ALBANY ANNOUNCES FOOTBALL CLUB PLANS

Athletic director Dr. Alfred C. Werner announced today that, pending approval of its proposed 1970-71 budget, State University at Albany will field a club football team this fall. The budget would include provision to hire an additional physical education department member. Dr. Werner currently is seeking a man who could coach football and lacrosse, in addition to his teaching assignments in the department.

A six-game 1970 schedule has been prepared in anticipation of the university's first intercollegiate football program. Three home and three away games have been lined up for the fledgling gridgers including home contests with neighboring Siena College and Hudson Valley Community College. Home games will be played on the field encircled by the running track behind the physical education building. Permanent bleachers on the steps of the building will accommodate an estimated 2,200 persons and temporary bleachers may provide additional seating.

Road contests are scheduled with Towson State College of Baltimore, Md., Marist College, and State University College at Plattsburgh. The season will open with a home game against Rochester Institute of Technology on Homecoming Saturday, October 10. Only Hudson Valley, a two-year school, and Towson State, which played a club schedule last fall, will field varsity teams. The other foes, however, all have experience as club teams.

(more)

The addition of football would bring to 11 the number of men's intercollegiate sports at Albany. Varsity programs currently are administered in cross-country, soccer, basketball, wrestling, swimming, track and field, lacrosse, baseball, tennis, and golf. Junior varsity squads in cross-country, soccer, baseball, track and field, golf, and tennis; and a freshman team in basketball also compete. A sailing club, open to all men and women at the university, has fall and spring intercollegiate competition.

The schedule:

Saturday, October 10 - Rochester Tech	Home	2:00
Saturday, October 17 - Siena College	Home	2:00
Saturday, October 24 - Towson State	Away	2:00
Saturday, October 31 - Marist College	Away	2:00
Saturday, November 7 - Plattsburgh State	Away	1:00
Saturday, November 14 - Hudson Valley C.C.	Home	1:00

A "pre-teach-in" in preparation for the national environmental teach-in on April 22 will be held at State University of New York at Albany this Friday and Saturday. Initiated by Representative Richard Ottinger (D., Westchester) and organized by SUNYA members of the Protect Your Environment (PYE) Club, the weekend is designed to develop effective programs for the national teach-in this spring. Miss Susan Cypert, PYE coordinator of the conference, expects up to 400 delegates in attendance from over 200 campuses and environmental action groups in New York State.

Friday evening at 7:30 Congressman Ottinger will address the conference in the university gymnasium. Mr. Ottinger's speech will emphasize the goals of the teach-in and programs that environmental activists must initiate in order to gain public support for environmental reform.

Dr. Robert Rienow, co-author of Moment in the Sun, and professor of political science at SUNYA, will speak at 9 Saturday morning. The remainder of Saturday morning will be spent in workshops focusing on particular environmental problems. Professionals from the community and universities in the tri-city area will provide information to the workshops, which will be directed by members of PYE from SUNYA. A report concerning the goals and methods for April 22 will be published from the discussions in the workshops.

"Biological Productivity: A Current Perspective" is the subject of a "Conversation in the Disciplines" to be held at State University of New York at Albany, March 12-13. A number of noted ecologists will be among the participants in the two-day conference which is open to all State University faculty and students. It is sponsored by the biology department.

Funded by a $2,000 grant from the SUNY Research Foundation, the program is one of a series in which experts in a particular discipline gather to share their experience and participate in discussions about trends and developments in that discipline. The relationship of the productivity of various biological organisms to the stability of the earth's environment will be a major concern of this week's conversation.

The conference will begin at 1:55 p.m. March 12 with a session on "Fundamentals of Productivity." The second session at 8:30 a.m. March 13 will be on "Methodology and the Development of New Concepts," and the third session at 2 p.m. March 13 will consider "Current Directions." All sessions will be held in the CC Assembly Hall.

