APPLICATION FOR CLEMENCY AND MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT THEREOF

Robert Vannoy Black, Jr., respectfully submits this application for clemency, requesting that the Governor grant a 30-day reprieve of Mr. Black's May 22, 1992, execution date, so that the Board of Pardons and Paroles may convene and conduct a hearing to recommend that the Governor grant a commutation of Mr. Black's sentence of death to life imprisonment.

Although this application comes to the Governor and the Board of Pardons and Paroles just days before Mr. Black's scheduled execution, Mr. Black can in no way be faulted for this fact. On October 22, 1991, Mr. Black filed his first state petition for writ of habeas corpus with the Brazos County District Court, where it was pending until just six weeks ago. On April 7, 1992, the state trial court denied Mr. Black's petition and set the present execution date, without affording counsel for Mr. Black notice of either action. Mr. Black's petition was then reviewed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which denied relief on May 12, 1992, exactly one week ago today. Seventy-two hours later, Mr. Black filed his first federal petition for writ of habeas corpus with the United States District Court of Texas, Southern District, which is still pending in that court as of this writing. Although Mr. Black has requested that the federal courts grant him a stay of execution so that they may consider the merits of his claims in due course and not against the artificial "deadline" of an execution date, Mr. Black is in no position now to assume that he will have additional time to make this application for clemency to the Governor and to the Board.

In short, Mr. Black has been engaged in the vigorous pursuit of his legal remedies within the judicial system right up to, and including, the moment of the submission of this application for clemency. Mr. Black never envisioned having to appeal for clemency in such short time, and it is only because of the courts' unseemly haste in deciding the merits of his legal claims that this application for clemency comes at this late hour.

Introduction

Robert Black is a living casualty of this country's tragic effort in Vietnam. In 1967, at the tender age of 20, Mr. Black stepped forward and volunteered to serve his country in war. At that age, Bob -- Eagle Scout, American Legion Boy's State representative, and favorite son of Haskell, Texas -- seemed to have a full life of promise and success ahead of him. By 1972, that life was already over.

It is indisputable that for at least ten years preceding the commission of the offense in this case, Mr. Black suffered from a debilitating mental disorder which he sustained as a direct consequence of traumatic events he experienced while he was in combat in Vietnam. This mental illness, known as Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, transformed Mr. Black from the once ambitious and successful Eagle Scout, popular high school student, skilled aircraft crewmember, and decorated Marine veteran into a troubled and helpless adult who experienced difficulty coping as a civilian with the simplest tasks of everyday life.

Mr. Black's illness permeated every facet of his life. Symptoms of the disorder, including increasing depression, irritability, and angry and sometimes violent outbursts, inevitably impaired his ability to readjust to civilian life. His relationship with his wife, Sandra Kay, floundered; they were divorced and later remarried, and many times separated over this period. Mr. Black had difficulty maintaining employment, holding a succession of jobs punctuated by periods of unemployment. He despaired of the disappointments and unfulfilled dreams of his life. During one desperately low point in late 1984, Mr. Black unsuccessfully attempted to take his own life.

On two separate occasions, in 1976 and 1983, Mr. Black's mental health brought him to the brink of insanity, and he was hospitalized for psychiatric treatment for his disorders. Significantly, the evidence indicates that following these periods of treatment Mr. Black was able to restore some semblance of balance and stability to his life. During these periods his relationship with his wife and family demonstrated improvement and he was able to maintain steady employment. With medication and outpatient counseling, he was able to stabilize his mood swings and control his otherwise impulsive behavior. Without them, however, Mr. Black's disorder would again reassert itself, and his mental condition would resume its downward spiral of deterioration.

There can hardly be question that evidence of Mr. Black's mental disorder is relevant to a fair determination of the appropriateness of his death sentence. Post Traumatic Stress Disorder transformed Bob Black from a young man who embraced all that life had to offer with energy, determination, and vigor into a profoundly unhappy man whose life descended to such a miserably low point that he, irrationally, asked another man to take his wife's life. Although this conduct certainly can never be excused, it cries out to be understood.

The jury that sentenced Mr. Black to death knew little of his highly decorated service to the country and nothing of the mental illness he suffered as a direct consequence of his traumatic experiences during the war. Although Mr. Black and his family struggled mightily to bring Mr. Black's record of service in Vietnam and his subsequent psychological problems to his attorneys' attention, the attorneys failed to make any affirmative efforts to investigate the significance of the disorder and to consider the possible use of this compelling evidence in mitigation of Mr. Black's offense. They failed to consult with mental health experts, to obtain readily available records concerning Mr. Black's psychiatric history, or to otherwise investigate these issues. Instead, they relied on their own lay perceptions of Mr. Black and their inexpert understanding of his disorder to justify their failure to investigate these issues and their relevance to this case.

In our system, a jury's verdict is rightly accorded respect when it reflects a full consideration of evidence concerning the crime and the defendant's character, background, and culpability. In this case, however, it cannot be said that Mr. Black's jury heard the most important evidence about the man whose life was in their hands. His attorneys did not develop or present the significant evidence that demonstrated that Mr. Black did not deserve the death penalty. Because the jury in this case was deprived of this critical information, their sentence of death cannot be said to reflect a fully reasoned moral response to Mr. Black's offense.

As a review of the compelling facts of Mr. Black's life history makes clear, Mr. Black is deserving of a grant of clemency and a commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment. He is deserving of a life sentence because he volunteered to serve his his country in combat and because it was only through this selfless and life-endangering service that he came to experience the traumatic events that would lead to the menacing mental disorders that would unravel his life in the years after Vietnam. And without these terrible demons, there can be little doubt that Mr. Black would never have found himself at such a low stage in his life that he would ask another man to take his wife's life. The appropriateness of Mr. Black's sentence of death has never before been measured in light of this compelling evidence. It is imperative that it be so measured now.

1. Robert Black's exemplary life history preceding and including his voluntary service in Vietnam.

Robert V. Black, Jr., grew up in Haskell, Texas, one of the most popular and promising sons of that small town. Active in the Boy Scouts at a young age, Bob eventually rose to the level of Eagle Scout and volunteered to serve as a "den chief" to the younger boys in a Cub Scout troop. E.H. Vol. I at 62.¹ In high school, Bob played football, ran track, and played the cornet in the school band. He did well in school, earning good grades and the high regard of his teachers and peers. Id. at 41. In 1964, he was chosen by his teachers to represent the school at Boys State. Id.

Upon completing high school, Bob left small town Haskell for Texas A&M University in Bryan, where he planned to study to become a chemical engineer. Id. at 42. After two years of college, however, at the height of the Vietnam War, Bob surprised his family by volunteering for service in the Marines in 1967.

Bob's decision to volunteer for military service followed in the steps of a long line of men in the Black family. Bob's father and three uncles all served in combat in World War II. Bob's father, Robert V. Black, Sr., volunteered for service and was held as a prisoner of war for 13 months in a German concentration camp. Although Mr. Black's experiences as a POW scarred him for life -- he has been diagnosed as "30 percent" Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and has been in counselling for nearly two decades -- he endeavored to instill in his two sons as they were growing up the same sense of patriotism and duty to country that led him to volunteer for service.²

Like his father before him, Bob volunteered to serve the country out of a sense of patriotism and duty. Although Bob desired most to fly with the Air Force, he has written that he joined the Marines instead after the Air Force recruiter was "outmatched" by a "patriotic and rousing appeal from the Marine Corps recruiter." And while Bob's decision to forego draft exemption and to volunteer for service at the height of the war was met coolly by family and friends, Bob embraced his new duties with energy and determination.

Indeed, Bob wished to pursue a lifetime of service in the military. In boot camp, he quickly distinguished himself, and was chosen squad leader and later awarded the "Dress Blues Honor" as the "outstanding member" of the platoon. He then was selected to attend Officer's Candidate School (OCS) in Quantico, Virginia, where he applied with renewed interest for training as a fighter pilot. Rejected, however, because of slightly imperfect vision in one eye, Bob accepted training as a Radar Intercept Officer (RIO) in a fighter plane as "the next best thing."

In December 1967, during a leave from boot camp, Bob married Sandra Kay Eimann, whom he had met at an ROTC dance in Bryan, Texas. Over the next three years, the couple moved frequently, living together in California, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, and Hawaii, as Bob received his various combat training assignments. Their only child, Gary Wayne Black, was born on October 7, 1969.

Upon completion of OCS, Bob was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant and then assigned to Marine Fighter/Attack Squadron 242, Marine Air Group 15, 1st Marine Airwing, based at the Iwakuni Marine Corps Air Station in Iwakuni, Hawaii. There he was teamed with pilot John Blackman, and together they trained to fly an F-4J Phantom II fighter plane in combat.

As "gung ho" as Bob was about being in the military, he was a far from typical serviceman. As his friend John Blackman explained:

Bob was highly regarded in our squadron, both for his qualities as a person and for his abilities as a radio intercept operator. Bob and I had a great deal of success as a flight crew and I credit much of that to Bob's abilities as an RIO.

But what I remember Bob most for was his compassion for people. He rarely had unkind things to say about anyone, even though we lived in a very close, tense environment. For example, when one particular pilot in our squadron refused to fly combat missions, Bob did not chastise or criticize him as most did, but said he understood his reasons.

In fact, Bob seemed to go out of his way to do things for others. This attitude was not limited to Americans, either, because Bob treated the nationals of each country we were in very graciously. Because many American military personnel were typical of the so-called "Ugly American," I found it refreshing to be associated with him.

See Exhibit 5 (affidavit of John Blackman).

In late 1971 and early 1972, the squadron was deployed in Subic Bay, Philippines, for additional combat training. In April 1972, the squadron received its first combat orders for Vietnam. Bob spent 11 months, 5 days in foreign and overseas service, which included a period of time from June 1972 to October 1972 where he served in Vietnam based out of Da Nang and Nam Phong, Thailand. Exhibit 4. During this period, he and John Blackman flew almost 100 combat missions together. Exhibit 5 (flight log of John Blackman and Robert Black, Jr.).

Mr. Blackman recalls that, ten years after their return to the United States, when Mr. Black and his son Gary Wayne visited

Mr. Blackman at his home in Iowa in 1983, Mr. Blackman was "amazed at Bob's vivid recollection of some of our missions. It was clear that many of our experiences had effected him deeply." Exhibit 5. Among the incidents that remained with Mr. Black most strongly was one bombing mission, which Mr. Black recalled "in exact detail," in which the squadron was to bomb "targets of opportunity." Exhibit 5. As Blackman explained, this meant they could bomb "anything that looked at all like a military target." Id. On this occasion, they dropped their bombs on several small boats in a river, not knowing whether the boats were used by the enemy to transport munitions or were simply fishing boats used by Vietnamese civilians. Years later, as they recalled this mission, "it was clear that it deeply bothered Bob that we were rather indiscriminately dropping thousands of pounds of bombs on what were indefinite targets." Id.

According to Blackman, Black blamed himself for another incident in which two planes in the squadron ran out of fuel and "flamed out" short of the runway. Id. Although there were no fatalities, Blackman recalled that Black "in particular, faulted himself for the accident, and the near loss of life, on the grounds that it had been primarily his responsibility to locate the airstrip for a safe landing." Id. Again, Blackman was impressed by the "very strong impact" that the event left on Mr. Black, still evident more than a decade later. Id.

Finally, "perhaps the most devastating" event that Blackman and Black experienced together was the loss of their "hootch mate," Sam Cordova, who was shot down by enemy MIGs in August 1972. Id. On this occasion, Black and Blackman were among a division of fighters flying into an area to relieve another division of fighters on a bombing mission in North Vietnam. As they were doing so, they heard the radio transmission that Cordova's plane had been struck by an air-to-air missile. Id. A subsequent ground search for Cordova failed and he was declared "Missing In Action."

