JOB CORPSMEN AND WOMEN AWARDED SCHOLARSHIPS TO COLLEGE

Thirty-seven Job Corps men and women today entered college as four-year New York State Scholarship students in the State University of New York at Albany. The scholarships cover tuition, room, board, books, fees and all normal expenses.

The young people, selected from 10 Job Corps centers, enrolled in the University's new Education Opportunities Program, which is designed particularly for youths with environmental handicaps who show promise for higher education and who otherwise might not be able to continue their studies.

Candidates for the program were sought out from among those in the Job Corps because of their high motivation and the potential for further accomplishments as evidenced by their performance in the Job Corps.

At a ceremony today on the Albany university campus, David A. Oestreich, who is presently heading up the Job Corps Office of Recruitment, Support and Placement, greeted the new college students and praised the State University of New York at Albany's imaginative new program. He further stated that this is a major step forward in the cooperative efforts of all segments of American society in helping the poor.

"With this program," he said, "you recognize that college potential need not be measured by conventional grading methods, nor by prescribed courses of study, nor by many of the old pat criteria." He continued, "These young people come to you from the Job Corps with GED certificates instead of high school diplomas--yet you have selected them for the promise they show for the future rather than what they have accomplished in the past."

Mr. Oestreich presented a Job Corps flag to Evan R. Collins, president of the State University of New York at Albany. Also present were: Samuel B. Gould, Chancellor of the State University of New York at Albany; Ernest L. Boyer, Vice Chancellor; Paul Miwa, Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs at the State University and originator of the Education Opportunities Program; Harry L. Hamilton, Jr., recently appointed EOP director; and several members of the faculty and administration of the Albany university.

Of the 37 new students, most of whom are from New York State, only two have high school diplomas. The remainder are high school dropouts who satisfied college entrance requirements by obtaining their high school equivalencies through General Educational Development tests while enrolled in the Job Corps.

The six-week summer session of the new program, which began today in Albany, will concentrate on skill building, with emphasis on reading at the college level. It will include programs of counseling and testing to determine special aptitudes of the new students and to guide them in selection of college majors. The majority of the former Corpsmen and women have expressed interest in education as a career.

All students will reside at the Albany university campus. Following the summer session they will enroll in the University College prior to selecting a major in the College of Arts and Sciences or the School of Business.

Additional personal counseling will be available to the ex-Job Corps members from the Albany branches of two national volunteer agencies. Joint Action in Community Service (JACS) and Women in Community Service (WICS) are private, non-profit organizations of volunteers who help Job Corps trainees adjust to life in new communities. These support services have proved particularly valuable to young people who have been severely handicapped by their environments.

The Job Corps is the Office of Economic Opportunity's human renewal and work readiness program for disadvantaged young men and women 14 through 21. In its first three and one-half years Job Corps has helped 155,000 youths go through the program, 70 percent of whom are in jobs, school or military service. Approximately 10 percent of these have returned to school, including 250 who have gone on to college. Some 33,000 youths are now in training in 109 centers. Job Corps prepares trainees for work, school or military service at the rate of about 5,000 each month.

Names of the scholarship winners are attached.

FOR RELEASE: AUGUST 6, 1968, 12 noon

STATE UNIVERSITY HONORED FOR UNUSUAL WATER TANK

Albany, N.Y., August 6, 1968 -- Steel Plate Fabricators Association, Inc. today presented its "Steel Tank of the Year" award to the State University of New York at Albany.

The award was made for an unusual 251 foot high steel water storage tank which combines beauty and utility. A carillon tower sits on top of the graceful, fluted column.

The water tower, which has a capacity of 320,000 gallons, was designed by the noted architectural firm Edward Durell Stone Associates. Earl A. Bratton, executive director of Steel Plate Fabricators Association, presented a stainless steel plaque to Colonel Walter Tisdale, assistant to the University's president, in a brief ceremony on the campus. Plaques also went to William Hoops of Edward Durell Stone Associates, Salvatore San Pietro of Severud-Perrone-Sturm-Conlin-Bandel, consulting engineers and S.L. Luce of Chicago Bridge and Iron Company, fabricators of the steel tower.

Mr. Bratton also presented awards to Joseph Curley of the New York State Construction Fund and William Shaw of Basic Construction Company, Albany, general contractors of the State University.

