AID CAMPUS COMMISSION

Once again the tedious tasks of keeping the College in order and providing a method of presenting a neat and attractive appearance is being undertaken by the students who have been appointed members of the College campus commission. There is only one possible way in which they may be at all successful in carrying out their duties, and that is with the voluntary co-operation of each and every member of the student body.

Campus commission includes in its regular duties supervision over the men's and women's locker rooms, charge of all lost and found items, supervision of the annex in the lower corridor of Husted hall, and charge of the bulletin boards and display posters. This is a tremendous task for any group to undertake to do in a manner which will cause comment because of the efficiency of its accomplishment. However, the task is possible of fulfillment if each student will remember that this is his College, that he is an integral part of its welfare, and that it is only by doing his own individual part of the work that the final result will be satisfactory.

Certain students display a blasé carelessness in any attempts to enforce regulations or to suggest additional methods by which the commission may solve its problems. Such attitudes as these, however, serve only to complicate the work of the commission by presenting destructive obstacles which must be overcome before the students can set about upon their constructive program.

COLLEGE REPRESENTATIVES

Representatives of State college are today and tomorrow attending a state conference of Young Men's and Young Women's Christian associations which is being conducted at Rome. Next week a number of the News board will attend the annual convention of the National Scholastic Press association in Cincinnati, O. Every week new possibilities for attendance at state, regional, and national meetings of colleges and schools are presented and discussed. Participation in meetings such as these is one thing which serves to stimulate inter-collegiate interest in a college, and which classifies the college in the category of the other colleges in regard to its willingness to co-operate by actual representation.

The advantages which each student representative of the college receives from these contacts with students of other colleges may be evaluated according to the effect they may have upon the student, and in turn, what he is able to bring back for the College and to develop in himself for the working with others. Conferences and conventions are conducted in order that each school may be enabled to see and learn from a first-hand contact knowledge what is going on in the other schools, and that the students may receive inspiration and confidence in their work in their own college as a result of activities and ideas presented at these meetings.

The best advertisement a college can have is the mental alertness and eagerness of its student body, especially as evidenced in their desire to participate in meetings with other students and to talk over problems which are similar for many of them. Each organization on the campus can and should do its part to provide as many inter-collegiate student contacts as possible.

THE POINT SYSTEM

A motion was introduced into the assembly last Friday which provided for a suggested change in the evaluation of several offices on the News board according to the point system for holding offices. It is the belief of members of the board that the allocation of the positions of advertising and finance managers of the News in the major grouping, which carries seven points, is illogical and incorrect. The motion provided for a change in the system to place these offices in the low major grouping of five points.

The discussion and arguments concerning this particular phase of the point system have brought out many facts and problems concerning the system as a whole. The question has been raised whether the system is fundamentally sound, whether it serves its purpose, and that purpose actually is, and what it should be in order to provide the most satisfactory distribution of points. A point system should have one definite purpose, and the allocation of points under the system should be such as to most successfully carry out the definite purpose.

There are two major purposes which may be assigned to a point system. It may be used as a method of determining the relative honors which each office has in relation to the other offices in the group. As such it is merely a system which groups the offices according to the honor which the title holds for the incumbent of the office. The second method for which it may be utilized is to evaluate the work of each individual office and group the offices according to the evaluations of each. Such evaluations would properly be suggested by the governing boards of each organization for the offices of its organization. Such a method would place the same point emphasis on offices which had somewhat similar duties and responsibilities connected with them.

The present point system seems to present to an observer a compromise between these two purposes of a system. Some offices are evidently placed in certain groups because some person desires an honor to be attached to the office, although the duties and responsibilities of the office do not warrant such in comparison with the work of other offices in the same group. Such is the case with the allocation of the News offices. The presidents of such organizations as the Girls' Athletic association, the Young Women's Christian association, the dramatic and art council, music council, and the presidents of the four classes are situated in the same group as these offices.

Whatever may be the results of this immediate discussion concerning a particular allocation of offices it will serve to bring about some constructive thought upon the activities of the system as a whole and upon its general purposes and accomplishments.

BOOKS: VAN LOON WRITES WORLD GEOGRAPHY

For Sale in the Co-op

Van Loon's Geography. The Story of the World We Live in. Written and illustrated by Hendrik Willem Van Loon. 525 pp. New York: Simon & Schuster, $3.75.