Shortly after his friend became "MIA," Mr. Black contacted Cordova's parents to extend his condolences and to offer to assist them in maintaining their son's affairs. See Exhibit 6 (correspondence between Bob Black and family of Leo Cordova). Many letters of support from Bob followed, as he tried to lift the spirits of the missing serviceman's parents. Id. At the same time, Bob ensured that no one in his unit would forget Lieutenant Cordova, painstakingly collecting $315 from his fellow soldiers to purchase 123 "POW/MIA bracelets" bearing Cordova's name for every man to wear. Id. The Cordova family was grateful for this extraordinary expression of thoughtfulness and compassion, and invited Bob to visit them upon his return to the United States. Id. Years later, Bob was able to accept this invitation and meet the Cordova family in an emotional visit to their California home.

For his distinguished combat service, Mr. Black received numerous decorations and medals, including the National Defense Service Medal, the Meritorious Mast, the Vietnamese Service Medal with one star, the Vietnam Campaign Medal with a device, the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with the bronze star, and the Air Medal with nine awards, each award representing 25 hours of combat activity. See Exhibit 3.

Yet despite this valiant record of service, as the American forces began their withdrawal from Vietnam, Mr. Black was released from the military due to a "reduction in forces." He was honorably discharged as a Captain on January 15th, 1973 -- his dream of a lifetime of service in the Marines come to an end. Emotionally devastated by this unceremonious severance from the military, Mr. Black returned to Texas to rejoin his family.

2. Robert Black's difficulties adjusting after Vietnam and his record of Vietnam-related psychological problems.

Like many Vietnam veterans who returned home after that war, Mr. Black struggled to reintegrate into civilian society. The country, still in the throes of protests against the war, did not warmly welcome its veterans home. The fact that America's Vietnam veterans were met by their fellow citizens with unprecedented ambivalence -- and in some quarters, outward hostility -- certainly did not ease their readjustment to civilian life.

Upon his return, Bob registered his own quiet protest against the unappreciative treatment he had received for his years of toil and life-endangering service in the military. Gathering his service uniforms together, Bob took them to the college he had left to join the Marines and laid them on the steps of a dormitory at Texas A&M University. E.H. Vol. I at 52. This simple symbolic gesture marked Bob's decisive split with the the profession that he had wanted to serve for a lifetime. Now Bob had to gather up the shards of his shattered life and begin anew.

Bob encountered difficulty almost from the start. Without practical job skills for the civilian work force, he went for long periods without employment. When he was employed, Bob experienced difficulty sustaining his interest and enthusiasm for his work -- a problem which he had never encountered before. The difficulties Bob had maintaining employment spilled over into his marriage, as Sandra Kay had to shoulder the financial burdens of the family. His behavior and moods became erratic; he was often irritable and he fell into long periods of profound depression. Bob's self-image deteriorated, and he began to drink more often and more heavily. Undoubtedly, somehow, Bob Black had changed: this was not the same aspiring, industrious, and successful young man who had left Haskell looking forward to the promise of the life before him.

In April 1976, recognizing that these symptoms had driven him to the breaking point, Bob checked himself into the Veterans Administration Hospital in Houston, Texas. See Exhibit 9. He advised hospital administrators that he had come to the hospital "because he felt that he needed help." Id. He reported suffering a "nervous breakdown" in November 1975, but stated that he had not received treatment at that time. Id. Now, according to hospital notes, Bob was "asking for help with anger, control and depression." Id.

Bob's self-admission to the V.A. Hospital was his first desperate cry for help. At the time, he reported marital, financial, and employment problems. According to hospital records, he had come to Houston because Sandra Kay, from whom he was estranged at the time, was there and Bob had "tried to talk her into some reconciliation." Id. Bob recognized his problems in the marriage, candidly acknowledging that he sometimes felt "sudden," uncontrollable, and inexplicable outbursts that were often directed toward his wife. Id. These outbursts seemed as bewildering to Bob as they were to his family and friends. Unemployed at the time of his admission, he told doctors he had had a "series of unemployment" periods since his release from the military, poignantly explaining that "his only training is of a bombardier and there is no demand for them" in peacetime. Id.

Bob was admitted for observation and treatment, and remained there for four-and-a-half months. Id. He was diagnosed as suffering from an "explosive behavior" disorder³, and was placed on psychotropic medications. Id. Eventually, medication was ³As Dr. John Wilson explained at the evidentiary hearing in this case, the first time information about "PTSD" became available was December 1979, and the diagnosis was first listed by the American Psychiatric Association in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual (3rd edition) in February 1980. E.H. Vol. I at 219. Therefore, prior to 1980, psychologists and psychiatrists were not making diagnoses of disorders as "PTSD." Id. As Dr. Wilson explained, a diagnosis of "personality disorder, explosive behavior," as here, was the kind of diagnosis commonly made for a disorder that now would be diagnosed as PTSD. Id.

discontinued as Mr. Black appeared to make progress. After nearly four-and-a-half months of inpatient hospitalization, "[i]t was felt that he had reached maximum benefits" so he discharged from the hospital. Id.

Although Mr. Black's four-month hospitalization led to temporary improvements in his behavior, it was destined to fail in the long-term. At the time of this institutionalization in 1976, the psychiatric community at large had little understanding of the behavior that is now recognized as symptomatic of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Indeed, it was not until 1980 that the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders -- the manual used by psychiatrists to diagnose mental illnesses -- included "PTSD" among its disorders. Given how little was generally known about the true nature of Mr. Black's disorder at the time of this hospitalization, it is perhaps not surprising that Mr. Black's doctors released him back to the community without a referral for outpatient treatment and without ensuring that he continued to receive medications.

Predictably, given this initial failure to implement an ongoing treatment plan for his disorder, Mr. Black experienced a recurrence of these problems. In June 1983, he was referred to Greenleaf Psychiatric Hospital, where he was admitted for "full psychological and medical evaluation." The intake document, prepared by Dr. Barney Davis, makes clear that Bob's problems are a repeat of his earlier difficulties:

"This 36 yr. old white male was in the office with complaints of depression, explosive personality behavior, and a past history of a diagnosis of Paranoid Schizophrenia issued at the V.A. Hospital several years ago under similar circumstances. History was obtained in the office that the p[atien]t had been having difficulty in his marriage, becoming irritable and outburstive at home, as well as having generalized job dissatisfaction.... [Mr. Black] indicates that he started having depressive symptoms while he was a Naval [sic] Flight Officer in Viet Nam."

See Exhibit 10.

During the course of Mr. Black's subsequent one-week hospitalization at Greenleaf, a "psychosocial history" was prepared based largely on an interview with Mr. Black's wife, Sandra Kay. As that document states:

"Sandy said Bob has begun talking about Vietnam flashbacks since the middle of May, after visiting a pilot whom he had been with in Vietnam. Mrs. Black believes that her husband's emotional problems began shortly after his discharge from the Marine Corp [sic] in 1973 and after serving in Vietnam as a flyer. Bob was unemployed for five years after the Marine Corp [sic] and Sandy describes him as being jealous, and unable to handle stress....

Bob's work history has been very erratic and one of Sandy's complaints is his lack of motivation towards work. During the last five years he has held four jobs and the most recent one has been at the post office for one year.... Bob joined the Marine Corp [sic] in 1967, excelled as a flyer and was a Captain in Vietnam from 1970 -1971. After the war, the Marine Corp [sic] no longer needed Bob and Sandy said the transition to civilian life was a difficult adjustment for him. Mrs. Black reports that Bob never talked about his experiences in the war until after they saw the movie "The Deer Hunter." He then told her a story about seeing one of his best buddies being killed, describing some of the horror of war and then asking her never to bring it up again."

Id. Dr. Davis diagnosed Mr. Black as suffering from "Major Affective Disorder, Atypical Depression, and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder." Id.

Following a week of treatment and counselling, there was sufficient progress in Mr. Black's condition that Dr. Davis released him, to be followed up on an out-patient basis. During this period, Bob continued to receive medication which, according to Dr. Davis, assisted Bob in becoming "more settled and less depressed and less agitated." E.H. Vol. I at 104.

Dr. Davis' outpatient notes from his counselling sessions with Bob, and sometimes Sandra Kay too, support Dr. Davis' opinion that, with medication and treatment, there was "overall improvement" (E.H. Vol. I at 112) in Bob's mood and behavior. See Exhibit 11. On July 14, 1983, Dr. Davis reported that "[o]verall [Bob] feel significantly improved," and that Sandra Kay reported a "decrease in his explosive behavior." Id. On August 8, 1983, both Bob and Sandra came in for counselling and Davis again reported that "[g]enerally I think things are going well and his current medication dosage is appropriate." Id. Similarly, on August 30, 1983, both Bob and Sandra met with Dr. Davis and told him that "[g]enerally things are going well from a depression standpoint. There's been no major disruption since he was last seen." Id. On September 28, 1983, however, Sandra Kay reported another "flare-up" in Bob's behavior, and Dr. Davis responded by recommending a change in Bob's medication. In the next several visits, Dr. Davis experimented with increased dosages of lithium to modulate Bob's behavior. Id. By November 16, 1983, the dosage was strong enough that the couple reported that "Bob has done relatively well with no major upswings or downswings since last seen." Id. On January 4, 1984, Bob met with Dr. Davis alone, and the two of them "spent much of the time reflecting on his Vietnam experience and the sadness that generated." Id. On February 1, 1984, Bob and Sandra both met with Dr. Davis and reported that "[t]he last month has gone very well," prompting Dr. Davis to shorten their session. Id. Bob came in alone to the last session, conducted on March 8, 1984, and spoke "some about his dissatisfaction with his current life," but reported "that things are generally going well." Id. Sometime after this last session on March 8, 1984, Dr. Davis moved his practice from Bryan, Texas, to Maryland. E.H. Vol. I at 114. Although Dr. Davis states that he advised his patients of the services of other psychiatrists in the area, E.H. Vol. I at 114, the unfortunate fact is that Mr. Black's promising outpatient treatment -- and therefore, his prescriptions to antidepressant medications -- came to an unexpected end with Dr. Davis' departure. E.H. Vol. I at 57. Without the necessary aid of counselling and treatment, Bob's disorder predictably reasserted control over his actions, and his life resumed a downward spiral of deterioration. By October 9, 1984 -- just six months later -- Bob tried to commit suicide, ingesting 91 percogesic tablets with alcohol in an attempted drug overdose. See Exhibit 12.

It was during that month -- October 1984 -- that Mr. Black first contacted John Wayne Hearn⁴, the man whom he would later

⁴Mr. Hearn, who admitted to killing two other persons in Florida earlier that year, agreed to plead guilty in all three slayings and testify against Mr. Black in exchange for consecutive life sentences. Today, Mr. Hearn -- three-time convicted murderer -- walks around in civilian clothes and has a key to his own cell ask to kill his wife Sandra Kay. S.F. Vol. XIX at 4830.⁵

3. The relevance of Robert Black's psychological disorders to the conduct that led to offense in this case.

It not a mere coincidence that during the same period that Mr. Black's life was once again spinning out of control -- and during the same month that Mr. Black would attempt to end his own life -- that he would make contact with John Wayne Hearn, who eventually agree to kill Mr. Black's wife. An understanding of Mr. Black's psychological disorders is necessary to comprehend Mr. Black's conduct at the time of the offense -- an understanding of which the jury in Mr. Black's case was deprived.

On August 2, 1985, Dr. John Walker performed an evaluation of Mr. Black to determine whether Mr. Black suffered from PTSD at the time of the offense, and if so, whether the disorder had any connection to the commission of the charged offense. See Exhibit 13. Dr. Walker's report of that evaluation stated, in significant part, the following:

Bob demonstrated instability in a number of areas including interpersonal relationships, mood and self-image.

in a federal prison located near his family in Columbia, South Carolina. Mr. Black, in contrast, is locked down 23 hours a day, walks in chains, and awaits his death next week.