In presenting the awards, Mr. Bratton said, "Steel Plate Fabricators Association pays tribute to more than the architectural and engineering excellence represented by this water tower. We honor also the State University's achievement in making a service facility an esthetically pleasing addition to this beautiful campus.

"Our association is vitally interested in encouraging the use of water storage facilities for other purposes. This combination of a water reservoir and a carillon tower is one of the most dramatic examples of this," Mr. Bratton said.

Dr. Joseph F. Zacek, associate professor of history, State University of New York at Albany, will attend the Sixth International Congress of Slavists at Prague, Czechoslovakia, August 7-13. Some 2,000 specialists in Slavic languages and literature are expected to attend the sessions.

Dr. Zacek will serve as one of two representatives and observers for the Joint Committee on Slavic Studies of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council. He will make recommendations to the committee as to whether American historians should participate in future congresses.

Following the Prague meetings, Dr. Zacek plans to travel briefly in Poland. He expects to return to Prague in October at the invitation of the Czech government and the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences to present a paper at an international scholarly conference celebrating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Czechoslovak state.

Dr. Zacek holds three degrees from the University of Illinois. Prior to joining the Albany faculty in 1967, he was assistant professor of history at the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA). From 1954 to 1957, the historian served as an intelligence officer in the U.S. Army, with responsibility in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Author, translator, and reviewer, Dr. Zacek has scholarly use of five languages, French, German, Czech, Slovak, and Russian. He has lived and traveled extensively in Western and Central Europe, especially Germany and Austria.

Dr. Frank G. Carrino, director, Center for Inter-American Studies and professor of Romance languages, State University of New York at Albany, will serve as director of the Central American Seminar in Panama August 19-30. The seminar is co-sponsored by the United States Department of State and the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Dr. Carrino organized and conducted previous seminars in Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica, and El Salvador, which were attended by teacher delegates from each of the host countries and from Panama, Nicaragua, and the Dominican Republic.

A bilingual team of specialists from U.S. universities will present lectures and conduct discussions on concepts of history, economics, geography, and civic education, as well as on methods of teaching an integrated approach to social studies. Dr. Carrino's topic will be "Group Dynamics in the Classroom." He will have complete responsibility for the administration of the seminar. Other staff members are from the universities of Rutgers, Kansas, George Washington, Pennsylvania State, and Temple.

The U.S. Department of State sponsors the seminars to aid the Central American countries in strengthening their educational programs. The American Association for Teacher Education joins in sponsorship because of the seminars' impact on improving teacher education. The U.S. Department of State invited Dr. Carrino to visit the ministries of education, key educators, and U.S. educational and cultural missions in the countries involved, before initiating the seminar series, to stimulate interest and participation.

Dr. Carrino has been with the Albany university since 1948. He is an alumnus of Baldwin-Wallace College, received a master of arts degree in Spanish from the University of Wisconsin, and a doctorate in modern languages from the University of Michigan.

The summer 1968 Adult Basic Education Training Institute concludes its two-week session August 9 at State University of New York at Albany. The institute, which served Region II, United States Office of Education (USOE), was conducted by the Adult Basic Education (ABE) staff at the university.

Project director is Dr. John A. Ether, professor of education at the university. The associate director is Anthony R. Pacelli, resource specialist, Region II, USOE, who attended the 1967 institute. The 87 participants included representatives from each of the four states in Region II, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Pennsylvania. Among them were persons from Albany Public Schools, Schenectady City School District, Mohonasen Central School, and Van Rensselaer High School, as well as those from such areas as Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Wilmington, Del., and Trenton, N.J.

Training teachers to combat the problem of adult illiteracy, which the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders termed "the handmaiden of poverty, despair and disorder," in its March 1, 1968, report, is the primary goal of the institute. The need has been described as the preparation of both trainers of teachers and teachers of adult basic education.

The institute was divided into two phases. The first phase brought together 23 carefully selected teacher-trainers who were trained to enable them to function as trainers of ABE teachers. These people had attended last summer's institute, the first of its kind, and were able to build on that experience.

The second phase consisted of bringing in 64 relatively inexperienced teachers of ABE with the skills and experience that will enable them to function as teachers of under-educated, under-employed adults. This phase also provided the teacher-trainers from phase one with the opportunity for a carefully supervised and evaluated internship in ABE teacher-training. The institute staff and other selected experts acted as supervisors, evaluators, and instructors of teacher-training.