The large flat geography books which children were formerly expected to study in school had one advantage which Mr. Van Loon's contribution to the subject lacks—they could be used to conceal smaller and more exciting books, such as "Ned at the Block-house," "The Mysterious Avenger," or one of the Old Sleuth series. With this exception Mr. Van Loon's book is so much better that it hardly seems to belong to the same subject. Indeed, it is almost as exciting as Old Sleuth himself. This may be because Mr. Van Loon does not play fair, and leaves out the facts which do not interest him, whereas to the older type of geographer a fact was a fact whether it interested any one or not, and as such was duly set down. In general he has written in accordance with the wishes of an unidentified friend, who said: "Put all the mountains and the cities and the oceans on your maps and then tell us only about the people who live in those places and why they are there and when they came from and what they are doing a sort of human interest story applied to geography."

That Mr. Van Loon will be entertaining to no one who has read "The Story of Mankind" can doubt. He has formed the habit of looking at subjects from all sorts of curious angles—perhaps no more curious, to be sure, than the ones we are more accustomed to and he mingles a high degree of sophistication with a style which is apparently simple. At first one might think he was writing for children. He is not so doing, however, and this book will probably be completely baffling to any child under, let us say, twelve years of age. Actually, his method is to say to his readers, with something resembling a wink, "Let us pretend to be children. Let us make believe that we have never heard of geography before, and see what happens."

Mr. Van Loon makes a good deal of natural features, partly because he is enacting the role of geographer, partly because he draws them rather well. Fortunately, he is no doctrinaire, and is not sure what the reason is for the greatness of Paris, lying at the bottom of a rainy bowl, like the centre of a dripping saucer, or for the failure of Marseilles, with its superb location, to become great. He is not even sure why so many people choose to live on the slopes of volcanoes, though a good many college freshmen could tell him that it is because the soil is apt to be richer there. Perhaps his conviction that Europe, "with its moderate climate and convenient location in the heart of the land masses of this earth, was predestined to play the role of the leading continent," is his only conspicuous example of provincialism. In habitats of other continents might well question whether Europe always has been or always will be "the leading continent."

As a world traveler Mr. Van Loon wanders through time as well as space, pausing wherever there is something to attract the attention. Mere bulk does not interest him. He has his likes and dislikes. He is not content, as his comments on Spain indicate. He has a list of the preacher which makes him enjoy peering a moment now and then.

In short, Mr. Van Loon could not to be read mechanically nor without a pinch of salt within easy reach. At times he is a brilliant thinker, at other times, merely a brilliant phrase-maker. The result is that his book is intensely interesting and highly stimulating, but that it should perhaps not be the only book on geography that one would take along if he were to be shipwrecked with a small but carefully chosen library on a desert island. —New York Times.

"Book Of Job Is More Daring Drama Than Any Of O'Neill," Dr. Thompson Says

"The Book of Job is a much more daring drama than any that O'Neill ever imagined," Dr. Harold W. Thompson, professor of English, stated at a discussion meeting conducted Tuesday afternoon in the Lounge of Richardson hall by the Young Women's Christian association. The topic of the discussion was "The Bible as Literature." Dr. Thompson discussed this subject last year in his Sunday night lectures at the First Presbyterian church on the corner of Willet and State streets. "You ought to be the greatest biblical students the world has ever known because you are not afraid of the Bible and do not take it literally," Dr. Thompson told the group. He described the Book of Job as a combination of poetry and prose containing such superior and lofty ideals that we haven't yet caught up with them; the Book of Ruth as an idyll; the Psalms as a collection of lyrical poems; and the Book of Job as a great study of character written by a poet who is at least an equal of Vergil or Homer.

After Dr. Thompson's talk the group asked him questions for the rest of the hour.

Y.M.C.A. Will Conduct Meeting Sunday At 3:00

The second Sunday afternoon discussion meeting of the Young Men's Christian association will be conducted Sunday at 3:00 o'clock in the Lounge of Richardson hall. Raymond Harris, '33, vice president of the association, will preside.

This meeting is the second of a series which are planned for the 1932-1933 program. Speakers from other schools and leaders in work of interest to college students will be featured on the program.

COMMUNICATIONS

To the Editor of the News:
I am astonished if through the columns of the News an appeal can not be made to the proper authorities to provide the maintenance of correct time on the clock in the tower of Pace hall. The irregularity of this clock is well known to all State college students. Obviously, if this clock is not right it has no value aside from that of mere ornamentation.

The nature of the gift of the class of '31 indicated the use to which they intended it to be put. Any student who has reached the faculty of attempting to regulate his arrival at classes by this time piece will heartily support an appeal that will insure correct time on this clock.

May I ask that the necessary action be taken to fix this clock for the use for which it was intended?