Yet while the disparity in their respective fates is striking, the reasons for a reprieve and ultimate commutation of Mr. Black's sentence have to do with Mr. Black and not Mr. Hearn.

⁵"S.F." is used here to designate a citation to a volume of the "Statement of Facts" of Mr. Black's trial. The "Statement of Facts" are those volumes of the transcript that comprise the testimony at the guilt/innocence and punishment phases of the trial.

Interpersonal relationships for Bob tend to be rather intense, situation specific, and unstable. Mood can change within a matter of moments and can shift from extremely dysphoric to elated. On numerous occasions this shift was noted throughout the assessment period. Behaviorally Bob is likely to be rather impulsive and unpredictable. Potential self-damaging behavior is always possible. Periodic angry outbursts and difficulty modulating emotion are characteristic. Bob also is having and has had difficulty coming to grips with his self-identity.

These characteristics, although indicated to a lesser degree before Vietnam, were probably exacerbated due to the stressors of combat. Bob reported recurrent and intrusive thoughts about combat, increased detachment and estrangement from others over time, as well as sleep disturbances, survival guilt and memory impairment. All of these symptoms are associated with a Post-Traumatic Stress disorder. Bob describes himself, after Vietnam, as silent, antisocial, temperamental, isolated, hurt and guilt ridden.

Years after Bob came back from Vietnam, he states that he "relives the war daily." At times, Bob himself, became the target of all his pent up rage as manifested in several reported suicide attempts. At other times, his wife Sandra became the target. She was seen by Bob as the cause of all his rage. In his mind she became the enemy. He reported that she never accepted him after Vietnam, was available and was so much weaker than he. Bob stated "the more she clung to me, it seemed as if she was trying to destroy me." Because of difficulty adjusting to civilian life in combination with his apparent personality disorder, Bob appears to have had a series of vocational and personal failures. The more he failed the more intense his disturbance and the more his rage spilled over at his wife. This intense emotionality and instability is still very much in evidence in Bob at this time.

Id. (emphasis added) Dr. Walker then concluded his report with the following diagnoses:

AXIS I - 309.81 - Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder
delayed and chronic

AXIS II - 301.83 - Borderline Personality Disorder with depressive and anxious features

AXIS III - Deferred

AXIS IV - Severity of Psychosocial Stressors: Extreme

AXIS V - Highest level of Adaptive functioning in last year: Very poor

Id (emphasis added).

As Dr. Walker noted, as Mr. Black's untreated disorders increased his levels of frustration and depression, his wife became the misplaced focus for him of his problems and his sense of failure -- "[i]n his mind she became the enemy." This irrational perception of his wife as the source of his increasing sense of failure and frustration with himself was a result of the distorting lens of his disorders.

Indeed, to fully understand the relationship of the disorders to Mr. Black's behavior it is necessary to have a full comprehension of the nature of his disability. Dr. John P. Wilson, an internationally recognized expert in PTSD, testified at the evidentiary hearing in this case, that in about half of the cases in which a veteran suffers from PTSD, the disorder is "co-morbid" -- in other words, coincides -- with another psychiatric disorder as well. E.H. Vol. I at 203. Dr. Wilson's diagnosis of Mr. Black, formed after a lengthy interview with Mr. Black and after a review of extensive records documenting Mr. Black's mental health history, was that Mr. Black suffers from Major Depression and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. E.H. Vol. I at 203.

As Dr. Wilson explained, the relevance of Mr. Black's mental disorder to his behavior can really only be understood in terms of the interrelationship of these "co-morbid" diagnoses:

Q: [T]o really understand [Mr. Black's behavior] is it necessary to understand the Post Traumatic Stress Disorder diagnosis?

A: I think it's important to understand the Post Traumatic Stress Disorder diagnosis, and I think it's also important to understand how that relates to the depression. Those two go together. As I said earlier, they're co-morbid conditions in the way they feed each other, if you can think of it in those terms.

Q: What's the cycle?

A: The cycle is that the depression is associated with helplessness, suicidal ideation, poor feelings of self worth, guilt, inadequacy, sleep disturbances and agitation. In turn, that often triggers his feelings of helplessness and vulnerability at the end of his combat tour of duty in Vietnam, that this had changed him, he now felt helpless, he did not have the career opportunity, he did not know where to go with his life.

And now he's starting to think about what it is that he did in the war, did he kill civilians, did he kill innocent women and children, was that the right thing to [do]. So you get these two syndromes feeding each other in a very dynamic way. So he can have an alteration of being very depressed and withdrawn with episodes of [] aggression, hostility, irritability, outbursts of anger and rage behavior.

E.H. Vol. I at 278-79.

When the interraction of Mr. Black's co-morbid disorders of PTSD and Major Depression is taken into account, the relevance of these disorders to Mr. Black's involvement in his wife's murder becomes more apparent:

Q: How would these disorders have affected Mr. Black at the time of the crime?

A: In my opinion the existence of his depression and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder impaired on his judgment, that it decreased his capacity for rational decisionmaking, it decreased his ability to be logical and to think and make decisions about his life and the things that were important to [him] in his his life at that time because of the disorder.

Q: Would it have contributed to any marital problems?

A: Unquestionably.

Q: Is that common in victims of PTSD?

A: Par for the course.

Q: [W]ould it have contributed to any aggressiveness?

A: Yes.

Q: Would it have resulted in any kind of diminished capacity?

A: Yes.

Q: Can you discuss that a little bit?

A: I think I already have, but I'll reiterate. I believe the existence of the depression in a Post Traumatic Stress Disorder impacted on his ability to reason logically, to have sound judgment and to find alternatives in terms of confronting the issues that he had in his life at that time, specifically the relationship to his wife, Sandy Kay....

E.H. Vol. I at 211-12.

Perhaps even more importantly, evidence of Mr. Black's mental disorders also explain how Mr. Hearn may have manipulated or exerted a strong influence on the clearly ambivalent Mr. Black in carrying through with the offense. As Dr. Wilson explained in response to questions at the evidentiary hearing:

Q: [I]n your opinion would this disorder have rendered him more susceptible to influence?

A: Yes.

Q: And why is that?

A: Because in my opinion Mr. Black had a very low self-image. I think he felt extremely vulnerable in addition to being depressed and troubled by what he had gone through in Vietnam. And because of that inner state of what I actually think is dependency as opposed to assertiveness in taking charge of his life, that he was vulnerable to influence from external sources.

Vol. I at 213. Dr. Wilson then explained the significance of this aspect of Mr. Black's disorder to his relationship with Mr.

Hearn, and its possible effect on Mr. Black's involvement in the offense:

Q: Was there anything significant in [John Wayne Hearn's] testimony about Mr. Hearn that you think would be relevant to Mr. Black's behavior in this case?

A: Yes.

Q: Could you describe that?

A: I'm paraphrasing because I don't have that testimony in front of me. Mr. Hearn presented himself as a Marine Corps officer, colonel, as a colonel. And to me that's significant, because I think Mr. Black looked up to people higher in rank and authority. And I think he perceived him [not just] as a fellow Marine, but a fellow Marine who was a colonel as opposed to a him being a captain [Mr. Black's rank] and, therefore, a authority figure.

Q: And so how would that have affected Mr. Black?

A: In my opinion it [] rendered him vulnerable and susceptible to Mr. Hearn's motives, so to speak.

E.H. Vol. I at 215-16.

The jury in Mr. Black's case was deprived of any information about Mr. Black's development of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder after his combat in Vietnam. Without it, they had no choice but to perceive Mr. Black as a fully rational, clear-headed, but cold-blooded killer. Indeed, the man who Mr. Black's jury sentenced to death was not the real Robert Black.

As the jury foreman at Mr. Black's trial stated in a recent affidavit:

[Since the trial] I have ... become aware of the difficulties Mr. Black experienced making a readjustment to civilian life upon his return to the United States and of the fact that Mr. Black had been diagnosed as suffering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder as a result of his experiences in combat. As a veteran of the Vietnam war myself, I personally am familiar with a number of soldiers with whom I served who experienced similar difficulties upon returning to the United States. From this personal knowledge, I take Post Traumatic Stress Disorder seriously as a very real psychological affliction with very real debilitating consequences.

Had Mr. Black's attorneys presented evidence of the difficulties Mr. Black experienced upon his return to the United States, this evidence would also have effected my deliberations. It is my opinion that such information would have contributed to an understanding of Mr. Black's post-Vietnam life and character. If this information about Mr. Black had been known to the jury, I would have shared my personal knowledge about Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and its effects on servicemen with the rest of the jury. I would have made it a significant issue in our deliberations because it was of substantial significance to me then and is still of substantial significance to me today.

In retrospect, I feel that because I was deprived of this information as a juror I was not able to judge Mr. Black clearly and with equanimity. In short, I was deprived of what I consider the most important evidence in regard to my decision about the appropriate sentence in Mr. Black's case.

See Exhibit 8.

Mr. Black's accomplishments as a young man, his selfless act of volunteering to serve the country in wartime, and his outstanding record of service to the country in combat all must be recognized as making Mr. Black more deserving of a grant of clemency than those who have not acted similarly in their lifetimes. Moreover, it must be recognized that it was only because Mr. Black volunteered to serve this country that he acquired the disintegrating mental disorders which destroyed his ability to enjoy a fruitful and productive life. Had he never acquired these illnesses, there can be no question that Mr. Black would never have reached that point at the bottom of his life in which he irrationally asked another man to take his wife's life.

It is time for our government to acknowledge and to take responsibility for the human destruction that was wrought on our sons by our tragic efforts in Vietnam. Mr. Black made personal sacrifices, risked his life for this country, and in return received a pat on the back and a dreadfully debilitating mental disorder. For this, he does not deserve to die.

Request for Relief

On behalf of Robert Vannoy Black, Jr., we respectfully petition the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles for a recommendation to the Honorable Ann Richards, Governor for the State of Texas, to commute Mr. Black's sentence of death to life imprisonment, and to convene a hearing to consider evidence and argument in support of this petition.

We respectfully request that the Honorable Ann Richards, Governor for the State of Texas, ask the Board of Pardons and Paroles to consider Mr. Black's petition for a commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment our request for a 30-day reprieve of Mr. Black's May 22, 1992, execution date so that the Board of Pardons and Paroles can conduct a full and fair hearing on Mr. Black's petition for clemency.

(b) Each member retained under this section -- (1) shall be discharged not later than 30 days after his arrival in the United States; and (2) except in time of war is entitled to an increase in basic pay of 25 percent. (c) The substance of this section shall be included in the enlistment contract of each person enlisting in the naval service."

period of observation which did not provide the opportunity for the counsel and guidance which may have helped develop Capt Black's latent capabilities.

Capt Black did excel in his Aeronautical capabilities. As a designated Combat Division P/O, he demonstrated the ^{most} mature judgement, professional competence and versatility which earned the respect of all those with whom he flew. Captain Black flew numerous Strike/Flight Combat missions and was recommended for the Air Medal with appropriate numerals for the missions.

Captain Black attended the 1st MAW human relations course and is capable of working in harmony without bias or prejudice, with members regardless of race, color or creed.

J. M. Fall
MAJ USMC

He is career motivated and his attitude toward the Marine Corps has had a pronounced effect on those who come in contact with him.

CAPT BLACK is a personable officer who is easily engaged in conversation. He is actively concerned in current affairs and communicates his thoughts and ideas with ease. He has utilized this talent to good effect in his dealings with the new Human Relations Program within this squadron.

In addition to his regular duties, Capt BLACK has also qualified as a combat flight leader Radar Intercept officer. His aggressiveness and confidence in his airmanship are ever apparent while air borne. He is often sought out by other junior officers to obtain his opinions and recommendations concerning different combat situations. During this reporting period, because of his knowledge and skillful airmanship, Capt BLACK was designated as one of the lead RIO's to first engage in air combat over North Viet Nam.