National Science Foundation research grants in excess of $100,000 have been awarded to 12 faculty members in the department of mathematics at State University of New York at Albany. The young research mathematicians, whose average age is 33 years, already are known in the mathematical community as the authors of more than 90 publications in the varied fields of topology, algebra, complex and functional analysis, and probability theory.

The recipients are Drs. Guy D. Allaud (Ph.D. University of Wisconsin), Kenneth G. Binmore (Ph.D. Imperial College, London), Louis Brickman (Ph.D. University of Pennsylvania), Herbert I. Brown (Ph.D. Rutgers University), Hugh R. Coomes (Ph.D. University of California at Berkeley), Raymond J. Horvath (Ph.D. Case Western Reserve University), Robert C. James (Ph.D. California Institute of Technology), Melvin I. Katz (Ph.D. University of California at Berkeley), Keith M. Kendig (Ph.D. University of California at Los Angeles), Donald R. Kerr (Ph.D. Lehigh University), Thomas H. MacGregor (Ph.D. University of Pennsylvania), Howard H. Stratton (Ph.D. University of California at Riverside).

In addition to their teaching and research duties, the twelve recipients serve as reviewers and referees for national and international mathematical journals and other publications. The mathematicians have joined the department over the past two years during a period of rapid expansion.

Stephen Adelstein, Irvin E. Gilman, and Dennis Helmrich will join the music department faculty at State University of New York at Albany this fall. Mr. Adelstein will be an assistant professor; Mr. Gilman, an associate professor, and Mr. Helmrich, an instructor.

Mr. Adelstein, who holds degrees from Oberlin College and Yale University School of Music, teaches oboe and chamber ensembles. He has performed as oboist with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, Marlboro Festival Orchestra, and New York Baroque Ensemble, among others. He has toured throughout Europe and much of the United States with the Clarion Woodwind Quintet. The musician has recorded for four companies and has taught at Ithaca College, Dartmouth Congregation of the Arts, and the North Carolina School of Performing Arts.

A flutist, Mr. Gilman was graduated from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and received his master's degree from the Manhattan School of Music. He was a member of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra for 12 years, playing assistant principal flute. Mr. Gilman has been on the faculty at the Manhattan School of Music, the University of Michigan, and Wayne State University.

Mr. Helmrich, pianist and theory teacher, did undergraduate work at Yale College and graduate work at Yale University School of Music and at the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts. He has appeared frequently in the East and Southwest with orchestras, in solos, as an accompanist, and in chamber music. Prior to coming to Albany, Mr. Helmrich taught at Antioch College.

Eighteen interns are involved in the graduate Cooperative Community College Program at State University of New York at Albany this summer. The program, conducted by the School of Education, department of guidance and personnel services in higher education, is under the direction of Dr. David Hartley, professor of education at the university. It is in its third year of existence.

The interns, representing nearly all the two-year colleges in the State University, as well as several private institutions, spend two summer sessions and one regular semester on an internship assignment at one of the State community colleges. The program, which trains the interns for professional careers in the community college system, leads to the master of science degree. It is characterized by interdisciplinary studies in education, social and behavioral sciences, research and statistics, and personal services.

There are nine community colleges participating in the 1968 program. Those which have cooperated in the past have expressed satisfaction with the program and with the interns on assignment.

Leonard V. Gordon of the School of Education at State University of New York at Albany is presenting an invited paper at the International Congress of Applied Psychology in Amsterdam, Holland, next Monday, August 19, summarizing the results of a four-year program of research on the "bureaucratic personality." The paper is entitled "Correlates of Bureaucratic Orientation."

The research, conducted with the cooperation of such diverse agencies as the AFL-CIO, the Department of Defense, and the Peace Corps, was designed to develop an instrument which would predict an individual's ability to adapt to a highly bureaucratized work environment, of the type found in military and civil services and in many of the larger corporations, and to identify personality characteristics relating to this type of adjustment.

Bureaucratic adaptability as measured by the predictor instrument was associated with a willingness to fully comply with the wishes of a superior, and to adhere strictly to rules and regulations, a preference for formal relationships on the job, confidence in expert judgment and a restriction of one's concern to one's own area of activity. Individuals having those characteristics were inclined to be authoritarian and dogmatic, to have a strong need to be systematic, orderly and conformist in their behavior, and to care little about having new or varied experience or personal freedom of action.