A dinner to be held at 7 p.m. March 12 in the Campus Center Ballroom will feature John H. Ryther of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. He will discuss the prospects of increasing the production of food from the sea. Current estimates are that, at the present rate of growth of the world's fisheries, the total food potential of the sea will be reached within the next decade.

Other participants in the program include Richard W. Eppley, Scripps Institution of Oceanography; G. Wolfgang Fuhs, N. Y. S. Health Department; John Hobbie, North Carolina State University; Gene Likens, Cornell University; Donald C. McNaught, SUNY; Howard T. Odum, University of North Carolina; Richard E. Pentoney, Syracuse University; Michael Rosenzweig, SUNYA; Lawrence Slobodkin, SUNY at Stony Brook; Fred E. Smith, Harvard University; Raymond G. Stross, SUNYA; and R. H. Sixty-two German Expressionistic works in various media, all from the collection of The Museum of Modern Art, will be on view at the Art Gallery, State University of New York at Albany from March 11 through April 5.

Recent prints by Robert Cartmell will be shown in the Gallery Lounge during the same period as the Passionate Years exhibition. Mr. Cartmell, who is an instructor in printmaking at SUNYA, received his M.F.A. in printmaking at the University of Iowa before coming to Albany.

Prepared by Renee S. Neu, Assistant Curator in the Museum's Department of Painting and Sculpture, The Passionate Years: Expressionism in Germany 1905-1930 surveys a movement spearheaded by younger artists who opposed the emphasis on materialism which took hold in Europe during the two decades prior to World War I. Rejecting the Impressionist eagerness to paint the world as it appears to the eye, the Expressionists sought instead to depict the world as it is experienced through emotions. Hence, the appropriateness of the term "passionate years."

The exhibition contains works by members of the two important Expressionistic groups which emerged during the period of intellectual turmoil and great artistic creativity prior to World War I: Die Brücke (The Bridge) in Dresden and Berlin and Der Blaue Reiter (The Blue Rider) in Munich. Also represented are a number of individual artists who were not affiliated with either of these groups but whose work is closely related. Among those represented are Ernst Barlach, Kathe Kollwitz, Wilhelm Lehmbruck and Oskar Kokoschka.

The Passionate Years: Expressionism in Germany 1905-1930 contains 17 oils, 5 watercolors and 5 sculptures. Some 35 prints and drawings are also included since both groups dedicated much of their effort to graphic art with Die Brücke issuing an annual portfolio of etchings and lithographs from 1906-1912.

Stephen O. Wilson, instructor of geography, State University of New York at Albany, has been awarded a $14,230 Science Faculty Fellowship for the next full year by the National Science Foundation (NSF). He will be working at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., and in the Lake George basin on the development of measurement techniques for estimating man's role in lake eutrophication processes.

Eutrophication concerns the process of aging, specifically, of a body of water. Mr. Wilson will be conducting a social science survey and estimating the total amount of man-made products, such as insecticides, detergents, and fertilizers, being brought to, and consumed in, the Lake George basin.

Two years ago the geographer received a Research Participation Grant from NSF for the study of aspects of the ecology of Lake George. The basin has been designated as a focal point for ecological research by the International Biological Program.

Mr. Wilson joined the SUNYA staff in 1966. He previously worked with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution on transport of Atlantic waters into the Norwegian Sea and spent three seasons in the Antarctic working on oceanographic and glaciological studies of the International Geophysical Year.

The New York State Departments of Health and Education will co-sponsor a Capital Area Conference on the Prevention of Heart Disease, Tuesday, March 10, in the Campus Center Assembly Hall, State University of New York at Albany. Representatives from some 60-70 school districts in the counties of Albany, Schenectady, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schoharie, Warren, and Whitehall have been invited to attend.

