Dr. Brubacher Announces Best Major And Minor Combinations

President A. R. Brubacher announced today the major and minor combinations that have greatest sales values in obtaining teaching positions. They are: Latin and French; French, German and Spanish; mathematics and science; biology, chemistry and physics; English and any other subject; history and any other subject, except government and economics; commerce; home economics.

"Many students make the mistake of electing an impractical combination such as Latin and Government," he said.

Dr. Brubacher also said that it is not important which subject in each combination is chosen as major and which as minor. It is the combination itself upon which the sales value depends.

"Government and economics are not usually demanded as separate teaching subjects," he said. "They have their greatest value in combination with other majors and minors."

"Membership in the society is to be restricted in the future to juniors and seniors. Regular elections will take place in May," she explained. "Two more students may be elected in October, however. Although membership is limited, the number admitted is a secret."

MR. FALLON ON TRADITIONS AND BATTLE

EDITOR, THE NEWS: I am sorely perplexed. Should we have traditions or not? If we should have them, how are we to enforce them? The United States Supreme Court is the shining example of a body whose orders are complied with, regardless of the fact that there is no force in back of their orders to enforce compliance, except the regard held for law by those on whom the orders are placed.

tions are desired at State College let everyone keep them. If they aren't, there is always plenty of time during the meetings of the student body to make a motion to abolish them.

NEWS' JOURNALISM WORK VALUABLE, WRITES CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

[The Christian Science Monitor, the "international daily newspaper," published recently the following account of the STATE COLLEGE NEWS on its education page.] The working out of an ideal of improving high school publications of New York state has this year developed at the State College for Teachers a form of journalistic training that is rare, if not unique, in the East.

The student staff of the College newspaper has been recruited to nearly 100 members. These students form the memberships of the classes. Enrollment in all the classes, except the most elementary one, is optional, and no College credit is given for the work.

The newspaper has benefited itself by the work, besides, as it thinks, training those who work for it. Its advertising volume has nearly tripled, its news volumes has doubled, and there has been marked improvement in the general style of makeup, news writing, headlining, etc.

The members of the staff are kept in closer social contact with each other by a News club, a social organization, to which everyone connected with the paper is eligible. A small mimeographed sheet, the News Round, is published weekly, carrying bulletins and announcements from the various department heads and other news of specialized interest to the staff.

ROUND TABLE WAS A SUCCESS, SAY HEADS OF GROUP MEETINGS

Dr. A. R. Brubacher has expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the success of the round table conference here Saturday. This success is measured both by the large group of teachers, principals and superintendents who attended and by the reports of the department heads who were leaders of the different sections.

"If we were to go ahead with what creative intelligence we have, we could do most anything with this old world," declared Mr. Brown. Creation he described as the taking apart of elements from their old customary associations and putting them together again in a new relationship.

"Honesty seems to be a family matter," Mark A. May, Columbia university specialist on character education, told the conference.

THE By THEATER Playgoer

The Ziegfeld is "On the Fence" about State College. In the musical comedy of last week-end, G. A. A. seems to have presented him with another "garden of girls" to glorify.

Timely lyrics, sure-fire wisecracks, and enough plot to hold up the show, more than satisfied the capacity audiences on both nights. Peg Flanagan, '27, as Fanny Hobbs, played the lead in a delightful heart-breaking Joe College fashion. She made the most of every last note in the performance.

The chorus work was remarkably well done for amateur production. The Redbeers seemed to lead, with the Nuts as a close second, and the Co-op Grinds not far behind. Gertrude Sweetmann, '27, as Mrs. Taylor, won well-deserved applause with her solo. The "Gumpus Moom" scene broke musical show traditions with a dark finale but was extremely effective.

STATE COLLEGE HAS 2 DELEGATES AT VASSAR

Miss Martha C. Pritchard, director of the library school, and Miss Anna Clark Kennedy, extension instructor in the library school and librarian of the Hudson High school, represented State College at a recent meeting at Vassar college to discuss children's readings. Other delegates from this state also attended.

The discussion of the most interest, Miss Pritchard said, was the one in which many mothers gave their experiences in trying to inoculate their children with their own love of reading and their standards of taste for good literature.

"Should the child who starts to read adult standard fiction by himself be steered away from it because he will not get the full enjoyment of it yet?" was a question put to the librarians. Mrs. Fisher said, "Shall I keep Pickwick from thirteen who enjoys every word, because perchance, middle age does not longer care for it?"

