

news

News Bureau • (518) 457-4901 • State University of New York at Albany • 1400 Washington Avenue • Albany, New York 12222

Contact: Brenda Oettinger (518)442-3079

86-99

DEER MANAGEMENT EXPERT FEATURED

FOR NATURAL HISTORY LECTURE

The ecological interrelations and natural history of deer in New York State will be discussed by Nate Dickinson, a supervising wildlife biologist and leader of the Big Game Unit for the state Department of Environmental Conservation, at a free natural history lecture on November 11 beginning at 8:00 pm. Sponsored by the Atmospheric Sciences Research Center of the University at Albany, State University of New York, the presentation will be in Lecture Center 7 on the University's uptown campus at 1400 Washington Avenue.

Dickinson, who has coordinated deer management efforts at DEC for the past nine years and who previously was a big game leader for the Vermont Fish and Game Department, will talk about several strategies employed to maximize deer populations throughout the state. DEC's wildlife biologists consider deer the most economically important of the big game species in New York.

The lecture, the third of the fall series, includes a slide presentation. Prior to the start of the lecture, meteorological data will be discussed during an illustrated weather briefing.

Donations to the Natural History Lecture Series, made possible in part by gifts to the Ray Falconer Fund, are appreciated.

November 3, 1986

news

News Bureau • (518) 457-4901 • State University of New York at Albany • 1400 Washington Avenue • Albany, New York 12222
Contact: Vinny Reda (518) 442-3078

VIOLENT RELATIONSHIPS AND ACQUAINTANCE RAPE TO BE EXPLORED

Experts in interpersonal behavior, sexual assault therapy and self-defense will discuss the topics "Acquaintance rape and relationship violence," at the University at Albany, State University of New York's fifth annual Women's Safety Awareness Day, Wednesday, Nov. 5, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the University's Campus Center.

The event, sponsored by the President's Task Force on Women's Safety and University Auxiliary Services, will include four workshops, a panel discussion and a keynote address by Bonnie Carlson, associate professor in the University's School of Social Welfare, entitled "Violence and Rape Between Acquainted Students: What Do We Know and How Can We Help?"

All segments are open to the public at no cost. Lisa Donahue, chair of the event, says that Awareness Day encourages both men and women to attend.

Carlson's address will open the program from 10:10 to 11:10 a.m. in the Campus Center Assembly Hall. The Workshop, "Acquaintance Rape: It Can't Happen to Me ... Or Can It?" will be held at 11:15 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., and again at 1:25 - 2:55 p.m. in Campus Center 375.

Held concurrently with the above workshops will be two in the Center's Assembly Hall dealing with violent relationships. From 11:15 a.m. - 12:45 p.m. will be "Violence In Relationships: A Fight to Communicate," and, from 1:25 - 2:55 p.m., "Relationship Violence: Everyone's Problem."

The final section of the day's program, from 3:30 - 5 p.m. in the Assembly Hall, will be "University at Albany's Safety Net: Protecting Ourselves." Refreshments will be provided.

news

News Bureau • (518) 457-4901 • State University of New York at Albany • 1400 Washington Avenue • Albany, New York 12222

Contact: Vince Sweeney (518) 442-3075

Note to Editors: The Awards Banquet will begin at 7 p.m. and the awards ceremonies should begin at 7:30-45 p.m..

ROCKEFELLER COLLEGE TO HONOR ALUMNI, NOVEMBER 18

The Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and Policy of the University at Albany, State University of New York, will honor eight graduates at the annual Alumni Awards Banquet on Tuesday evening, November 18, 1986 at the Century House restaurant in Latham. Included among the honorees are Yale University's Librarian, the deputy superintendent of the New York State Police, a deputy commissioner at the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance, and a director at the New York State Department of Social Services.

Composed of the School of Criminal Justice, the School of Social Welfare, the Graduate School of Public Affairs and the School of Information Science and Policy, Rockefeller College constitutes one of the largest institutions of public policy teaching and research in the country.

Those to be honored are Millicent D. Abell, University Librarian at Yale University; Todd R. Clear, Associate Professor in the School of Criminal Justice at Rutgers University; Thomas A. Constantine, Deputy Superintendent-Field Commander of the New York State Police; Catharine K. Haynes, Rensselaer County Mental Health Social Worker; Bernard K. Johnpoll, retired professor of political science at the University at Albany; John P. McKenna, Deputy Commissioner for Administration, New York State Department of Taxation and Finance; Peter J. Paulson, retired Director of the New York State Library; and William J. Phillips, Director of the Bureau of Program Development and Demonstration for the New York State Department of Social Services.

Millicent D. Abell, master's degree in library science '65, served in increasingly important positions at a number of universities before joining Yale as University Librarian. Ms. Abell is chair of the Research Libraries Group Finance and Administration Committee and immediate past chair of the Center for Research Libraries.

Todd R. Clear, master's and doctorate degrees in criminal justice '72, '77, has published many articles and books in his field including the newly-published book American Corrections. He is the associate editor of the professional periodical Criminal Justice and Behavior.