The aim of the conference will be to urge the school districts to establish anti-coronary programs for adults in the 40-60 age group in their communities. Main speakers will be Dr. Wilhelm Raab, professor emeritus at the University of Vermont, College of Medicine, and Dr. George Christakis, associate dean, Mount Sinai School of Medicine. Dr. Raab, a cardiologist, will speak on "Heart Disease: Number One Killer." He is a native of Austria and has been described as "a gadfly to the sedentary American male," urging him to stop smoking, exercise more, and trim his waistline. He has published four books and more than 200 articles in the cardiovascular field.

Dr. Christakis' address will concern "Nutrition Education in Heart Disease." He formerly served as director of the Bureau of Nutrition, New York City Health Department, and was research director of an anti-coronary club study project involving some 900 men, 40-59 years old.

Robert Carty and Clifton Taft will discuss successful anti-coronary programs in their respective communities of Glens Falls and Whitehall, while Ewald Nyquist, State Commissioner of Education, and Hollis Ingraham, Commissioner of Health, will greet the conferees. Other highlights of the program include individual group sessions; display of charts showing heart attacks among various age groups in the seven counties by Dr. Nicholas Alexiou, associate director, Division of Preventive Services, Health Department; and a controlled fat diet luncheon.

The conference will begin at 8:30 with State Health Department technicians on hand to give examinations such as blood tests, cardiograms, and other tests for possible heart disease.

Jack J. Bulloff, professor in the department of history and systematics of science, State University of New York at Albany, has been nominated for first vice-president of the Technical Association of the Graphic Arts (TAGA). TAGA is the basic research organization of the $30 billion-a-year graphic arts industry which includes the printing and publishing industry as one of its parts.

Dr. Bulloff has presented many papers at annual meetings of TAGA and publishes regularly in the annual TAGA Proceedings. His paper "Tutorial Bibliographies-V-Photophysics for the Graphic Arts" was published in the 1969 TAGA Proceedings. The next paper in the well-known series of tutorial bibliographies for advanced research workers in graphic arts laboratories will be "Tutorial Bibliographies-VI -Forecasting and R&D Planning." It will be read at the 1970 TAGA Conference, May 4-6, Sheraton-Boston Hotel, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Bulloff is the author of "Printing and the Graphic Arts," which will appear as Chapter 20 of Dr. Kenneth J. Lissant's "Emulsions and Emulsion Technology," Marcel Dekker Publ., New York, 1970.

His next paper in the graphic arts will be presented to the Society of Photographic Scientists and Engineers at the Seminar on Applications of Photopolymers at Cherry Hill, N.Y., next month. The paper will cover "Photopolymers and Printing: Towards 2000 A.D.", and will be given as an introduction to the session on printing which Dr. Bulloff also will lead.

Summer workshops in business education, English, and economics have been approved by the New York State Education Department for the State University of New York at Albany. Dr. Ralph Tibbetts, professor of education and chairman of teacher education programs, is liaison officer for the three workshops.

The thirty to forty teachers enrolled in the business education course, "Workshop in Modern Bookkeeping and Accounting Systems," will receive either a maintenance allowance for residents of $120, or a commutation allowance for non-residents of $20; plus tuition and fees. The workshop is tentatively set for August 17-28, with a maximum instructional cost of $3936.72. Charles F. Petitjean, professor of administrative services, will serve as director and instructor. The program will be funded under the Vocational Education Act of 1963, amended in 1968.

"The Development of Creative Teaching Techniques Correlating Cinema, Drama and Literature for the Secondary English Teacher" is the course to be given to thirty to forty participants between July 6 and August 7. The maximum instructional cost for the program is $10,000, plus tuition and fees for teachers, a $300 per teacher maintenance allowance for residents, and a $50 allowance for commuters. William C. Kraus, associate professor of education (English), will direct the program.

The economics workshop is open to up to thirty teachers and will take place June 29 to August 14. The course, "Institute on Contemporary Socio-Economic Problems," will be directed by Louis R. Salkever, chairman of the economics department. Cost per teacher will include $166.80 for tuition and fees, $420 for maintenance of residents, and $70 commutation allowance for non-residents. The maximum instructional cost for this program has not yet been set.