Among the variety of groups studied, long term residents in a Veterans Administration domiciliary were found to be the most bureaucratically oriented and Peace Corps volunteers, the least. The measure of bureaucratic adaptability was successful in predicting dropout from a college ROTC program as well as career motivation of U.S. Military Academy cadets-the less bureaucratic the individual, the less inclined was he to remain in the service.

In an extension of the above research in three New York schools, bureaucratic adaptability was measured successfully as low as the sixth grade level. The bureaucratically adaptable child placed an exceedingly high value on obedience in school and tended to believe that his teacher is always right. He also tended to be less intelligent than his fellow students to make lower grades.

A set of cross-cultural studies comparing students and teachers on bureaucratic adaptability is currently in progress. Findings so far available indicate that the Indian culture produces a highly bureaucratized individual, while the American and Japanese cultures fall at the other extreme.

Dr. Gordon, professor of educational psychology, is director of the program for behavioral research at the university. He is the author of numerous professional publications, some of which have appeared in translation throughout the world. Dr. Gordon has served as a consultant to the Peace Corps, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, as well as to a number of corporations and other governmental agencies.

In his previous positions as research director for the Army and Navy, Dr. Gordon's responsibilities included the assessment of the "Bay of Pigs" returnees, selection of Job Corps camp directors, development of selection batteries for frogmen, Special Forces Personnel, and the development of the current officer and enlisted selection and classification batteries. He was chosen as scientific representative to NATO in 1960, and was the recipient of personal commendations from both the Secretary of the Army and the then Peace Corps director, Sargent Shriver, in 1965. His current areas of activity include research methodology, personality and value measurement, and cross-cultural research.

Dr. Gordon now is in Paris meeting with research psychologists for discussions relating to cross-cultural research, prior to the four-day biennial conference in Amsterdam.

Alan K. Campbell, dean-elect of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, will give the Walter D. Cocking Memorial Lecture at the first general session of the 22nd annual meeting of the National Conference of Professors of Educational Administration Monday, August 19, in the Campus Center ballroom at State University of New York at Albany.

Dean Campbell, whose address is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m., will have as his topic, "The Governance of Education", which is serving as the theme of the conference to be attended by representatives from major universities in most of the states and from similar Canadian institutions.

Dean Campbell served for seven years as director of the Metropolitan Studies Program of the Maxwell School. In 1967 he was delegate-at-large and chairman of the Committee on Local Government and Home Rule, New York State Constitutional Convention. He is a member of the Committee on Urban Economics of Resources for the Future; State Advisory Council on Continuing Higher Education, The University of the State of New York; Ad Hoc Committee on the New York State Herbert H. Lehman Fellowships, State Education Department; and Advisory Committee to Speaker of the New York State Assembly on Revision of the Constitution.

An estimated 200 participants are expected to register for the conference Sunday, August 18, at the Dutch Quadrangle. A reception and social hour will be held in the Campus Center dining room after which a buffet dinner will be served. Kenneth J. Frasure, chairman of advanced programs for the university's School of Education, heads the planning committee for the conference.

At the second general session on Tuesday, August 20, Edgar Fuller, executive secretary, Council of Chief State School Officers, will discuss "Issues in the Federal Governance of Education" and James E. Allen, Jr., New York State Commissioner of Education, will comment on "Issues in the State Governance of Education." Among the speakers scheduled for the fourth general session on Thursday, August 22, are Norman J. Boyan, director of Division of Educational Laboratories, U.S. Office of Education, whose topic will be "Regional Administration of Education and the Regional Laboratories", and Wendell Pierce, executive director, Education Commission of the States, who will speak on "Concerns of the Commission of the States."

At the final general session on Friday, August 23, Clyde M. Campbell, director of the Mott Institute for Community Development, Michigan State University, and D. Richard Wynn, professor of education and chairman of the program in educational administration at the University of Pittsburgh, will give talks on "The Governance of the Community School" and "A School Board in a Negotiating Session", respectively.

Throughout the week's program there will be expressed reactions to the principal addresses, panel discussions, meetings of interest groups, small groups reaction reports, as well as formal evening programs. Additionally, the events will include elections; a picnic Wednesday, August 21, at Saratoga Spa State Park; and a banquet Friday evening, August 23, in the Dutch Quadrangle dining room.