Considering this Marine's relative standing among all those I have known of the same grade, I assign a grade of 5.

REVIEWING OFFICER'S COMMENT SHEET: CASE OF CAPT. R.V. BLACK
PERIOD COVERED FROM 720715 TO 720805

1. I CONCUR WITH THE MARKINGS AND COMMENTS OF THE REPORTING SENIOR.
2. CAPT. BLACK'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE COMBAT EFFECTIVENESS OF HIS SQUADRON HAS BEEN COMMENDABLE. HIS CAPABILITY AND POISE AS A RIO ARE RESPECTED BY HIS COLLEAGUES. HIS EFFORTS IN HIS DUTIES AS GROUND PLANNER HAVE EASED CONSIDERABLY THE BURDEN OF OPERATING IN AN AUSTERE ENVIRONMENT WITH A CRITICAL SHORTAGE OF PERSONNEL, AS EVIDENCED BY A HEALTHY REENLISTMENT RATE. THIS RESPONSIBLE, ATTENTIVE OFFICER IS CONSIDERED TO HAVE EXCELLENT - OUTSTANDING GROWTH POTENTIAL.

CONSIDER THE MARINE REPORTED ON IN COMPARISON WITH ALL OTHERS WHOSE PROFESSIONAL ABILITIES ARE KNOWN TO YOU PERSONALLY

Capt BLACK is an engaging energetic and highly motivated young Marine officer. During this reporting period as Squadron Career Planner, he has carried out his duties in an enthusiastic and diligent manner. An original thinker, he has instituted several new ideas for changes within his shop that would further enhance the re-enlistment rate of this squadron.

REVIEWING OFFICER'S COMMENT SHEET: CASE OF CAPT. R.V. BLACK
PERIOD COVERED FROM 720510 TO 720715

1. I CONCUR WITH THE COMMENTS AND MARKS GIVEN BY THE REPORTING SENIOR.
2. CAPT. BEALIE'S KNOWLEDGE, EXPERIENCE AND LEADERSHIP AS A SQUADRON RIO HAVE BEEN AN ASSET TO THIS ORGANIZATION DURING ITS RECENT ASSIGNMENT TO COMBAT. HIS DUTIES INVOLVE LONG HOURS EXPENDED IN FLIGHT OPERATIONS; ON TOP OF THIS, HE HAS WILLINGLY DEVOTED EXTRA TIME TO ENSURE THAT THE QUALITY OF WORK PRODUCED BY HIS SECTION DID NOT SUFFER.

J. Adams

160 USMC

He easily expresses himself and with clarity, which has been an asset in his daily communications with others. His position within this squadron has dictated several councilings with junior Marines, which he has done with tact and understanding.

Capt BLACK eagerly accepts responsibility and has assumed his present rank with no difficulties in dealing with his former contemporaries.

As a combat flight lead RIO, he has frequently demonstrated his excellent knowledge of the aircraft, its systems and its capabilities. His coolness under fire has ^{been} contagious to those junior officers possessing lower thresholds of anxiety, enabling mission accomplishment with accurate bombing results.

Considering this Marine's relative standing among all those of the same grade I have known, I assign a grade of 8.

BLACK, ROBERT V

GRADE

1 JAN 72

9 MAY 72

1st Black is an amiable, soft spoken young officer. He is an intent listener but is, at times, content to be taken up into the "crowd". What he lacks in force he more than compensates for with cooperation and devotion to duty. He continually seeks responsibility and values it highly when given. His loyalty is unquestionable, and his ideals are those of a dedicated American citizen.

As the career planning and education officer, 1st Black requires minimal supervision while producing excellent results. The work he originates is habitually administratively correct and properly phrased.

1st Black is a RIO section leader and has proven to be a valuable crewmember during combat flight operations in the RVN.

1st Black's growth potential is excellent and he is submitting an application for augmentation into the regular establishment.

DUTY ASSIGNMENT Commanding Officer, MAG-15 INITIALS KO

During ^{the} reporting period this squadron has accomplished two major deployments. One a training deployment of six weeks duration, and the other from garrison to combat where the squadron is presently committed. Lt Black profited immeasurably from the training deployment and has shown himself to be a definite asset as an aircrewman in combat air operations. He is developing rapidly and displays those traits necessary in an element leader and should soon earn the designation of RIO section leader.

Lt Black is applying for meritorious augmentation into the regular establishment and in my opinion he is a prime candidate for assimilation. He is an intelligent, competent young officer in every respect. He has made his decision to apply for augmentation as a result of careful thought spanning a long period of time and based on a variety of situations. He was exposed to combat in the initial phases of this squadron's commitment and was exposed to the privations and dangers attendant to such operations. This exposure did not deter his desire but rather gave him a more complete picture of the full meaning of a military career.

FILE IN CASE

It Black is sincere in his desire to become a regular marine officer and with the experience to be gained through continued service, challenging situations and assignments, and proper guidance he will be a credit to the Corps. He possesses excellent growth potential and thrives on demanding assignments, and is capable of accepting positions of broader scope and increased responsibilities. It Black is wholeheartedly endorsed for augmentation.

Lt Black is a resourceful officer who possesses a strong desire to excel in all endeavors and as a result produces positive results. A quiet man with an unassuming personality he remains a capable administrative assistant and able leader whose professionalism has earned him the respect of all those with whom he works. As a squadron RIO he has demonstrated exceptional knowledge and proficiency of the complicated F4I radar system. He willingly devotes extra hours to both his regular military duties but also to many self station squadron projects. Affidavit of John Blackman

RECEIVED

MAR 18 1992

STATE OF ILLINOIS
COUNTY OF WHITESIDE

361ST DISTRICT COURT

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN BLACKMAN

1. My name is John Blackman. I reside at 2703 East 40th Street in Davenport, Iowa. I am more than 18 years old and am in all other respects competent to give this affidavit.

2. Sometime in late February 1992, I was contacted by Raoul Schonemann, attorney for Bob Black, to testify at an evidentiary hearing in Mr. Black's case scheduled for March 5, 1992, in Bryan, Texas. I agreed to come to Bryan to testify on that date, and Mr. Schonemann and I discussed and planned travel arrangements for my visit.

3. Mr. Schonemann subsequently contacted me on March 2, 1992, to advise me that the hearing in Mr. Black's case had been postponed until March 18, 1992. At that time, I was still willing and able to testify on behalf of Mr. Black on the new hearing date.

4. Since then, my father, who is 80 years old and lives by himself in nearby Bettendorf, Iowa, has fallen ill. On Sunday, March 8, 1992, he was hospitalized with a severe strep infection in his blood. The doctors advise me that his condition since then has further deteriorated and that at best he will be in the hospital for several more weeks.

5. Commercial flights from the nearest airport to my home in Iowa, to Bryan, Texas, take between six and six-and-a-half hours. In order to attend Mr. Black's hearing, I had planned to arrive in Bryan the night before the hearing and depart the morning following the hearing. In other words, to attend the hearing I would have to be away from Iowa for approximately one-and-a-half days. Due to my father's advanced age and the seriousness of his condition, I do not feel I am able to leave him alone in the hospital for the amount of time that I would be required to be in Texas to provide testimony at Mr. Black's evidentiary hearing.

6. Were I able to be at Mr. Black's evidentiary hearing on March 18, 1992, I would testify as follows:

7. I met Bob Black when we were both serving in the Marines. In November 1971, I received overseas orders and reported to the Iwakuni Marine Corps Air Station in Iwakuni, Japan. It was there that I met Bob. We were assigned to the same squadron -- Marine Fighter/Attack Squadron (VMFA) 232, Marine Air Group 15, 1st Marine Airwing, which was based at the Marine Corps Air Station in Iwakuni. Our squadron flew McDonnell-Douglas F-4J Phantom II fighter planes. Bob and I were teamed together; myself as the pilot of an F-4 and Bob as my radio intercept operator (RIO). During this period, while we were stationed at Iwakuni, we primarily flew practice bombing missions and practiced air-to-air combat.

8. In late 1971 and early 1972, our squadron was deployed in Subic Bay, Philippines for additional combat training. In April 1972, our squadron was issued its first combat orders in Vietnam.

9. In Vietnam, Bob and I flew almost 100 combat missions together; the exact number is recorded in our flight log book, a true copy of which I have attached to this affidavit. We also roomed together during our entire combat tour in Vietnam.

10. Bob was highly regarded in our squadron both for his qualities as a person and for his abilities as a radio intercept operator. Bob and I had a great deal of success as a flight crew and I credit much of that to Bob's abilities as an RIO.

11. But what I remember Bob most for was his compassion for people. He rarely had unkind things to say about anyone, even though we lived in a very close, tense environment. For example, when one particular pilot in our squadron refused to fly combat missions, Bob did not chastise or criticize him as most did, but said he understood his reasons.

12. In fact, Bob seemed to go out of his way to do things for others. This attitude was not limited to Americans, either, because Bob treated the nationals of each country we were in very graciously. Because many American military personnel were typical of the so-called "Ugly American," I found it refreshing to be associated with Bob.

13. I think it was for these very reasons -- that Bob had always been a sensitive person and that he cared a great deal about people -- that our experiences in Vietnam were particularly difficult for him. Unlike in other wars, we faced in Vietnam a very diffuse enemy. There was not a line drawn which put the good guys on one side and the bad guys on the other. Many innocent people suffered loss of property and loss of life, and I know from later conversations with Bob that this bothered him greatly.

14. When we returned from overseas, Bob and I spoke on the phone a number of times, and we wrote letters back and forth. I didn't see Bob again, though, until years later, in 1983, when Bob and his son Gary Wayne visited me and my family at our home in Iowa during a cross-country motorcycle trip they were taking. Although he stayed with us for only a few days, I noticed that Bob had changed in subtle ways. He didn't seem to be real happy with the way his life had turned out. He said that he'd had trouble holding jobs. He also told me about the fact that he'd been hospitalized in the V.A. hospital when he came back. He explained that since he'd been back in the States nothing had worked out as he'd planned, and that he'd had a nervous breakdown.

15. We talked then about some of our experiences in Vietnam and I was amazed at Bob's vivid recollection of some of our missions. It was clear that many of our experiences had affected him deeply.

16. Bob recalled one mission in particular in exact detail that especially repulsed him. It was a bombing mission where there was not a defined target, but where you flew into known enemy territory and bombed "targets of opportunity." This meant that we basically could bomb anything that looked at all like a military target. However, in an F-4 Phantom flying 500 to 600 miles per hour, and making erratic maneuvers to avoid hostile fire, this type of observation was very speculative at best. I remember that we saw several small boats in a small inlet off a larger river. We dropped our bombs and destroyed the boats, but to this day I don't know if they were boats used by the NVA to transport military goods or simply fishing boats belonging to Vietnamese civilians. I do know there were no secondary explosions caused by munitions being hit that would have been stored on those boats. Whether these boats were friend or foe, however, it was clear that it deeply bothered Bob that we were rather indiscriminately dropping thousands of pounds of bombs on what were indefinite targets.

17. Bob recalled another very similar incident that summer that also had clearly left a very strong impression with him. On this particular occasion, something happened to one of the planes in our squadron -- a hydraulic leak or something -- and we had to drop bombs in the ocean before landing. As we turned to go back to the base Bob and I noticed that there were fishing boats in the area. I remember we talked then about how we hoped we hadn't hit one of the boats, but there was no way of knowing whether we did or not. From my conversations with Bob years later, however, it was again apparent that the possibility that we accidentally killed innocent civilians continued to haunt Bob.