The department of educational psychology, State University of New York at Albany, will host a conversation in the discipline on the topic "Models and Methods in Research on Compensatory Education," April 9 and 10. The conference is supported by the New York State Education Department and the Committee on University Faculty Programs of SUNY. Sessions will be held in the SUNYA Campus Center Ballroom.

A number of educational scientists with special academic qualifications to present and contrast standard models of compensatory education will be brought together for the conversation. Discussions will be oriented toward a delineation of models and aspects of models which appear to hold special potential for future work.

Among the scheduled participants are Edmund Gordan, Teachers College, Columbia University; Irving Sigel, SUNY Buffalo; Carl Bereiter, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education; Clyde Noble, University of Georgia; James Kuethe, professor of educational psychology, SUNYA; Robert Pruzek, associate professor of educational psychology and statistics, SUNYA; and J. An interdisciplinary "Conversation in the Disciplines" entitled "Philosophy and the Disciplines" will be held March 26-28 at the Gideon Putnam Hotel, Saratoga Springs. It is sponsored by State University of New York with the participation of the Metaphilosophy Foundation, and all faculty and students of SUNY are welcome to attend.

William L. Reese, professor of philosophy, SUNYA, is hosting the conversation under a $2,000 grant from the SUNY Research Foundation, SUNY Chancellor Samuel B. Gould and SUNYA acting president Allan A. Kuusisto, will address the conference.

Approximately 200 delegates are being invited including three from each college and university center in the SUNYA system.

Because the theme of the conference is the relationship of philosophy to the other disciplines, delegates will include representatives of the social and natural sciences as well as of the humanities.

The first session will deal with a general discussion of how the disciplines emerged and separated from each other. Subsequent discussion sessions will examine the appropriate role that philosophy might play in relation to the natural sciences, the social sciences and the humanities.

Resource personnel, who will set the framework for discussion, include Henry D. Aiken, Brandeis University; Rom Harre, Oxford University; Richard P. McKeon, University of Chicago; Michael Scriven, University of California at Berkeley; Stephan Korner, University of Bristol; O. William Perlmutter, SUNYA; and Susan Sontag, essayist and critic.

The New York State Departments of Health and Education will co-sponsor a Capital Area Conference on the Prevention of Heart Disease, Tuesday, March 10, in the Campus Center Assembly Hall, State University of New York at Albany. Representatives from some 60-70 school districts in the counties of Albany, Schenectady, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schoharie, Warren, and Whitehall have been invited to attend.

The aim of the conference will be to urge the school districts to establish anti-coronary programs for adults in the 40-60 age group in their communities. Main speakers will be Dr. Wilhelm Raab, professor emeritus at the University of Vermont, College of Medicine, and Dr. George Christakis, associate dean, Mount Sinai School of Medicine. Dr. Raab, a cardiologist, will speak on "Heart Disease: Number One Killer." He is a native of Austria and has been described as "a gadfly to the sedentary American male," urging him to stop smoking, exercise more, and trim his waistline. He has published four books and more than 200 articles in the cardiovascular field.

Dr. Christakis' address will concern "Nutrition Education in Heart Disease." He formerly served as director of the Bureau of Nutrition, New York City Health Department, and was research director of an anti-coronary club study project involving some 900 men, 40-59 years old.

Robert Carty and Clifton Taft will discuss successful anti-coronary programs in their respective communities of Glens Falls and Whitehall, while Ewald Nyquist, State Commissioner of Education, and Hollis Ingraham, Commissioner of Health, will greet the conferees; Other highlights of the program include individual group sessions; display of charts showing heart attacks among various age groups in the seven counties by Dr. Nicholas Alexiou, associate director, Division of Preventive Services, Health Department; and a controlled fat diet luncheon.

The conference will begin at 8:30 with State Health Department technicians on hand to give examinations such as blood tests, cardiograms, and other tests for possible heart disease.