Sincerely,
Ruth Brooks, '35

STATES STAGE

By the Playgoer

In spite of an evident growing for lines in the early part of the play "Overtones," presented by the Blackfriars of the State college alumni, ranked first among the three productions of October 19. Although a trifle awkward at the outset, perhaps due to the strangeness of the character parts, the action became smooth and in spots highly intense. The grace, poise, and individual voice tones of Frances Gaynor, favorite of '32, were as delightful as we remember them in "Hedda Gabler." Marjorie Potter, '21, in our opinion, deserves the highest praise for depth of interpretation and for her stage presence. Her rich voice used in all its nuances and her exquisitely expressive hands made her performance the best of the evening.

The Blackfriars are to be highly congratulated for the lovely setting of "The Duchess Says Her Prayers." However, the quality of the scene made us anticipate more than we received for, in place of the emotional color that we expected from the situation, we were given mere sorrowful pretenses. The really artistic lines of the play should call forth more feeling than the actors gave it. Of the three actors, Wilhelmina Schneider, '31, impressed us most with her sincerity. Miss Schneider has a voice that is delightful to listen to in whatever part she plays. At times we doubted the sincerity of Michael Lepold's performance although we felt that in costume he was a convincing duke. Charming to see in her virginal white and blue, Ruth Moore remained only that, strong lines became weak when she stood them.

"Phipps," the first production of the advanced dramatics class of this season, lacked force. The characters with the exception of John Grosvenor, seemed powerfully and unconsciously. Ruth Crutcheley, Lady Fanny of the play, has a voice with great possibilities, but until her wrist becomes more flexible and the handling of her body by mascara and hair, she can not realize her full abilities.

Bill Reavan as Sir Gerald appeared subconsciously perhaps because of the minor importance of the part, he made no strong impression, a favorable or unfavorable one. John Grosvenor who should be a first-class actor, as State's best conductor of the active stage and so the play's main character, but not quite so good as he can be. We are pleased to note that he has been named for 1933 year's representative of the college on the States.

Playgoer wishes to give a hearty handshake of best wishes to the Blackfriars, and assures them of the interest of the undergraduates in their productions. Olga Haney, Briggs, '26, as director of the first alumni production, is to be particularly congratulated. Bravo, alumni!

STAFF TO COLLECT STUDENT PICTURES FOR SENIOR BOOK

Snapshots for the 1933 Pedagogian, senior yearbook, are now being collected, according to Florence Smith, '33, chairman of the snapshot editor. The editors include: Miss Smith, Bessie Summers, Hilma Bergstrom, and Evelyn Lowenthal, seniors; Alice Fitzpatrick and Phyllis Roegner, juniors.

All students are requested to search through their snapshots and select those which are of the most interest or are the most humorous. Freshmen, as well as upper classmen and sophomores, are asked to hand in their snap and help make the yearbook Pedagogian one which will be a lasting memory of every phase of college life, Miss Smith said.

Dr. A. B. Hart Surveys Washington's Life As Educator At Convocation Friday

"George Washington was chancellor of William and Mary college, but he never 'chancelled,'" declared Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, professor, emeritus, of history and politics at Harvard university, at the Convocation of the Regents conducted last Friday afternoon in Chancellor's hall. Speaking on the topic "Washington as an Educator," Professor Hart went on to explain that although Washington attended a school conducted by an ex-convict, those first lessons in character were to prove of inestimable value to Washington, the man, and the president.

A picturesque figure, with patriarchal beard, appropriate of the oldest American historian, Professor Hart presented a very interesting lecture, interspersed with remarks lauding Harvard university and its educational system. Hart termed the conflict between the French and colonists at Fort Mifflin, a "scrimmage." He carried on a side conversation with vice-chancellor Byrne, who presided, and who graduated from Harvard when Hart was a freshman.

"At least 20,000 letters, in fine legible style, were written by Washington at one time or another during his life-time," Hart stated. In conclusion, Professor Hart pointed out the influence of Washington and his work on the present time.

Other speakers of the afternoon included Dr. W. Siebert, research professor in Ohio State university, and Dr. David Saville Muzzev, graduate professor in history in Columbia university, and author of high school and college texts in American history.

Dr. Siebert talked on "Washington and the Loyalists." He pointed out that Washington's treatment of the loyalists, of Tories, as they were called, was not only lenient, but also wise. "The United States, by failing to follow Washington's advice (in the matter of the Tories), lost a valuable unit of population to Canada and the West Indies," he said.

Dr. Muzzev's subject was "Washington and Our Times." In this day of economic depression, much wisdom can be found in the various acts and expressions of opinion that our first president made, he stated. In summing up, Dr. Muzzev urged his audience to realize the living qualities of history.

This program of the Regents was in accordance with the theme of the Washington Bi-Centennial Celebration, which will be officially concluded on Thanksgiving day.