18. Another incident that made a very strong impact on Bob was an occasion when we almost lost several planes from our squadron returning to our base in Nam Phong, Thailand. Bob and I were leading a division of fighters back that were returning from a mission in North Vietnam when we all found ourself with extra fuel to burn to get down to landing weight. To burn the extra fuel, we made a quick tour of the area, followed by some mock "dogfighting" in the air, which was standard procedure under these circumstances. When we reached about 4,000 pounds of jet fuel, which is just about the right amount to return for landing at the proper weight, I radioed for all the planes to "knock it off" and head back. The high-altitude, high-G maneuvering had everyone disoriented, however, and when we broke through the cloud coverage we were not where we thought we were and could not find our base. The field at Nam Phong was barely operational; there were no navigational aids available and only a radio operator in the field tower to search for us. We vainly tried to identify a familiar landmark to get our bearings back. Precious fuel burned as we checked one another's fuel levels by radio. All of the planes, including mine and Bob's, were running low at that point, but our friend Sam Cordova, who was the pilot of one of the other planes in the squadron, was at a perilously low fuel stage. At 1,500 pounds of fuel, we declared an emergency and issued four "May-Days." Cordova barely had time to issue a statement with the emergency transmitter that he and his RIO were ejecting before allowing their plane to flame out five miles north of the field. Minutes later a second plane in the squadron flamed out on the runway. Although there were no casualties, and only Cordova had leg injuries from his parachute landing, losing the planes was humiliating. Bob, in particular, faulted himself for the accident, and the near loss of life, on the grounds that it had been primarily his responsibility to locate the airstrip for a safe landing.

19. In retrospect, perhaps the most devastating thing that ever happened to Bob in Vietnam was when our friend and squadron mate, Sam Cordova, was shot down by enemy MIGs in August 1972. On this occasion, Bob and I were among a section of fighters flying into an area to relieve another division of fighters on a bombing mission in North Vietnam. We were trying our best to receive radio communications from our only radar outpost -- a ship at least 250 miles away. When we were about 20 minutes away from relieving the other division, we heard a panicked message from the ship's radio advising us that enemy aircraft had been picked up on the ship's radar that were so close to our own aircraft that the distance could not be calculated. Moments later we heard the radio call from the squadron's leader that Cordova's plane had been hit by an air-to-air missile fired by enemy MIGs. Emergency radio transmissions began as we communicated with Cordova and his partner on the ground. Transmissions were made to helicopters to launch a rescue. We sent orders for more refueling, so that we could stay and secure the area around the downed plane. When the helicopters arrived, it dropped a jungle penetrator to locate Sam. According to the search and rescue helicopter crew, the last words heard from Sam were, "I see the jungle penetrator, I'm going for the penetrator." Moments later the helicopter came under heavy fire from enemy troops. Cordova's partner, Lieutenant Borders, was picked up unhurt; Cordova, however, was not so fortunate. After a time, the search for Sam was abandoned and he was declared "MIA."

20. Both Bob and I lost a close friend that day. All three of us -- Bob, Sam, and myself -- had lived in the same hootch when we were over there, and Bob and I both considered Sam a very close friend. I know from my conversations with Bob that many years afterward he maintained an active involvement in Sam's affairs. While we were still overseas, Bob started a regular correspondence with Sam's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Cordova, of California. Mr. Cordova visited Vietnam several times in search of his son, and Bob provided the Cordova family with information about when, where, and how Sam was shot down, so the Cordovas could try to find out more information about their son. When Bob returned to the United States he went out to California to visit with Sam's parents, to tell them what Sam had meant to us and to try to console them for their loss.

I hereby affirm that the foregoing is true and correct and I so state under the pains and penalties of perjury.

Correspondence between Robert V. Black and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Cordova

VMFA-232, MAG-15, FMP
FPO, San Francisco, Calif. 96602
12 September 1972

My dear Mr. and Mrs. Cordova,

Please forgive my delay in writing to you regarding Sam. His hootch-mates, John Blackman, Phil Lynd, Al Beye and I want to express our sympathy to the family and wishes for his safe and speedy return. Having lived closest to Sam over here we can assure you of a very personal compassion and concern of each of us.

I am taking care of the personal effects located here at Nam Phong. Since I will be going back to Iwakuni next month, there is a possibility that I will be asked to also inventory and send home his belongings from that location. Right now we are waiting for an official classification of Sam's status from Headquarters Marine Corps (but hopefully his return) before sending anything home: I also wanted to correspond with you to see if you agree with my plans. After the inventory, everything was locked in his footlocker and his bed and belongings are in a state ready for his return. Essentially Sam had the usual array of a small amount of used clothing and toiletries necessary for our daily life in a "temporary" base. Also there is a small collection of new clothing; a suit, trousers and sport coat, new shoes and a couple of party suits. All he has with him here of high value is a camera, two lenses and accessories, and a portable tape recorder. The only currency found came to around $1.50 from various countries. Sam has quite a savings program in various forms: $1200 in the 10% savings plan, $2300 in the bank at Iwakuni, $400 in the Navy Federal Credit Union, a $60 check from his automobile insurance company, and over $800 due this coming payday. Within the next few days his pay record will be sent to the finance center at Kansas City, and from there arrangements will be made for you to control his pay. Presently he is drawing about $420 per month plus combat pay, and has allotments of $16.70 to Fidelity Life Insurance Company and $300 per month for the 10% savings program. You will receive guidance on the disposition of his finances, but I would like to suggest putting as much as possible into this plan and using allotments to cover any of his monthly expenses, while keeping enough of his pay aside yourself for incidentals on his behalf. You might keep in mind too that his promotion to Captain will be approved in the next few months. I had to go through his personal papers and letters and this was what I was able to find here although he could have had other savings plans I'm sure. I was unable to find anything pending other than a model aircraft he has in Japan that will be sent when finished next year, and a name tag at Rex's in Iwakuni. I will check in Udorn when I go again for any clothing he might have ordered: the clothes he had in the base laundry have been included in his gear already. I understand that at Iwakuni Sam has some stereo gear and possibly other high value items. It appears that Sam made no requests for anyone in particular to manage his affairs here in his absence so I hope to be able to do the job adequately as seen from both your and his stand-points.

Sam is a very talented photographer and I am sure you will be delighted with the photographs he has. He did not write any explanations on the backs, so if you would like me to tell you a little bit about each I will be happy to, and I could send a few as I finish every few days if you so desire. I guess he has around 100, plus possibly some more in the PX which I will check on. I took the liberty of removing two which I cannot promise the return of for use in our cruise book. It should be off the press around January and I will see to it that our editor repays you with a complimentary copy.

So, with this background I would like to ask your permission to dispose of his gear as follows:

- Personal papers, letters, and photos by registered mail
- Camera and accessories by insured mail (you will have an import tax to pay)
- All clothing and other items by personal effects baggage at government expense

This isn't exactly in accordance with Marine Corps Standard Operating Procedures and orders, but I have suggested this way instead of all by government expense because of the possibility of pilferage and the extremely long delays in shipping. Of course I will need your permission and acknowledgment of receipt for our records if this is satisfactory to you.

Other than this the only thing left at Nam Phong is his toiletries: shaving cream, soap, canned milk, soup, insect spray, etc. which cannot be sent due to its perishable nature. It will eventually be disposed of in an "as needed" basis by his friends. There is an item I hope will have special significance on Sam's return. He has a bottle of Cold Duck which his hootch-mates have signed and I would like to personally deliver some day. We want him to remember us as we're remembering him when he celebrates over it some day.

Also, could you please have the Marine who calls on you offering assistance please write me with any suggestions he might have as to my being of assistance.

Our daily missions usually take us into the area where I talked to Sam last and everyone is watchful for any signs of his still being in the area.

Last, we ask that you contact VIVA with permission for them to use Sam's name. Perhaps it is something too hard to do right now, but please write us if you should decide to do so. Not knowing their procedures, Al requested a bracelet and received this information. Many of us are waiting for your reply.

Forgive me for being business-like on initial contact with you; I hope to become a friend you can rely on for answers and assistance.

God bless,

Bob

Dear Bob:

Sept 20 -

Received both your letters. One on the 17 and the one with the pictures today.

First of all I want to thank you so much. For being such a good friend to Sam, and for being so thoughtful of us.

About Sam's things. Yes you have our permission to send everything back home. We will take care of any expense at this end. Will you please let us know when you ship them, so we will know about when to expect the things and stick around the house in order to pay for the things.

His money we are leaving in the bank. Except the American Express, we are going to try and transfer it to Whither - Are you sending all his things from Japan too?

Please excuse me if I keep jumping from one subject to another, but since all this happened I can't think straight, my brain is numb.

The marines here have been very good, and very helpful to us. They were here when your letter and pictures came today. They read the letter, and they were in accord that it sounded pretty hopeful.
Believe me there have been

III

a lot of prayers for Sam for his safe return. We are keeping the faith that he is doing fine. We just have to keep that thought.

I know that he bought all that stereo stuff. So if you will please take care of sending all his things home we will really appreciate it. May God Bless you and keep you safe.

Please keep in touch Bob, and I will answer your letters. If there is anything that you want or need please keep in touch. Again I want to thank you for being such a

^{IV} wonderful friend, and I hope you stay friends for many many years: With Love and appreciation

Sincerely
Eleanor Rodova

Does Mike know about
Sam? Again Thanks.

Sept 21-72

Dear Bob:

I have already written you a letter yesterday. I don't really know if it made sense. It was not one of my good days. Some days I just can't stop crying. It all seems like a dream. I'm having, and I will wake up and everything will be fine. The only thing that keeps me going is faith in God, and I keep saying over and over that he is fine.

Bob truthfully from all reports and where he went down what do you think? If I'm putting you on a spot don't tell me.

Again I want to thank you for the two beautiful letters. Sam is lucky to have a friend like you, and I pray that you will be friends for many many years.

II

We are very grateful for your help in getting all his things together. If there is any expense to you please let us know. We are leaving all his money except American Express in Iwobuni where it is. His pay check we are putting in the bank at 10% if possible. This way when he gets home "God willing" he will have a few dollars. But if you go to Iwobuni would you see what we have to do to get his money transferred to Whittier. If you can't then we will let the marines take care of it. Taking about the marines they have really been a big help, and you all are the finest men in the world.

I got in touch with Viva

III

before I received your letter, but I guess it was after you wrote for one. I have written to them, and gave them your name and address, and am having them send you one with Janis names on it.

How much longer do you have in nam? I hope its not long. I hate this damn war.
Again thank you take care of yourself. God Bless -

Love

Eleanor

Oct 3 - Tues

Dear Bob:

Received your letter yesterday. I really can't tell you how your letters help. Repeating myself I can't thank you enough to be so kind.

I know living so close with each other and doing the job that you do, all you men become closer than brothers, and make life long friends. Here's hoping that Sam, you, Mike and all of you are close friends for many years to come.

They are having a convention in Wash. D.C. that is being given by the League of Families of POW and M.I.A. men. We might learn something that we can do, or can ^{It} help in some way.

Then we can also go to marine Adpts and see if they have evaluated everything that they have found. Thank God that I am getting some information from you Bob, or I think I would have gone nuts waiting to hear from them. I think Leo would have flown right over if possible. We are going to be at Staller Hilton from Oct 10-18th. Like I told Mike, if anything comes up. Please Call Collect. Will write you if we learn anything. We think that the more people that show up for this Convention, I guess you would call it. Maybe they will listen and do something for the men that are there -

Yes if you will please go to Amer Express to see if it can be transferred. Let me know. As for the car. I don't know as he didn't say. I don't think he was in Japan long enough, but I guess you can find out when you get there.

Leo said you left out the best part of the pictures.
They really gave us a laugh.
How are things at "Rose Garden"?

Please send his personal papers and bank books so that I can keep track of all his things.

at least ^{It} he can have a nice bank account when he gets home "God Willing".

