great interest in this plan, which promises to make quite a change in the future registration. Mr. Smith is confident of its success.