Chairman-elect of the NCPEA for 1969 is Samuel Goldman, chairman of the department of educational administration at Syracuse University. Several members of the SUNYA faculty and their wives are serving as the university's host committee. Many of the conference participants will be accompanied by their families.

Dr. Wallace W. Taylor, professor of education, State University of New York at Albany, will attend the fourth Pan American Conference on Rehabilitation in Hong Kong September 1-7. He also plans to participate in a roundtable discussion on the non-medical aspects of cerebral palsy at a pre-conference meeting on August 30 and 31.

Among those attending the conference will be medical specialists and social workers concerned with the problems of rehabilitation, particularly in less advanced Asian countries. Professor Taylor has experience in visiting such countries and helping start rehabilitation programs, having spent a 1967 sabbatical in that work. He and his wife, Isabelle, are involved in a long-term study in special education services in 12 Asian countries. While in Hong Kong, Professor Taylor will take part in informal conferences with special education and social welfare experts from a number of Asian countries in connection with that project.

After the Hong Kong meetings, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor plan to travel in Australia and New Zealand, lecturing and participating in planning sessions with government officials and officers of volunteer services.

Dr. Taylor has been on the Albany faculty since 1938. He previously taught at the State University of Iowa, from which he received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. The educator has devoted much time and study, here and abroad, to the exceptional child. In addition, he and his wife co-authored the book "Special Education of Physically Handicapped Children in Western Europe" and "Services for Handicapped Youth in England and Wales," both published by the International Society for Rehabilitation of the Disabled.

The 1967-68 Speakers' Bureau, State University of New York at Albany, includes some 70 persons and more than 130 topics. The subjects range from the expected areas of civil rights, education, and the Vietnam war to such intriguing titles as "Human Orientation to Boston and New York City," "Single Parent Homes," and "Weeds." Nearly all segments of politics, science, government, literature, and social work are covered by at least one speaker.

The Speakers' Bureau, revised each year to keep abreast of new faculty and to include additional areas of study and specialization of current members, is a coordinating agency operated through the university's community relations office. It serves the purpose of centralizing the speaking resources of university faculty and staff, thus facilitating the scheduling of interesting and informative speakers by area groups.

Once the sponsor has chosen a speaker, biographical information is forwarded for introductory purposes. Any inquiries concerning the Speakers' Bureau should be directed to the community relations office, SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12203.

Three new faculty members will aid the development of the graduate program in philosophy at State University of New York at Albany. Dr. Robert F. Creegan, chairman of the departmental committee on graduate studies, is guiding the expanding program, which this fall will have some 12 students pursuing graduate work.

The new teachers are Terrell W. Bynum, Dr. Oskar A. Kubitz, and James A. Thomas. Mr. Bynum will hold the title of assistant professor; Dr. Kubitz, that of visiting associate professor; and Mr. Thomas, lecturer, becoming assistant professor on completion of requirements for his Ph.D. degree.

Mr. Bynum is a graduate of the University of Delaware (B.A., B.S.) and Princeton University (M.A.) and now is completing his Ph.D. requirements at Princeton. He spent a year in Bristol, England, studying the philosophy of science on a Fulbright grant and has held both Woodrow Wilson and Danforth fellowships. The philosopher, whose particular interests are in metaphilosophy, the history of logic, the philosophy of science, and epistemology, comes to Albany from American University, Washington, D.C. He is in the process of publishing a series of volumes on the modern philosopher and mathematician Gottlob Frege.

Dr. Kubitz, an assistant professor and assistant dean at the University of Illinois, will be a visiting lecturer at Albany during the 1968-69 academic year. His special fields are 19th century philosophy, Existentialism, and Latin American philosophy. Dr. Kubitz received his A.B. degree from James Millikin University, Decatur, Ill., and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Illinois. He has published a variety of articles on Latin American philosophy, John Stuart Mill, and Descartes. His long experience with graduate programs in philosophy is expected to aid Albany in developing its program.

Mr. Thomas is completing his doctoral program at Washington University, after having received a B.A. from the University of Delaware and an M.A. from Washington. A Phi Beta Kappa, he has held Woodrow Wilson, Danforth, and National Science Foundation graduate fellowships. The scholar's particular interest is in symbolic logic and the philosophy of science.