When you get to the States
Please stop over to see us.
You know our home is open to you anytime you are here. If you would like to spend a few days and relax and sightsee we will be glad to take you anywhere you want to go.

Again thanks for being such a wonderful friend and for keep up our morale. Keep writing. God Bless.

My sincere Love &
Gratitude
Eleanor.

Dear Bob:

Received your letter. I wasn't home, but my neighbor called me last night and told me you had written. I have been in touch with Captain Johnson in Washington. They are going to take all his pay, and put it in the Kansas city bank at 10%. We got a letter stating that Sam has made captain as of October 1st and that's when his pay starts. He'll be proud when he gets back God willing.

My neighbor said that there were three boxes also that arrived. I don't know how many you sent. Bob please keep ~~an~~ an account of every-thing you are putting out, and we will give it to you when you get here. We are so grateful for all you are doing, and please thank any of the boys that are helping. If Sam has ordered any thing, or owes any body anything will you please take care of it, and will give it to you when we see you. If you havnt got it write us the amount, and we will send you a check right away.

We came to Washington D.C. They are holding a convention for families of M.I.A. & P.O.W's from Oct 14 to 17th. We weren't going to come, but we figured if they didn't get a good turnout then they will think that no one cares about the boys back there. And we might learn about something that we can do.

I hope this letter reaches you in time. Please if you have time. Go to the American Express see if you can get it transferred to Crocker Bank

15000 E. Whittier Blvd. Whittier
If they will only transfer it to ~~an~~ American Express only.
Then have it transferred to one in Santa Ana, Calif. or Newport Beach, Calif - they are both in Orange County. If they will give you a check, then I will put it Cuckers Bank myself. His pay check will all go to Kansas at 10%.

Captain Johnson let Leo + I read the reports on Sam from everyone there, as far as we can make out he has a 50-50 chance of being a P.O.W.

I will give you my neighbors ~~address~~ telephone number just in case we are out for a few hours. It is 943-2225. Her name is Ti and she lives in back of me. We are both on the corner. My telephone # is 943-2225 - My telephone # at Palm Springs is 327-9322 - Take Care -

Affidavit of Gary Wayne Black

STATE OF TEXAS

COUNTY OF BRAZOS

AFFIDAVIT OF GARY WAYNE BLACK

1. My name is Gary Wayne Black. I am the son of Bob Black, Jr., and Sandra Kay Black. I presently reside at 401 Anderson Street, in College Station, Texas. I am 22 years old.

2. I was born October 7, 1969, while my father, Robert V. Black, Jr., was stationed with the Marines in Hawaii. Our family lived in Hawaii for approximately 2 years; then my mother and I returned to live with my grandmother, Margie Eimann, in Bryan, Texas, while my father went off to Vietnam.

3. I have many fond memories of my father dating from the period right after he got back from Vietnam. One of my earliest memories dates from when our family lived on Gunsmith Street in Bryan, Texas. I remember playing with my father with a toy airplane that we tied to a door knob with elastic string and then would pull back and release, causing it to fly around the room. I also remember my father teaching me how to fish at a pond behind our house. I remember my father being relaxed, calm, and pleasant on these outings.

4. Right after my father returned from Vietnam, our family moved to Midland, where I went to kindergarten. We stayed in Midland for less than a year, moving back to Bryan where we bought our house in the Steep Hollow neighborhood.

5. I started to become involved in Boy Scouts when I was about 12 years old. My father had been an Eagle Scout himself, and he encouraged me a lot to become involved in Scouts too. I remember he bought me my first Scout uniform for my birthday.

6. My father became very active in Scouts with me. He became one of the assistant scout masters of our scout troop. He attended our weekly meetings on Mondays, and went on the campouts that we had about once a month at Camp Arrowmoon. I remember he converted an old truck that he had that we called the "Twinkie Truck" into a van for our scout troop. My father knew alot about scouting, and he taught me and the other boys alot in the troop. Everybody in the troop seemed to like him. I was proud that my father knew so much about scouting and that he was liked and respected by my friends.

7. Another thing that my father and I had in common was an interest in motorcycles. When I was about 13 years old, my father bought me a motorbike, and I liked to ride it alot. One of my fondest memories of my dad is of the cross-country motorcycle trip we took together when I was about 14 years old. We set off in a two-seater, and went from Bryan, to Oklahoma, then on to Kansas and Nebraska, stopping in South Dakota to see Mount Rushmore. From South Dakota we traveled east, passing through Minnesota and then headed south to Iowa, where we stopped to see my father's best friend from Vietnam, John Blackman.

8. We stayed with John Blackman and his family for about three days. Blackman and my father had flown many missions in Vietnam together; Blackman was the pilot and my father was a radio intercept operator. We grilled outdoors, and had a real good time. My father seemed real happy to see John Blackman, and they seemed like real good friends.

9. I don't remember my father and John Blackman talking at all about Vietnam in front of me during that trip. Later, my father told me that he and Blackman stayed up very late one night, after I'd gone to bed, and talked about Vietnam.

10. My father really never talked to me about his experiences in Vietnam during this time. It was understood in my family that you just didn't bring the subject up. For example, if I brought a videotape about Vietnam home to watch, like "Rambo", my father would get up and leave the room. He would do the same thing if a television program about Vietnam would come on. It was clear that he didn't want to talk about it.

11. I remember when my father and mother went to see the movie, "The Deer Hunter". When my father came home he was very upset by the movie. This was the only time that I can remember my father talking with my mother about what had happened in Vietnam. When they were done, my father told my mother that he never wanted to talk with her about it again.

12. My father kept no mementos or memorabilia from Vietnam around the house. I knew that he had photographs, but he kept those hidden away in the dresser drawer. He also had a wooden model of an F-4 fighter plane that he'd bought in the Phillipines and a "mammaluke" -- the sword or dagger that is presented to the best man in basic training -- but basically he kept all of these things out of open view.

13. One thing that I remember real well about my father was that he was a perfectionist. Everything he did had to be just right. My grandfather is the same way; it's like something that wouldn't matter to anybody else would matter alot to my grandfather, my father, and me. My Dad was real skilled with his hands and he liked to build things, but when he did all of the measurements had to be perfect. When we bought the house at Steep Hollow, the property was really a mess, and he really cleaned up the house and the land around it.

14. On the other hand, I realize too that my father had problems. His moods were unpredictable and sometimes the tiniest thing that went wrong would upset him. At the time, I did not understand his behavior; I understand now that it was related to things he'd experienced when he was in combat in Vietnam. I remember that my father was hospitalized once at the V.A. Hospital, and once at another psychiatric hospital many years later, for these problems. When he came back home from these places he seemed calmer and didn't lose his temper.

15. When I graduated from high school I went to see my father in prison because I was thinking about joining the Marines. He was against it and tried to talk me out of it. It was then that he told me for the first time stories about his experiences in Vietnam. Instead of joining the Marines I decided to go to college. I am now studying finance at Texas A & M University.

16. My father's trial, conviction, and imprisonment have been very difficult for me. However, he is still very much a part of my life. We maintain a correspondence by letter and I visit him as often as I can at the prison. He is important to me and still has much to offer, even from a prison cell. I believe he can contribute to the lives of his family and to society in general if he is allowed to live.

17. Although I recognize that he was responsible for the death of my mother, I love my father and want him to live. I have already lost one parent; I do not want to lose the other. I hope there will be some way to spare his life.

I hereby affirm that the foregoing is true and correct and I so state under the pains and penalties of perjury.

Gary Wayne Black

Affidavit of Bobby Ray Wilkinson

County of Brazos)
)
State of Texas)

Affadavit of Robert Ray Wilkinson

1. My name is ^{Bobby BAW} ~~Robert~~ Ray Wilkinson. I currently reside at 2603 Arbor Lane, Bryan, Texas. I am of legal age and am otherwise competent to give this affidavit.

2. In February 1986, I served as foreman of the jury for the capital murder trial of Robert Vannoy Block, Jr.

3. Before my retirement in 1977, I was a colonel in the United States Marine Corps for 28 years. Over that period of time, I had four specific combat tours, and I saw combat in both the Korean and Vietnam wars. During my third tour, I served as a commander of an attack helicopter squadron in combat in Vietnam. I also served a tour as "Presidential Pilot" for President Eisenhower from 1958 to 1961.

4. I recall from my service as foreman of Mr. Black's jury that Mr. Black had also been a Marine and that he had served in Vietnam. I distinctly remember, however, to my dissatisfaction at the time, that no details about the nature of Mr. Black's service in the United States Marine Corps were presented to the jury. Specifically, I distinctly remember that no mention was made of whether Mr. Black was honorably or dishonorably discharged. I naturally assumed that if Mr. Black had been honorably discharged, the defense would have presented evidence of that fact. Because they did not, I assumed that Mr. Black's discharge from the Marine Corps had been other than honorable.

5. Since the trial, I have reviewed Mr. Black's military service documents provided to me by his current lawyers. From these documents, I have learned not only that Mr. Black was honorably discharged from the Marines, but that he received numerous citations, commendations, and decorations for his service. According to Mr. Black's military personnel records, these honors included the National Defense Service Medal, the Meritorious Mast, the Vietnamese Service Medal with one star, the Vietnamese Campaign Medal with device, and the Air Medal with ~~one~~^{ning} star. ARW

6. During my own years of military service, I served for some years as a member of a Military Court. In that capacity, I encountered soldiers who deserted or otherwise shirked their duty to the United States. I considered their conduct morally reprehensible then, and I still do today. On the other hand, I can recall at least one occasion when a soldier's exemplary duty convinced me, as a member of the Military Court, of the appropriateness of clemency in that Marine's case.

7. Due to my own experience as an officer in the Marines for nearly 30 years, I consider the nature of a Marine's service in the military to be a strong indication of his character. Because I consider a dishonorable discharge to be a strong indication of poor character, my assumption that Mr. Black's service had been dishonorable effected my judgment about Mr. Black's character.

8. Had Mr. Black's trial attorneys presented the evidence of Mr. Black's exemplary service to his country of which I am now aware, there is at the least a substantial probability that I would have recommended a sentence of life in prison rather than the death penalty.

9. Furthermore, I have since become aware of the difficulties Mr. Black experienced making a readjustment to civilian life upon his return to the United States and of the fact that Mr. Black had been diagnosed as suffering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder as a result of his experiences in combat. As a veteran of the Vietnam war myself, I personally am familiar with a number of soldiers with whom I served who experienced similar difficulties upon returning to the United States. From this personal knowledge, I take Post Traumatic Stress Disorder seriously as a very real psychological affliction with very real debilitating consequences.

10. Had Mr. Black's attorneys presented evidence of the difficulties Mr. Black experienced upon his return to the United States, this evidence would also have effected my deliberations. It is my opinion that such information would have contributed to an understanding of Mr. Black's post-Vietnam life and character. If this information about Mr. Black had been known to the jury, I would have shared my personal knowledge about Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and its effects on servicemen with the rest of the jury. I would have made it a significant issue in our deliberations because it was of substantial significance to me then and is still of substantial significance to me today.

11. In retrospect, I feel that because I was deprived of this information as a juror I was not able to judge Mr. Black clearly and with equanimity. In short, I was deprived of what I consider the most important evidence in regard to my decision about the appropriate sentence in Mr. Black's case.

I swear that the foregoing is true to the best of my knowledge.