COMMISSION PLANS SPECIAL CAMPAIGN FOR ENFORCEMENT

The campus commission is conducting a campaign to enforce its rules, Esther Woodburn, '33, chairman of the commission, said today.

Only notes which are two inches by four inches will be permitted in the student mailbox. This rule was inaugurated so that no notes will be lost, Roger Bancroft, '34, who is in charge of the mailbox, said.

Katherine Long, '33, will have charge of the bulletin boards. All people who wish to put posters on any of the boards should communicate with Miss Long. The posters should be removed as soon as the events which they advertise are over. Evelyn Rich, '34, will have charge of the girls' locker room and Thurston Paul, '34, of the boys' locker room.

The "Lost and Found" box will not be used this year, Hannah Parker, '34, who is in charge of this part of the work, said. Instead of the box, a sign will be placed on the bulletin board in the lower corridor of Draper hall on which names of articles lost and those found should be posted. Articles unclaimed after two weeks should be given to Miss Parker.

Rutger's Dean Plans More Studies For Poor Students

New Brunswick, N. J.—(IP)—Five-hour instead of three-hour courses for freshmen whose high school training seemed to be inadequate has been advocated at Rutgers university by Dean Walter T. Marvin as a means of equalizing the education of the university's students.

The dean said the purpose of the proposed system would be to enable instructors to proceed more slowly and review the foundations of the subjects for students who required more complete preparation. Students in both the three and five hour courses would study for the same achievements and use the same textbooks, Dean Marvin said.

WOMEN TO HAVE NEW GYMNASIUM CLASSES FOR 1932

Three new classes for women students will be conducted this year by the department of physical education. Miss Margaret Hitchcock, instructor, announced today.

The new courses include classes in social dancing, a swimming class, and hot-soak culture. Miss Hitchcock stated.

Three hundred women attended the first session of dancing class for beginners conducted in the gymnasium on early fall Thursdays. The class will not admit men students, as originally announced, because of the unusually large number of students already enrolled.

Four women attended the swimming classes which were conducted Monday in the Young Women's Christian Association's pool. Instruction in life saving, diving, and use of tools will form the major part of the 1932-33 program, Miss Hitchcock added.

Forty students have already enrolled in the hot-soak culture class, and an opportunity for all those interested to take part in this new form of exercise will be offered, Miss Hitchcock explained.

Pittsburgh Students Required on Entering To Pledge Allegiance To United States

Winter Park, Fla.—(IP)—At the University of Pittsburgh this year all matriculating students were required to sign a pledge of allegiance to the university and to the United States.

Students at Rollins college this year also signed a pledge or rather took an oath, but of a somewhat different sort. It was as follows:

"I pledge myself to make the Adventure of Learning my chief effort while in Rollins college; to seek the guidance and friendship of my instructors, to measure all things by truth. "I pledge myself to strive for self-reverence and self-control, to use wisely the new gift of freedom which Rollins has granted me, so that I may make the most of liberty without license.

"I pledge myself to cherish the high ideals and traditions of my Alma Mater as a noble heritage, to transmit them untarnished to those who follow me, and both now and hereafter to honor the name of Rollins among men."

Members of the faculty took the following Installation oath:

"I pledge myself to truth wherever truth is found, to follow truth wherever truth may lead, to teach truth and nothing but the truth."

“What on earth are you up to now?”

“FINDING things out, smarty! I thought I'd examine the tobacco in a cigarette.

“Look here... this is Chesterfield tobacco. Notice its lighter color... you don't see any dark heavy types, do you? I guess that's why Chesterfields are milder.

“I'm told that uniformly lighter color is due to cross-blending. It sort of welds all the tobaccos into one.

“And here's something else. Notice that these long shreds are all cut the same width. It stands to reason they burn smoother and cooler.

“I don't pretend to be an expert but it looks to me as if they make Chesterfields right.

“Here, light one. That's the best test after all. They Satisfy.”

Library Director Announces Rule For Graduate Students

Dr. James I. Wyer, director of the New York State library at the Education building, has made several announcements concerning the use made of the borrowing system by State college students.

Dr. Wyer writes—"A number of graduate students from the State college who appear to have been teachers at some time, are urging this standing as warrant for the issuance of borrower's cards at the State library. We prefer to regard their present status as that of students at the State college, and do not care to issue individual cards.

"We are suggesting to them, however, that they apply at the College library and that if that can not furnish the books desired we are perfectly willing to lend to that library, for the use of these students, those that we have available."

Miss Mary E. Cobb, College librarian, has announced that the library will co-operate with any student who desires to obtain books.