Stephen O. Wilson, instructor of geography, State University of New York at Albany, has been awarded a $14,230 Science Faculty Fellowship for the next full year by the National Science Foundation (NSF). He will be working at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., and in the Lake George basin on the development of measurement techniques for estimating man's role in lake eutrophication processes.

Eutrophication concerns the process of aging, specifically, of a body of water. Mr. Wilson will be conducting a social science survey and estimating the total amount of man-made products, such as insecticides, detergents, and fertilizers, being brought to, and consumed in, the Lake George basin.

Two years ago the geographer received a Research Participation Grant from NSF for the study of aspects of the ecology of Lake George. The basin has been designated as a focal point for ecological research by the International Biological Program.

Mr. Wilson joined the SUNYA staff in 1966. He previously worked with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution on transport of Atlantic waters into the Norwegian Sea and spent three seasons in the Antarctic working on oceanographic and glaciological studies of the International Geophysical Year.

Jack J. Bulloff, professor in the department of history and systematics of science, State University of New York at Albany, has been nominated for first vice-president of the Technical Association of the Graphic Arts (TAGA). TAGA is the basic research organization of the $30 billion-a-year graphic arts industry which includes the printing and publishing industry as one of its parts.

Dr. Bulloff has presented many papers at annual meetings of TAGA and publishes regularly in the annual TAGA Proceedings. His paper "Tutorial Bibliographies-V-Photophysics for the Graphic Arts" was published in the 1969 TAGA Proceedings. The next paper in the well-known series of tutorial bibliographies for advanced research workers in graphic arts laboratories will be "Tutorial Bibliographies-VI-Forecasting and R&D Planning." It will be read at the 1970 TAGA Conference, May 4-6, Sheraton-Boston Hotel, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Bulloff is the author of "Printing and the Graphic Arts," which will appear as Chapter 20 of Dr. Kenneth J. Lissant's "Emulsions and Emulsion Technology," Marcel Dekker Publ., New York, 1970.

His next paper in the graphic arts will be presented to the Society of Photographic Scientists and Engineers at the Seminar on Applications of Photopolymers at Cherry Hill, N.Y., next month. The paper will cover "Photopolymers and Printing: Towards 2000 A.D.", and will be given as an introduction to the session on printing which Dr. Bulloff also will lead.

An interdisciplinary "Conversation in the Disciplines" entitled "Philosophy and the Disciplines" will be held March 26-28 at the Gideon Putnam Hotel, Saratoga Springs. It is sponsored by State University of New York with the participation of the Metaphilosophy Foundation, and all faculty and students of SUNY are welcome to attend.

William L. Reese, professor of philosophy, SUNYA, is hosting the conversation under a $2,000 grant from the SUNY Research Foundation, SUNY Chancellor Samuel B. Gould and SUNYA acting president Allan A. Kuusisto, will address the conference.

Approximately 200 delegates are being invited including three from each college and university center in the SUNYA system.

Because the theme of the conference is the relationship of philosophy to the other disciplines, delegates will include representatives of the social and natural sciences as well as of the humanities.

The first session will deal with a general discussion of how the disciplines emerged and separated from each other. Subsequent discussion sessions will examine the appropriate role that philosophy might play in relation to the natural sciences, the social sciences and the humanities.

Resource personnel, who will set the framework for discussion, include Henry D. Aiken, Brandeis University; Rom Harre, Oxford University; Richard P. McKeon, University of Chicago; Michael Scriven, University of California at Berkeley; Stephan Korner, University of Bristol; O. William Perlmutter, SUNYA; and Susan Sontag, essayist and critic.

The department of educational psychology, State University of New York at Albany, will host a conversation in the discipline on the topic "Models and Methods in Research on Compensatory Education," April 9 and 10. The conference is supported by the New York State Education Department and the Committee on University Faculty Programs of SUNY. Sessions will be held in the SUNYA Campus Center Ballroom.