Among the many visiting professors at State University of New York at Albany this summer is Dr. Victor E. Hill, assistant professor of mathematics at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. He is teaching mathematics at Albany.

Since earning his Ph.D. degree in mathematics from the Carnegie Institute of Technology in 1961, Dr. Hill has been investigating group and representation theory. His field of specialization is "finite groups."

The mathematician is an active member of the Society for Religion in Higher Education. A report of his study entitled "Chaos Out of Order in Many-Valued Logics" will be the subject of the "Order and Chaos" seminar of the society in 1969.

Dr. Hill recently completed the first draft of a textbook "Group Theory for Physical Science Students." Publication of the book is in negotiation. An accomplished musician, Dr. Hill plays the harpsichord and the organ. His paper, "Order and Emotion in Baroque Music", will shortly appear in Soundings: A Journal of Interdisciplinary Studies.

Auditions for the newly-formed university-community symphony orchestra at State University of New York at Albany get underway Monday, August 26, at the Campus Center. William Hudson, conductor, said that the orchestra is open to all qualified students at the university as well as to exceptionally talented performers of all ages within commuting distance of the university. The only requirement is a high level of ability.

Membership in the orchestra will comprise university music majors, general students, faculty, high school students, and adults. The orchestra will provide both an opportunity for the exceptionally advanced performer to participate in rehearsals and concerts of a full symphony orchestra whose standards are professionally oriented and a training ground for university music students and experienced high school performers, as well as adults who are interested in continuing in a previous professional or college playing experience on a voluntary basis.

Those desiring auditions are advised to call for an appointment as early as possible, but no later than September 15 when auditions will close. Auditions take place in room 315 of Campus Center and appointments may be made with Mr. Hudson at 457-6977 or at the music department office, 457-6868. Percussion, string basses, and certain other large instruments may be supplied at no cost to those accepted for membership.

The orchestra will rehearse and perform the standard large orchestral repertoire, such as Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky, and Dvorak symphonies, as well as some contemporary works. At least two completely different programs will be performed each year.

The full orchestra will rehearse each Thursday from 7-9 p. m. In addition, there will be a string orchestra rehearsal on Tuesdays from 3-4:45 p. m. The latter group will rehearse works for string orchestra and compositions that include various wind instruments, such as the Bach Brandenburg Concerti. Under certain circumstances, such as schedule conflicts, players may be excused from either the Thursday or Tuesday rehearsal, since each group rehearses different repertoire. It is to be desired that all string players be available for both rehearsal times, however, since some part of the Tuesday rehearsal may be used as a sectional for the full orchestra.

Thirty teachers of American economic history are attending the Summer Institute of the Historical Development of the American Economic System at State University of New York at Albany. They are learning how to develop inductive teaching strategies and procedures on economic understandings and how to provide students with an understanding of the historical and economic forces which produced the achievements of our contemporary economy.

The secondary teachers who are participating in the two-week course are being aided by full state tuition maintenance scholarships. Grants for the institute were made available by the State Education Department in cooperation with the New York State Council on Economic Education and the Center for Economic Education, State University of New York at Albany, acting in joint sponsorship of the project.

Professor J. Woodrow Sayre, director of the state council and Albany center, is director of the institute. Professor Louis R. Salkever, chairman of the economics department at State University of New York at Albany, is the instructor and economist. Assistance is being provided by William Hemmer, Bureau of Continuing Education Curriculum Development, and Dr. Janet Gilber, Bureau of Secondary Curriculum Development, both from the State Education Department.

The opening session on Sunday, August 18 featured Dr. David L. Grove, chief economist, International Business Machines Corporation. His topic was "Economic Fluctuation". Mr. Grove was introduced by Welles A. Gray, director of the Department of Governmental Affairs, Empire State Chamber of Commerce in Albany.

Three guest instructors will be taped for television which will be shown throughout the State University system. They are Professor Ralph Adams Brown, State University College at Cortland; Jack Rubenstein, director, New York State Textile Workers Union of America; and Professor Kendall A. Birr, chairman, department of History, at SUNYA. The purpose of the workshop which will end on Friday, August 30 is to help teachers meet more effectively the intensified demands of the New York State Education Department since a new syllabus changes the emphasis in teaching to one based on an analytical study of major aspects of American history, one of which is economic development. Those participating also are earning three hours of graduate credit. The teachers who have been selected for their ability and leadership will present on TV tapes superior teaching methods. The tapes will be shown at various teacher institutes this fall.