This 29 year old male state that this was his first VA Hospital Houston admission. He said that he came to the hospital this time because he felt that he needed help. He said that he had a nervous breakdown in November, 1975 but did not receive any treatments at all. He came to Houston because his wife was here who he was allegedly estranged from and tried to talk her into some reconciliation. They did make some grounds in that direction. The patient stated that he, for some reason, all of a sudden goes into a rage and at many times had been very abusive to his wife. Most recently he went into the house, got his gun and came out and killed the dog. At that time his wife threatened to leave him permanently unless he received some help. He came to the hospital for help. On admission to the unit the patient's physical examination was in the realm of normal variation. His laboratory work and x-rays did not reveal any significant abnormalities. He was placed on medication consisting of Haldol 1 mg. four times a day, RB with C once a day. All of physical complaints were taken care of by the necessary services and treated empirically. On 6-29-76 the Haldol was discontinued and he was started on Loxapine 10 mg. twice a day. After a period of time he decided that he didn't need any kind of medication only vitamin E. His medication was discontinued. He did well without any medication. He went on pass one time and came back very late. This was an authorized absence. The patient did not create any disturbance and was placed in activities and participated sparingly, and superficially. It was at this time that the patient asked for a discharge. It was felt that he had reached maximum benefits and was given a regular discharge. At the time of release from the hospital the patient was considered to be competent.

ROBERT BLACK

Robert is a 36 year old white male who presently lives in Bryan, Texas with his wife, Sandra. Sandy was the informant for this social history, arriving early and stating that she had had a terrible week. Sandy was able to get off work from the Happy Face Nursery, appearing anxious to give the social history information and wanting to start from the very beginning in order to tell me everything.

Bob comes to Greenleaf at this time upon recommendation of Dr. Davis. After talking with Barbara Griswald, Sandy's counselor, Sandy encouraged Bob to make an appointment with Dr. Davis which he reluctantly did. Mrs. Black states that they had been separated three months before Bob moved back into the house in May, 1983. She believes that Bob has been seeing another woman for the past 6 or 8 months and that the ending of this relationship led to Bob's recent hospitalization. During the last couple of months, Sandy has seen Bob become more and more obsessed with their son's boy scout troop to the point of becoming overexpended. Sandy said Bob has begun talking about Vietnam flashbacks since the middle of May, after visiting a pilot whom he had been with in Vietnam. Mrs. Black believes that her husband's emotional problems began shortly after his discharge from the Marine Corp in 1973 and after serving in Vietnam as a flyer. Bob was unemployed for five years after the Marine Corp and Sandy describes him as being jealous, and unable to handle stress. In the past, he has shot two of her cats, threatened her horses, and struck her and their son on several occasions. An angry outburst, in which he killed their dog, led to Mr. Black's first hospitalization in Veteran's Hospital in 1976. He was at the VA hospital for four months, left AWOL, and was supposedly diagnosed as paranoid schizophrenic. Sandy says that Bob was on a "religious kick" for about one year before this hospitalization. This obsession with religion was similar to his most recent obsession with the Boy Scouts. Sandy also described Bob's behavior as being unable to sleep at night, prowling around the house, and sleeping with a gun under his head.

Bob is the oldest of two children born to his parents. He has one brother Gary, age 28, who lives in Houston and whom Sandy describes as not being very close. Mr. Black's parents live in Houston and Sandy describes their relationship as a dictatorship - Bob's father dominating his mother. Sandy reports that Bob sees his father as "God" and that he sometimes appears scared of him. She describes the relationship between Bob and his mother as loving and respectful. Sandy said that Bob will not talk about his childhood but neighbors have reported to her that he was beaten when he was young. According to Sandy, Bob's father has been seeing a psychiatrist for about seven years but she was not aware of his emotional problems and she had recently been given this information. Bob's father had been a POW in WWII.

Mr. Black has a high school diploma and flunked out of TAMU after 2½ years as a chemical engineer. Bob's work history has been very erratic and one of Sandy's complaints is his lack of motivation towards work. During the last five years he has held four jobs and the most recent one has been at the post office for one year. At this time they are holding his job until he is released from the hospital. Bob joined the Marine Corp in 1967, excelled as a flyer and was a Captain in Vietnam from 1970 - 1971. After the war, the Marine Corp no longer needed Bob and Sandy said the transition to civilian life was a difficult adjustment for him. Mrs. Black reports that Bob never talked about his experiences in the war until after they ^{saw} kept seeing the movie "The Deer Hunter." He then told her a story about seeing one of his best buddies being killed, describing some of the horrors of war and then asking her never to bring it up again.

Bob's leisure time activities include Boy Scouts, hunting, and riding his motorcycle. He was raised as a Baptist but he never attended church. There seems to be no legal problems at this time.

Sandy married Bob in December, 1967 after dating off and on for two years. She described him at this time as easy going and occasionally jealous. Their marital relationship was described as "off and on" with their first separation and divorce in approximately 1975-1976. They were remarried shortly after the divorce had been finalized. The couple have been separated and reunited on several occasions, usually after Sandy asks Bob to leave because of his lack of financial support and unusual, violent behavior. Sandy describes Bob has having several extramarital affairs throughout their relationship. She says he sees himself as a "stud" and much of the time she does not desire him sexually. They have one son, Gary Wayne, (13) who was born while Bob was in the service. Sandy is worried about Gary having seen Bob's violent behavior on many occasions. Recently Bob has placed a lot of pressure on Gary with Boy Scouts and she has observed their son's grade improving when Bob is not living with them. Sandy describes Bob as being physically violent with Gary on two occasions, once when he was 3 years old and once about one year ago when he beat him with a switch.

Mr. Black's emotional problems appear to have started or to have been triggered shortly after his Vietnam experience. He and his wife both seem interested in counseling and hope that Bob's hospitalization will help him live a more stable, productive life.

Mrs. Black seemed relieved at the opportunity to talk with someone and made reference to her being "crazy" for living with Bob through all of his unusual behavior. On a couple of occasions, she talked about Bob's parents blaming her for his problems. Her hope is that he will receive medication and counseling and that they will be able to lead a more "normal" life.

DISCHARGE SUMMARY

ADMITTING DIAGNOSIS: Depression

FINAL DIAGNOSIS: Major Affective Disorder, Atypical Depression

SECONDARY DIAGNOSIS: Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome

This is a 36 yr. old white male with a recent history of depressive symptoms and explosive behavior, he was admitted for evaluation of these symptoms. A prior history of possible Paranoid Schizophrenia was obtained.

LAB & X-RAY
Pt. was admitted to 2nd Floor where he underwent DST (showing suppression), computerized tomography of the head which was negative, EEG (normal), UA, Thyroid Function Profile, CBC, and SMA-24 all of which were in normal limits. A Fasting Blood Glucose of 120 was noted and felt to be due to the fact that the pt. had coffee in the middle of the night prior to the test being drawn.

Course & Treatment: The history was obtained regarding the father's illness and evidence that he had been treated successfully with Elavil was obtained. The pt. was started on Triavil which in the initial dosages were too sedating. This was decreased to 2 tabs, 10 tablets, one tab. BID, and 3 tabs. at h.s., this he seemed to tolerate and symptoms were improved. He was discharged and to be followed-up on an out-patient basis.

He was admitted at this time for full psychological and medical evaluation.

Past Medical History: Besides the episode of psychosis treated in Houston is non-contributory.

Family History: Pt.'s father has been treated with an unknown drug for symptoms of Depression.

Past Personal History: Indicates that he started having depressive symptoms while he was a Naval Flight Officer in Viet Nam.

PROGRESS RECORD

Date	Record progress of case, complications, change in diagnosis, condition on discharge, instructions to patient
	Results of the MMPI
	Individuals who obtain similar profiles often display depression, restlessness and agitation to situational stress. This reaction is characteristic of a long-standing cyclic pattern of poor behavioral control which is followed by exaggerated feelings of guilt. This distress is often relieved by after environmental manipulation or the beginnings of another period of acting out. Robert has a tendency to engage in self-defeating and self-punitive behavior. Low frustration tolerance and a tendency toward addictive states may be present. He may show good insight and verbalize a desire to change. However, recurrence of acting-out and subsequent exaggerated guilt are common. Similar individuals are often seen as character disorders, though psychotic states may occur.
	Robert may be described as somewhat over-sensitive and rigid. He may feel pressed by social and vocational aspects of his life. Guiltiness, distrust, brooding and resentment may be characteristic. Indirect expression of hostility is likely. He may also be seen as overly self-critical and rigid. He tends to worry over minor problems and often evidences anxiety, tension and indecision. He may be ineffective in some areas of his life. Rationalization and intellectualization are common defense mechanisms. There may be some qualities in this patient's thinking which represent an original or unconventional orientation or a rigid tendency.

OFFICE NOTE:

Robert Black

6/15/83

Mr. Black is a 36 year old married white male who vaguely describes symptoms of feeling pressured, angry, and impulsive, these feelings dating back at least over the last number of months. He has had job related difficulties with the Post Office and is planning to quit that job soon, to return to his original work as an electrician. He had a prior episode of illness about seven years ago at which time he was hospitalized at the VA Hospital in Houston, receiving a diagnosis of Paranoid Schizophrenia. His father has an unknown type of mental disorder and is on unknown medications.

He is the oldest of two children, completed two years of college prior to entering the Marine Corp as an enlisted man who then progressed up the ranks to become a Naval Flight Officer. He spent a tour of duty in Vietnam and has worked as both electrician and postman since his discharge.

In listening to his symptoms it is unclear whether he is having recurrent schizophrenia or some other form of psychiatric disturbance. I have asked him to come in the hospital for full evaluation and he will arrange to do so within the next day.

OFFICE NOTE:

Robert Black

Mr. Black was discharged from the Hospital about three weeks ago following evaluation of an apparent depressive illness and a possible characterological problem. Dexamethasone suppression test results are not available to me at this time, but the feeling was that he had a partial biological condition. A family history (father) of positive response to Triavil was obtained, so we started him on Triavil 2-10 tablets up to 5 per day. He now reports he was taking one of these in the morning and four at night and doing well, but he decided to increase to 5 at bedtime which has left him feeling slightly sleepy. Overall he feels significantly improved. His wife reports there's been a gradual decrease in his explosive behavior. We decided to alter his medication somewhat; change to Triavil 4-50 tabs 1 h.s. with an additional 2-10 tab once or twice a day, if needed. I'll see him again in several weeks at which time we'll start marital therapy if the biological side is settled down.

Met with Robert and Sandra today. Things have been going well up until last week when he started working a double shift and became exceedingly exhausted, resulting in exacerbation of his irritability and moodiness. We discussed his obsessive need to work and how he cuts himself off from other things that are good for him. Generally I think things are going well and his current medication dosage is appropriate. I visited with both of them for one hour. Made plans to see them again in one month.

I met with Bob and Sandra again. Generally things are going well from a depression standpoint. There's been no major disruption since he was last seen. However, we did begin to get into the areas of their marital problems such as his chauvinistic attitudes and demands and their typical ability to live in the same house and not have much communication. He indicated he wanted to start talking some about their marital infidelity problems on the next visit. Made no change in medications.

Several weeks ago I received a phone call from Robert's wife stating that Robert had another flare-up. He had been working on his motorcycle and the work was going unsuccessfully and he erupted, breaking out several windows in the house, threatening people around him, etc. He refused to see me at that time, but things seemed to settle down. Since that time, he has been restless, irritable and continues to show signs of explosive personality disorder. I met with him and his wife and we decided to go ahead and try Lithium carbonate in addition to the Triavil he currently takes. We also began talking about his continual need to try to escape bad situations that he sees as being overcontrolling or evidence of his bad performance. They are to start the Lithium and check back with me next week and I will be seeing both of them again in the next several weeks.

Bob's wife came in stating that Bob had gotten angry with her and was planning to leave once again. He apparently is still taking the Lithium, but has not yet gotten a blood count level. She also brought the son with Bob's understanding and knowledge, and I sat with both of them trying to explain a little bit about what was going on. I asked her to get Bob to get the Lithium level and they will be calling me for results.