A number of educational scientists with special academic qualifications to present and contrast standard models of compensatory education will be brought together for the conversation. Discussions will be oriented toward a delineation of models and aspects of models which appear to hold special potential for future work.

Among the scheduled participants are Edmund Gordan, Teachers College, Columbia University; Irving Sigel, SUNY Buffalo; Carl Bereiter, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education; Clyde Noble, University of Georgia; James Kueth, professor of educational psychology, SUNYA; Robert Pruzek, associate professor of educational psychology and statistics, SUNYA; and J. M. Stephens, professor emeritus, John Hopkins University.

Persons interested in registering for the conference should contact Mrs. O. Durgerian, education building room 232, SUNYA, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany New York 12203 (518-457-8234).

Summer workshops in business education, English, and economics have been approved by the New York State Education Department for the State University of New York at Albany. Dr. Ralph Tibbetts, professor of education and chairman of teacher education programs, is liaison officer for the three workshops.

The thirty to forty teachers enrolled in the business education course, "Workshop in Modern Bookkeeping and Accounting Systems," will receive either a maintenance allowance for residents of $120, or a commutation allowance for non-residents of $20; plus tuition and fees. The workshop is tentatively set for August 17-28, with a maximum instructional cost of $3936.72. Charles F. Petitjean, professor of administrative services, will serve as director and instructor. The program will be funded under the Vocational Education Act of 1963, amended in 1968.

"The Development of Creative Teaching Techniques Correlating Cinema, Drama and Literature for the Secondary English Teacher" is the course to be given to thirty to forty participants between July 6 and August 7. The maximum instructional cost for the program is $10,000, plus tuition and fees for teachers, a $300 per teacher maintenance allowance for residents, and a $50 allowance for commuters. William C. Kraus, associate professor of education (English), will direct the program.

The economics workshop is open to up to thirty teachers and will take place June 29 to August 14. The course, "Institute on Contemporary Socio-Economic Problems," will be directed by Louis R. Salkever, chairman of the economics department. Cost per teacher will include $166.80 for tuition and fees, $420 for maintenance of residents, and $70 commutation allowance for non-residents. The maximum instructional cost for this program has not yet been set.

The Hudson-Mohawk Training Directors Society and the New York State Industrial Training Council, in cooperation with the College of General Studies, State University of New York at Albany, will sponsor "The Education and Training of Minority Group Members," March 31 at the SUNYA Campus Center. The annual conference will place special emphasis on what must be done in the future, in addition to examining past and present efforts.

Keynote speakers will be Paul Miwa, SUNYA assistant vice-president for academic affairs; Lawrence Burwell, director of the Albany chapter of the Urban League; and Robert McClelland, director of training for Eastman Kodak Co. They will speak following a 9 a. m. registration and a welcoming address by conference chairman Ersa Poston, president, Civil Service Commission, NYS Department of Civil Service.

Thereafter, the conference will divide into three concurrent panel sessions concerning education and training of minority groups in the academic community, in the public sector, and in the private sector. Dr. Miwa will chair the academic panel, whose members will be John Reavis, coordinator of special programs, SUNY; Michael VanRyn, chief, Bureau of In-Service Education, Department of Education; and Garrison G. Gebler, director, vocational education, Albany School System.

Chairman of the panel on public sector will be Herbert Engel, director, Public Employee Training, NYS Department of Civil Service. Panel members will be Mr. Burwell, John Sterrett, career opportunities coordinator, NYS Department of Civil Service; and Thomas Cowell, director, project WELD, Division of Employment, Department of Labor. Thomas Paolucci, director of Labor Department Training, NYS Department of Labor, is chairman of the private sector panel. Members include Mr. McClelland, Donald Grabowski, director, Office of Manpower, Division of Employment, Department of Labor; and Grace Ellis, training administrator, Loral Electronic Systems.

The luncheon speaker will be M. P. Catherwood, industrial commissioner, NYS Department of Labor.