BRUBACHER'S VOLUME LAUDED BY AMERICAN EDUCATION MAGAZINE

"No book that has appeared in recent years seems so well adapted for introducing courses in education or for adoption by teachers' reading circles" is the tribute accorded by the "American Education" magazine for March to President A. R. Brubacher's latest book "Teaching: Profession and Practice." The review says:

"A class room teacher, a high school principal, a city school superintendent, a teachers' college president, Dr. Brubacher is ideally trained to write a book that has long been needed. If only some way might be found to see that every teacher, present and prospective, every principal, supervisor, and superintendent, and above all, every school board member might read it.

"After defining a profession and describing the characteristics of the teaching profession, Dr. Brubacher very frankly but sympathetically shows where teachers as a group fail to meet these standards.

"Possibly the best portions of the book, if one dare use the word best where all is so good, are the chapters on 'Our Ethical Signs in September because she has a position she likes better; the superintendent's Obligations.' The teacher who refuses to release a teacher no matter how important it is to the teacher to be released; the board of education member who cannot see beyond 'A contract is a contract' would all think more clearly if they could read these chapters. While agreeing that one who breaks a contract should be expelled from the profession, Dr. Brubacher's sympathies are all with the teacher. He favors the 30-day clause in all contracts as being fair to both school board and teacher alike.

"Each chapter closes with a summary, or conclusion, subjects for discussion and investigation, and lists for parallel reading. No book that has appeared in recent years seems so well adapted for introductory courses in education or for adoption by teachers' reading circles."

general composure, neatness in attire, a sunny disposition and frankness in expressing one's own opinion."

Anna Randolph Keim, assistant professor of home economics, has made a detailed study of the rudiments of living people, especially as concerns educational matters.

Her requirements, listed in the order of their importance, are: "Cooperation, tact, pleasing appearance, leadership, health, resourcefulness, good judgment, enthusiasm, promptness, responsibility, accuracy and neatness."

"We aim to give the student body a unified book which will be a personal Pedagogue," she said. "It will contain a complete record of the school year. The senior write-ups will carry out the personal idea, being intimate impressions of members of the class."

"Elephants a-pilin' teak,
In the sludgy, suddy creek,
Where the silence 'ung that 'eavy
You was 'arf afraid to speak!"
—Kipling's "Mandalay"

ELEPHANTS

The elephant is man's most intelligent helper. But—consider this interesting comparison:

An elephant is much larger than the electric motor of a "yarder" or logging machine. The "yarder" has the power of twenty elephants; it handles clusters of logs; it works dependably, twenty-four hours at a stretch, if necessary.

Twenty elephants would eat daily 10,000 pounds of green food, which a corps of attendants must gather. A motor "eats" nothing but electricity, supplied at the throw of a switch.

Power used in the modern industrial world is applied through electric motors—tireless "iron elephants" that are relegating antiquated machines to museums, along with such oldtime household articles as wash-tubs and ordinary irons—and stuffed elephants.

Two million elephants could not do the work now being done by General Electric motors. Whatever the work to be done, whether it needs the power of an elephant or the force of a man's arm, there is a General Electric motor that will do it faithfully for a lifetime at a cost of a few cents an hour.

Showing French People At Their Best, Club's Duty, Brubacher Says

GREETINGS TO THE FRENCH CLUB:

Adolescence is the difficult age. Your club is entering its "term-age," a period of enthusiasms and adventures. During this second decade your club will accomplish great things. I should like to see French art, French literature, French drama, French civilization made familiar to State College students through your club. We know more of the lighter side of the French people than of their serious side. Your club will render a distinct service to State College and to the French people if you show us the French at their best. I congratulate you on your anniversary and on your opportunity.

"Just Walked Into Class, Proposed It," Simonin Says Of Founding French Club Here

Tomorrow, French club is celebrating the tenth anniversary of its founding, with one of the most spectacular events it has ever sponsored. When the club came into existence there were but few members, piloted by their little group of officers. Now it boasts of a membership of 125 and is headed by several officers and a large group of committees.

According to Professor Simonin, French club had a rather informal beginning. "I just walked into class one day," said Mr. Simonin, "and proposed starting a French club. Everyone seemed to like the idea immensely and the entire class was very enthusiastic about it. So we just got together and formed the club."