Bob's Lithium level was .35 so we increased his dosage to 2 1/2 tablets a day. He asked to see me alone briefly during this session and in doing so, told me he really didn't know if he wanted to stay married anymore. I brought Sandra back in and we discussed his frustrations and it seemed that the discussion of them allowed him a chance to feel a bit more comfortable. The plan is to continue medications as ordered, to get another Lithium level, and to see me again as a couple in several weeks

11-16-83

Bob has done relatively well with no major upswings or downswings since last seen. Current Lithium level .67. We focused some on Sandra today in pointing out to her that she fails to take adequate time for herself, tending to do all the chores around the house and then complaining because others don't help out. We then talked some about her weight and how her obesity may be a mechanism of being angry at her husband. We also talked about Weight Watchers as a possible alternative. Continue same medications. See again after the first of the year.

OFFICE NOTE:

Bob asked to come in by himself without Sandra. He has had another rough couple of weeks apparently stimulated by the fact that he stopped taking his medications around Christmas time and was also assigned to a job that he did not like. The job business got straightened out today and he says he feels better although continuing evidence of depression is seen. I asked him to restart Lithium along with the Triavil in lower dosages. We spent much of the time reflecting on his Vietnam experience and the sadness that that generated. See him again several weeks.

BMD, JR:dab

OFFICE NOTE:

2/1/84

Bob brought Sandra with me. The last month has gone very well and nobody can really figure out why. Current medication level includes 1 lithium tablet in the morning and two in the evening accompanied by Triavil 2/10 tablets prn for anxiety. They are working towards selling their home and getting a new piece of land. Generally no major conflicts so I shortened their session. See again in 6 weeks.

ROBERT BLACK

OFFICE NOTES: 3/8/84

Bob came alone as Sandra got tied up with business. He reports that things are generally going well. He and his son are planning to take an extensive motorcycle vacation and Sandra may be joining them later. We were talking some about his dissatisfaction with his current life and how he was viewing that almost as a schizophrenic situation when, in fact, it sounds more like the typical fantasy life that most people have. He seemed relieved in the discussion of this. Also reporting some recent difficulty with gastric intolerance to lithium. I asked him to rearrange the scheduling and drop back to two tablets a day if need be. Check back in one month.

PSYCHOLOGICAL EVALUATION

Name: Bob Black
DOB: 1/31/47
Age: 38

Referred by: Jim Litner
Date of Testing: August 2, 1985
Date of Report: August 16, 1985

PROCEDURES

Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scale - Revised
Bender Motor Gestalt Test

Clinical Interview

Bob Black was referred for psychological evaluation by Jim Litner, his parents' private attorney, for purposes of diagnosis. The testing took place at the Brazos County Jail in Bryan, Texas. He was cooperative and friendly and stayed on task.

EVALUATION

Bob's level of intellectual functioning was in the superior range overall with a clear preference for performance tasks over verbal ones. No indication of organic dysfunction was noted.

Bob demonstrated, through his testing, instability in a number of areas including interpersonal relationships, mood and self-image. Interpersonal relationships for Bob tend to be rather intense, situation specific, and unstable. Mood can change within a matter of moments and can shift from extremely dysphoric to elated. On numerous occasions this shift was noted throughout the assessment period. Behaviorally Bob is likely to be rather impulsive and unpredictable. Potential self-damaging behavior is always possible. Periodic angry outbursts and difficulty modulating emotion are characteristic. Bob also is having and has had difficulty coming to grips with his self-identity.

These characteristics, although indicated to a lesser degree before Vietnam, were probably exacerbated due to the stressors of combat. Bob reported recurrent and intrusive thoughts about combat, increased detachment and estrangement from others over time, as well as sleep disturbances, survival guilt and memory impairment. All of these symptoms are associated with a Post-Traumatic Stress disorder. Bob describes himself, after Vietnam, as silent, antisocial, tempermental, isolated, hurt and guilt ridden.

Years after Bob came back from Vietnam, he states that he "relives the war daily." At times, Bob himself, became the target of all his pent up rage as manifested in several reported suicide attempts. At other times, his wife Sandra became the target. She was seen by Bob as the cause of all his rage. In his mind she became the enemy. He reported that she never accepted him after Vietnam, was available and was so much weaker then he. Bob stated "the more she clung to me, it seemed as if she was trying to destroy me." Because of difficulty adjusting to civilian life in combination with his apparent personality disorder, Bob appears to have had a series of vocational and personal failures. The more he failed the more intense his disturbance and the more his rage spilled over at his wife. This intense emotionality and instability is still very much in evidence in Bob at this time.

DIAGNOSIS:

AXIS I - 309.81 - Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder
delayed and chronic

AXIS II - 301.83 - Borderline Personality Disorder with depressive and anxious features.

AXIS III - Deferred

AXIS IV - Severity of Psychosocial Stressors: Extreme

The Honorable Governor Ann W. Richards
Attention: General Counsel Office
P.O. Box 12428, Capitol Station
Austin, Texas 78711

Dear Governor Richards:

I am a professor of psychology at Cleveland State University, and a practicing clinical psychologist with eighteen years experience studying, diagnosing and treating American military veterans who, a result of their service in combat, suffer a debilitating psychological disorder known as Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. I have particularly extensive experience working with veterans of the Vietnam war. Rather than detail my extensive credentials in this area here, I enclose my curriculum vitae for your consideration. I write because, after becoming familiar with the facts surrounding the presently scheduled execution of Robert V. Black, Jr., I have reached the conclusion that the execution of Mr. Black would amount to a profound miscarriage of justice.

I first came into contact with Mr. Black in January of this year, when attorney Raoul Schonemann contacted me and requested that I evaluate Mr. Black to determine whether Mr. Black suffered from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, and if so, whether the disorder played a role in the murder of Mr. Black's wife. In addition to conducting a one-on-one examination of Mr. Black, I have also reviewed both the record of Mr. Black's trial and an exhaustive compilation of records documenting Mr. Black's life before, during and after his combat service in Vietnam.

Before I address Mr. Black's situation in particular, allow me briefly to explain what Post Traumatic Stress Disorder is. According to the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (Third Edition -- Revised 1983) ("DSM-III-R"), "the essential feature of this disorder is the development of characteristic symptoms following a psychologically distressing event that is outside the range of usual human experience." According to the DSM-III-R, military combat is a typical trauma that has been known to induce PTSD. Symptoms of the disorder are then manifested in a number of ways, including recurrent and intrusive recollections of the event or recurrent distressing dreams in which the event is reexperienced; persistent avoidance of stimuli associated with the event; diminished responsiveness to the external world, or "psychic numbing," resulting in feelings of detachment or estrangement from other people, lack of interest in previously enjoyed activities, or inability to feel emotions of any type, particularly those associated with intimacy and tenderness; increased arousal, such as difficulty falling asleep, recurrent nightmares, hypervigilance, and exaggerated startled response; and changes in levels of aggression, irritability, and unpredictable explosions of aggressive behavior.

From my evaluation of Mr. Black, there can be no question that he suffers from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. His symptoms are similar to those often experienced by combat veterans exposed to the stressors of war. From 1973 to 1985, the year that Mrs. Black was killed, Mr. Black experienced a progressive pattern of deterioration in his level of adaptive behavior and the quality of his psychological functioning. He was unable to secure or maintain employment. More importantly, he was unable to sustain and maintain meaningful interpersonal intimate relationships, in particular with his family and his wife. Related to this, he experienced patterns of increasing irritability, outbursts of anger, violence, depression and suicidal ideation. Throughout all of these difficulties, Mr. Black experienced an inability to come to terms with and understand the impact of his experiences as an F-4 Phantom pilot in Vietnam. Daily he has to deal with painful and intrusive memories of combat episodes, as well as survivor guilt regarding the death of close comrades and innocent civilians who Mr. Black fears were killed during his attacks on targets of opportunity.

Mr. Black's well-documented psychiatric problems should not be allowed to obscure Mr. Black's exemplary military service. His level of achievement on proficiency tests was consistently superior, most frequently ranked at 4.9 out of a possible 5. He attained the rank of captain and capably performed the difficult tasks of radio intercept operator on an F-4 Phantom jet. In addition to being awarded numerous medals for his courageous service, Mr. Black also has received the air medal with nine awards. Each award is given after twenty-five hours of combat flight. Thus, Mr. Black flew a minimum of 225 hours of combat flight. His flight records confirm that his service as a combat pilot was, to say the least, extensive. His military service record reflects a man who was able to perform at a high level of adaptive functioning at that time. This is consistent too with Mr. Black's numerous accomplishments as a young man before he joined the service: Eagle Scout, diligent high school student, and school representative to the highly prestigious American Legion Boys State program.

In light of his exemplary life history before and during his Vietnam service, Mr. Black's post-Vietnam life can only be explained through an understanding of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. The role of PTSD in the events leading to the murder of Mrs. Black is somewhat unique, but nonetheless real. Upon returning from Vietnam, Mr. Black experienced difficulty establishing and maintaining close interpersonal relationships, even with his wife. Repeatedly throughout the decade following Vietnam, Mr. Black came face to face with this inability, and his reaction was always to leave the The relationship. Irrationally, his wife became the focus of his feelings of frustration and disappointment with his life; she came to represent the enemy. At the same time, however, he loved his wife. He desperately wanted to be as close as he could be with her and have a reunion and have a happy family. This cycle of ambivalence explains the Blacks' repeated pattern of separations and reunions, even to the point where they were once divorced and remarried.

Mr. Black's disorder must also be understood in the context when Colonel John Wayne Hearne entered the picture. Colonel Hearne first met Mr. Black through an advertisement which Hearne placed in the Soldier of Fortune magazine. He represented himself as a Marine Corps colonel and helicopter gun-ship pilot who specialized in weapons. Mr. Black was drawn to Colonel Hearne because of his military orientation. He needed to relate to someone in authority, someone in a chain of command. Because Hearne represented himself as a Colonel in the Marine Corps, Mr. Black believed they could trust in each other due to their common experience in the Marine Corps, as well as in Vietnam. Colonel Hearne came to represent to Mr. Black a commanding officer, and without Hearne to direct the course of events, Mr. Black would have continued with his cycle of ambivalence, alternating between love and hate, but without the resolve it would take the murder the woman upon whom he was so dependant.

To go through with Mr. Black's execution would be to ignore the sacrifices which Mr. Black made for his country, and the suffering which resulted. Sandra Kay Black's death was a tragedy; it did not need to happen. But her death does not wipe out everything that Mr. Black has been and has done for his country, or the role of his psychological disorder in the events which led to her death. The Brazos County District Attorney, Bill Turner, has consistently evidenced a lack of understanding of what it meant to fight in Vietnam. When I testified at the evidentiary hearing in March of this year, Mr. Turner made much of the fact that a major stressor faced by Mr. Black was the fact that he is haunted by the prospect that he may have killed innocent civilians when he was under orders to seek out targets of opportunity. I have interviewed over eight thousand soldiers, hundreds of them F-4 Phantom pilots, and Mr. Black's guilt and pain arising from the slaughter of innocent civilians has routinely appeared in the statements of these thousands of American soldiers. The jungle warfare which occurred in Vietnam, the inability to distinguish friend from foe, the rejection of the war by the general American populace and the resulting lack of support at home, all made the Vietnam war experience unique and especially destructive for the veterans returning.

I continue to believe, based upon my experience with these eight thousand combat veterans, that Mr. Black minimized the traumatic experiences he faced in Vietnam, and he in fact cannot remember his most stressful experiences, because his mind has blocked them from his conscious memory. That doesn't mean that the subconscious memories of those events are not constantly pressing upon his consciousness and influencing his behavior. But for this psychic pain and the influence of Colonel Hearne, who offered an aura of the structure and authority which Mr. Black craved, Mr. Black would not be on death row.

To execute Mr. Black would constitute a retributive reaction which would advance no purpose. It is a simplistic response which the State of Texas should recognize as inhumane and unjustified, and a disservice to those men who have sacrificed their lives and their well being for their country.