Thomas A. Constantine, master's degree in criminal justice '71, is responsible for the direction and control of all operational police functions for the New York State Police in his capacity of Deputy Superintendent-Field Commander. Colonel Constantine helped to develop a number of innovative programs for his department including the 12 Most Wanted Program, a Mobile Response Team, and a Hazardous Material Unit.

Catharine K. Haynes, master's degree in social welfare '76, has helped to develop the concept and implementation of adult day care in Rensselaer County. She is a Mental Health Social Worker on the Geriatric Outreach Team of the Rensselaer County Mental Health Department Unified Services.

Bernard K. Johnpoll, doctorate in political science '66, has served as editor since 1976 of Contributions in Political Science, a series of scholarly monographs. Retired from the University at Albany in 1982 as a full professor of political science, Johnpoll has since written and produced two documentary television series on American society for syndication and public broadcast stations.

John McKenna, master's degree in public administration '71, is responsible for the direction of all of the executive administrative funds for the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance as Deputy Commissioner for Administration. He is President of the Voorheesville Central Schools Board of Education and President of the Kiwanis Club of New Scotland.

Peter J. Paulson, master's degree in library science '55, served at the New York State Library for 32 years in positions of increasing responsibility and retired as its Director. He is currently Executive Director of the Forest Press, a nonprofit organization seeking to improve, promote and extend the Dewey Decimal Classification system for libraries.

William J. Phillips, master's degree in social welfare '75, is responsible as Director of the Bureau of Program Development and Demonstration for projects in a range of program areas for the New York State Department of Social Services including child protective services, domestic violence, foster care, adoption, day care and teenage pregnancy prevention.

November 7, 1986

news

News Bureau • (518) 457-4901 • State University of New York at Albany • 1400 Washington Avenue • Albany, New York 12222

Contact: Brenda Oettinger (518) 442-3079

86-100

PROJECT PUFFIN BIRD RESTORATION PROGRAM

TOPIC OF NEXT LECTURE IN SERIES

Dr. Stephen Kress, author of The Audubon Society Handbook for Birders and the recently released, Audubon Society Guide to Attracting Birds, is the featured speaker for the November 18th Natural History Lecture sponsored by the Atmospheric Sciences Research Center of the University at Albany, State University of New York. A research biologist for the National Audubon Society, Kress will describe the accomplishments of Project Puffin, an effort to restore the Atlantic Puffin to its historic nesting sites on islands along the Maine coast.

Besides his role with Project Puffin, Kress is the Director of the Audubon Ecology Camp in Maine. He teaches courses in field ornithology for the Cornell University Laboratory of Ornithology, and in the past he has led wildlife tours to Africa, Australia, Central America and the Galapagos Islands. He has a B.S. degree in zoology, an M.S. degree in wildlife management, and a Ph.D. in environmental education.

Kress' presentation will be in Lecture Center 7 on the uptown campus of the University at Albany, 1400 Washington Avenue. The program will begin precisely at 8:00 p.m. following an illustrated weather briefing. It will be free and the public is encouraged to attend.

Donations to the Natural History Lecture Series, made possible in part by gifts to the Ray Falconer Fund, are appreciated.

November 10, 1986

Contact: Brenda Oettinger (518)442-3079

86-102

ADIRONDACK PHOTO ESSAY CULMINATES

FALL LECTURE SERIES

Jeri Wright, a professional photographer from Wilmington, N.Y., has compiled a collection of Adirondack slides that she has put to music and will exhibit on November 25 at a free Natural History Lecture sponsored by the Atmospheric Sciences Research Center of the University at Albany, State University of New York.

Wright's photo-essay, featuring observations of the magnificent and minute splendor of the mountains of the Adirondacks, will be in Lecture Center 7 of the University's uptown campus at 1400 Washington Avenue. It will begin Tuesday evening at 8:00 pm following a brief discussion of the day's weather.

The slideshow will be the last of the 1986 fall Natural History Lecture Series. Organized this year, as it has for the past 25 years, by renowned area meteorologist Ray Falconer, donations to the lecture series should be sent directly to the University at Albany, attention Ray Falconer Fund. Gifts are greatly appreciated and are tax deductible.

November 17, 1986

news

Release Book
Local A, B, B-2, C
E, E-1, copies to Pat, O'Leary, Gullaborn

News Bureau • (518) 457-4901 • State University of New York at Albany • 1400 Washington Avenue • Albany, New York 12222

Contact: Pat Hunt (442-3074) or Mary Fiess (442-3091)

NEWS CONFERENCE ON WEDNESDAY, DEC. 3
TO ANNOUNCE LOCATION OF MAJOR RESEARCH PROJECT
AT UNIVERSITY AT ALBANY

A $1.5 million research project critical to the development of national policies on acid rain will soon be based at the Atmospheric Sciences Research Center of the University at Albany, State University of New York.

A number of scientists now working in the far west with the project will move to Albany and join the ASRC's nationally recognized roster of researchers.

A news conference to formally announce the move will be held Wednesday, Dec. 3 at 2:30 p.m. in room 253 on the second floor of the Administration Building on the University's main campus at 1400 Washington Ave. University President Vincent O'Leary will provide details on the project and its move.

Nov. 25, 1986