Teachers also will have an opportunity to discuss problems with university faculty and experienced teachers in the state. Leaders from all sectors of the economy will be on hand to provide practical application of principles of economics. The roster of speakers and consultants includes Miss Mildred McChesney, chief, Bureau of Social Studies, State Education Department; Robert Fraser, field director, Delaware Valley Council on Economic Education, Temple University; Charles deSeve, economic instructional materials coordinator, Albany Center for Economic Education; James W. Rice and Richard D. Garlick, SUNYA Center for Educational Communications; and members of the NYSCEE Secondary Schools Committee: Helen Maney, Geneva High School; Edward Schulman, Churchville-Chili Central School; Ira Marienhoff, Hunter College

High School; William Warren, Shaker High School; Martin Rosen, Farmingdale Senior High School; and Ida Fabian, Kenmore Junior High School. Among the teachers from the Capital District area participating are:

George Sengenberger, Guilderland Central High School; Brother Leo J. Legendre, Vincentian Institute, Albany; Sister Claire M. Helm, Maryrose Academy, Albany; Mary Moore, Linton High School, Schenectady; and Richard Nucci, Van Rensselaer High School, Rensselaer.

Dr. Vincent F. Cowling, chairman, department of mathematics, State University of New York at Albany, will attend the seventy-third summer meeting of the American Mathematical Society.

The five-day conference will be held at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, beginning August 25. Some 3,000 representatives are expected to attend the conference.

Lectures have been scheduled by the most outstanding mathematicians in the United States: Professors Donald C. Spencer, Stamford University, and Professor P. A. Griffith, University of Houston.

The meeting will be held in conjunction with the meetings of the Mathematical Association of America, the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics, the Institute of Mathematical Statistics.

Other department of mathematics faculty members participating in the conference are Professors Donald R. Kerr, Kenneth G. Binmore, Howard H. Stratton and Nura Turner. Professor Turner will speak before two committees of the conference and will report on the Fourth British Olympiad, held in London, England, May 14-20, 1968. Professor Turner also will present a proposal for an International Mathematical Olympiad between some 'western' countries in 1969.

Drs. Binmore, Kerr and Stratton will discuss their ten-minute papers at the morning session on August 29..

John Nicolopoulos has been named to the new post of coordinator of international education and area studies in the College of Arts and Sciences at State University of New York at Albany. He will work under the direction of Dean O. William Perlmutter and in cooperation with associate deans of the college in the direction and support functions needed for management of the university's international education programs. Additionally, his responsibilities will include maintaining liaison with other State University units cooperating in programs sponsored by SUNYA or other State University units.

Mr. Nicolopoulos's most recent post was that of press and cultural affairs officer at the Greek Embassy in Washington. He has a bachelor of arts degree in political science (international relations) from Pomona College and a second arts degree with honors in Russian studies from the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University of London. He currently is working on a book concerning the role of the Greek army in politics since 1897 and commuting to Columbia where he has transferred credits from the Sorbonne towards a doctoral degree in Russian history. Mr. Nicolopoulos will lecture in history at the Albany university.

Currently the university has programs at the University of Guadalajara, the University of Wurzburg, and the University of Nice. Being considered are programs in Asia, Latin American and Canada.

Appearing in the current (August 26) issue of The Nation, weekly periodical, is an article, "Conservation and Survival", written by Dr. Robert Rienow, professor of political science, Graduate School of Public Affairs, State University of New York at Albany, and by his wife, Leona Train Rienow.

The authors call attention in their writing to their conclusion that conservation no longer is a cause but a crisis. Described are the forces at work and how critical the position of the country is with regard to the necessity for an adequate conservation program. The forces are listed as a growing population, the "growth" obsession, and the "pityless" power of technology undirected.

Brooks Atkinson has described the article in a communication as "a brilliant piece which answers the question of conservationists for years to come".

Dr. Robert Rienow, professor of political science at the Graduate School of Public Affairs, State University of New York at Albany, is the author of "Manifesto for the Sea" appearing in the July-August 1968 issue of The American Behavioral Scientist. In his writing he calls for "an entirely new manifesto of the sea built not, as in the past, on legal limitations alone, but constructed primarily on the ecological realities of a sick sea in what may be fatal crisis."