The purpose and aim of the club was to present French in an interesting and practical way to the students of the language. Since that time, the purpose has become broader, until it includes not only presenting the language of France to students, but presenting also the customs and habits of the French, the history and geography of France, and facts which help French to seem not like an abstract study of a vague something, but vital, alive and real.

Shortly after the founding of the club, the United States entered the World War, and that in itself gave the club an immense boost. The members organized and chose the following officers: president, Alice M. Edwards; vice-president, Helene E. Laventure, secretary, Della Ross; assistant secretary, Beatrice Sullivan; treasurer, Eloise

Lansing; reporter, Dorothy Ablett.

At present, meetings are held the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month. The first meeting is devoted to the transaction of business, and the second to program and social time. At these program meetings, various members of the faculty give interesting talks on the customs of France and the French people which they often illustrate by lantern slides. Sometimes outside talent is secured for a program, and a number of the students, from time to time (most entertainment in the way of French ball songs or dances).

Each year since the founding, the club has grown in size and in popularity, students of the department finding it an invaluable aid in their work. Much gratitude is due to Professor Simonin, who fostered the club and has always given it his loyal support. The little informal gathering in his class room to which he purposed the starting of an organization into a crowd, attempting larger things each year for the advancement of French and interest in France and its charming inhabitants. Professor Simonin does not take the credit to which his untiring labors and charming personality entitle him.

The French club was founded in 1917. Past officers are: president in '25, Iva Guinan; president in '26, Isabelle Plude. Present officers are: president, Margaret C. Taylor, '27; vice-president, Violet Pierce, '28; secretary-treasurer, Henriette Francois, '29; reporter, Margaret Cosgro, '29.

PRESENT FANTASY AT CLUB MEETING MAY 17

A French fantasy, "La Princesse au Bois Dormant," written and directed by Regina Perreault, '27, will feature French club meeting Tuesday, May 17. "Those who will take part are Louise Bennett, Grace Jay Adams, Louise Herrick, Catherine Curtis Adams, and June Herrick, pupils of Miss Perreault.

A short musical program will follow. Marion Conklin, '29, will play piano selections. Refreshments will be served.

SIMONIN ANNOUNCES PLAN FOR CLASS IN ARCHERY, FENCING

State College is to take another step along the road to becoming intercollegiate in the very near future. Plans are afoot for the formation of an archery and fencing class which will be started as soon as arrangements have been completed, according to an announcement of Amedee Simonin, assistant professor in French.

"Other colleges have these classes," said Mr. Simonin, "so why not State? The class will be formed as soon as I have the time to see Colonel Charles Walsh and make arrangements with him for the services of an instructor."

The fencing and archery will be taught in conjunction with the work of the French club, of which Mr. Simonin was the founder ten years ago. According to Mr. Simonin those with whom he has spoken on the subject, consider it a wise move, and a great deal of enthusiasm has been displayed by students of French and members of the French club and especially by those who are fond of sports and are interested in learning as much of the French nation, its people and their customs, as possible during their college course.

Both archery and fencing are among the most popular sports for women in some of the larger colleges and often intercollegiate teams vie with one another for supremacy in the art.

PLAY WILL CENTER AROUND DOG THEFT

Perrault, Tepidino, Rigouard Have Leads In Drama Given In French

The desire of a pretty French maid to go to America where every girl is a grande dame, and the struggle of her lover, the cook, to make her stay in France and marry him furnish the theme of the play "Nous Verrons," by Emma L. Simpson, to be given by the French club at its French fête tomorrow night. Jacques, the cook, in order to make Yvonne dependent on him for her position and therefore willing to stay in France and marry him, steals their mistress' dog while Yvonne is guarding it in the park. He knows that she will be blamed for carelessness and that only his returning the dog will save her position. The theft is observed by a policeman, and the rest of the play deals arduously with the attempts of Jacques to escape the law. In the third act, however, his scheme succeeds, at least to the extent of winning Yvonne to a promise to remain French forever.

The play will be given in French. Yvonne will be played by Regina Perreault, '27; Jacques by Michael Tepidino, '29; Madame DuPont, the mistress, by Rose Rigouard, '30; her nephew, Paul, who aids Jacques in escaping the policeman, by Clinton Wallwork, '29; the niece, Louise, by Evelyn Palmer, '27. Minor characters are played by Clarence Newbery, '28; Julia Doyle, '30; Margaret Cosgro, '29; Thelma L. Brezee, '27, and Margaret W. Martin, '28.

The play will be at 8 o'clock in the auditorium. It will be preceded by dancing, which will also continue after the play until 11:30 o'clock.

The chairman of the committees for the play are: costumes, Thelma Brezee, '27; sets, props and lights, Genevieve LaFleche, '27; Margaret Taylor, '27, president of the club, is directing the play.

Flashlight pictures of the play cast will be taken in the gymnasium at 7:45 o'clock.

MISS MAUD MALCOLM, ILL FROM OVERWORK, RECOVERING SLOWLY

By ELIZABETH PIHETPLACE

The condition of Miss Maud Malcolm, instructor in French, whose illness has been the cause of anxiety in her department, is reported as improving. Brought on by overwork and nerve strain, her ill health is requiring more than ordinary treatment, which may extend over a considerable period.

Although Miss Malcolm is not confined to her home, her activities are under the strict surveillance of her physician. Absolute rest and freedom from the cares which have brought on the collapse, are part of the regime.

Trips to the dentist and doctor enforced leisure and relaxation take up an amazing amount of time, Miss Malcolm finds. Friends of the faculty and student body who have visited her say that she is gaining strength and seems to be in an optimistic frame of mind.

Long walks in the March wind and sunshine, a gentle, hygienic discipline and every resource of rest and diversion are being brought to bear on the situation to further recuperation and restore the health of this popular teacher.

Officers and chairman of committees of the French club are looking forward to Miss Malcolm's return. She has taken an active interest and her assistance has been invaluable in the activities of the club.

FRENCH CLUB MAY BE AN HONORARY SOCIETY

French club may be converted into a departmental honorary society in the near future, according to its present officers. It would then become an elective body for honor students in French.

"It is felt that this is in line with a general movement of the colleges of the country," said Margaret Taylor, '27, president. "A step has already been taken in this direction by putting in the constitution, which was revised this year, the stipulation that all meetings shall be conducted in French."

"When this becomes a reality, French club will be even more helpful for those who expect to teach French. It is hoped that more advanced programs may be a part of the club's regular activities."

MR. EDDY TALKS ON JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Advises Frequent Visitations Of Senior Teachers To Junior Classes

The junior high school plan, considered the most important development of the last two decades in secondary education, must merge with the work of the senior high schools as naturally as the roots merge with the tree of which they are parts. Such was the opinion emphasized by George E. Eddy, principal of the Washington Junior High School of Rochester, speaking at a round-table meeting on the junior high school Saturday.

Dr. M. G. Nelson

Mr. Eddy was introduced by Dr. M. D. Nelson, assistant professor of education, who referred to the pioneer work done by the Rochester school in the development of the junior high school idea.

The necessity of "getting together" with the senior high school was stressed by Mr. Eddy throughout his talk. The two schools must know each other intimately, he said. He advised frequent visitations by teachers of one school to the classes of the other, the exchange of student talent for assembly programs and numerous other devices.

The four most important extra-curricular activities of the junior high school, he said, are the school community organization, the class meeting, the club program and the character forming work. At Rochester most of this is made part of the curricular program.

"We established the junior high school ostensibly to accomplish a sort of union, to 'bridge the gap' between the elementary and the high school," he said. "In the opinion of some we have succeeded merely in making two gaps where one existed before. Be that as it may, it is not inconceivable that we can accomplish the work of preparing the individual for service to himself, for his country and for society efficiently and well, even though two buildings are required instead of one to complete the task."

CLUB ATTENDS SERVICE

No Journalism With Credit Next Year, Hastings Tells Freshmen

Professor Harry W. Hastings, chairman of the English department, today made answer to the freshman petition for a journalism course. In part, he said: "That the students of the College take a lively interest in the English department is abundantly clear from the number of petitions which come to me. I have had four other petitions within a year. Although I am not always able to act upon them favorably, I have always considered them carefully. In the present instance, I can only say that we hope eventually to have a course which will give advice upon the management of high school papers. Meanwhile the staff of the NEWS has been doing an admirable service through its enterprising instruction classes for 'cubs', and will, I hope, continue the work next year."
