Cuomo re-elected in landslide win

Voter turnout at record low level

New York

(AP) Gov. Mario Cuomo soared to an impressive re-election victory Tuesday over Republican challenger Andrew O'Rourke, setting himself up for a possible 1988 presidential race.

With 98 percent of 14,680 districts reporting, Cuomo had 2,678,229 votes or 65 percent and O'Rourke had 1,334,950 votes or 32 percent. Nassau County District Attorney Denis Dillon, the candidate of the anti-abortion Right to Life Party, had 133,526 votes or 3 percent.

Only about half of the state's eight million voters went to the polls — a record low turnout. They went strong for incumbents, re-electing all statewide candidates and nearly every other state and federal office-holder.

The returns indicated Cuomo was headed to a record victory for a New York governor.

"The pressure goes on him to make up his mind what future course he'll take," said Robert Straus, former Democratic national chairman, of Cuomo's re-election win.

"I think this victory is evidence of a new feeling, a new spirit that says 'In this state of course there's more to do. We know we can do it,'" the governor told cheering supporters in New York City.

However, Cuomo's victory came with some lack of enthusiasm, though, as the voter turnout was an apparent record low of less than 55 percent of the state's 8 million registered voters.

The previous low was in 1974, the year former Gov. Hugh Carey was elected, and the turnout was 63.1 percent.

The defeat marked the first time the O'Rourke will retain his position as county executive. He gave no concrete indication of any future political plans.

Also on the New York ballot for governor was Lenora Fulani of the tiny New Alliance Party. No vote totals were available for her.

In the race for attorney general, Democrat incumbent Robert Abrams defeated Republican challenger Peter King. With 41 percent of the vote in, Abrams was leading King 66 to 34 percent.

State Comptroller Edward Regan also held his position Tuesday, as he defeated Democrat Herman Badillo. With 41 percent of the vote in, Regan led Badillo 56 to 44 percent.

Students make big showing at polls

By Dean Chang
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Doubling national figures, more than 40 percent of the over 4,000 registered student voters at SUNYA showed up at local polls Tuesday, according to Student Association President Paco Duarte.

Approximately 730 students voted at the four uptown polling places, with the highest turnout at State Quad, which drew 292 student voters.

Exact figures for Alumni Quad and off campus were not available, but Duarte estimated the figures at about 170 and 800, respectively.

Weather

The first signs of winter may be here. We should see some rain, and possibly some sleet or snow today, turning to scattered showers by tonight. Highs in the mid 40s and lows in the high 20s. Skies should clear late Thursday with highs in the low 40s. Rain may return on Saturday.

There were few surprises at the uptown polling places, with Gov. Mario Cuomo leading a near Democratic sweep of the 10 political races on the ballot.

Cuomo tallied 563 votes to Republican challenger Andrew O'Rourke's 140 votes in the gubernatorial race.

Only two Republican candidates were chosen by uptown SUNYA students, as U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato narrowly defeated Democratic candidate Mark Green, 348 to 333 votes, and State Comptroller Edward Regan beat Democratic candidate Herman Badillo, 313 to 274 votes.

In other races, state Sen. Howard Nolan soundly defeated Republican candidate Peter Crummey, 368 to 198 votes; state Assemblyman Richard Conners outdistanced Republican candidate Domenic Robertella 362 to 160 votes; U.S. Congressman Samuel Stratton overwhelmed James Callahan of the Socialist Working Party, 416 to 25 votes; and Attorney General Robert Abrams defeated Republican candidate Peter King, 415 to 172 votes.

SUNYA voters also supported Supreme Court Justice candidate F. Warren Travers, a Democrat, over Republican John Clyne, 336 votes to 177. Democrat Joseph Harris was supported for County Court judge over Victor Caponera, 328 votes to 199, and in the race for coroner, students chose Democrats John Marra and James Cavanaugh over Republican candidate Samuel Ouimet.

Figures for Proposition One, the Environmental Quality Bond Act, were only available at the Gym where the bond was favored 102 votes to 12.

Phil Botwinik, chair of SA's Student Action Committee, which was active in recruiting student voters, said he was pleased by Tuesday's turnout.

"The national average was only 18 percent," said Botwinik. "For students to take the time to research the candidates, know when and where to vote, and then get out there and actually take part in the voting process is really something."

Arson probed in two Sunday Fine Arts fires

By Colleen Deslaurier

Two suspicious fires which caused considerable damage to the Fine Arts building late Sunday afternoon and which may have been deliberately set are being currently investigated by University officials.

One fire began in a storage room attached to room 302 of the Fine Arts building, said Thomas Rinaldi, Fire Safety Technician for SUNYA's Department of Environmental Health and Safety.

A second fire also began in sub-basement room 57 about the time of the first blaze, Rinaldi said.

One Albany Fire Department official said the department "cannot comment as to the origin or cause of the fire" because the University, as state property, is conducting its own investigation.

However, Battalion Chief Mike Romano told the Times Union that "We believe we have an arson fire. There's no doubt in my mind."

Romano said he suspected arson because the fires started in two separate places on the floors of each room.

Four firefighters were injured responding to the 5:08 PM alarm, and one required hospital care, Rinaldi said.

"It appears to be that someone has set the fire," said Rinaldi. However, he added that "the fire can't be considered to be

Ethnic rioting flares

Karachi, Pakistan

(AP) Rioters burned buses and shops Monday and rival ethnic gangs battled with guns and homemade bombs, witnesses said, as the death toll from four days of violence in Karachi and Hyderabad rose to at least 38.

Hospital officials, who did not want to be identified, said 18 people were killed in rioting and clashes with security forces in Karachi on Sunday. Another 18 people were killed Friday and Saturday.

Officials said at least 300 people have been injured in the four days of rioting sparked by a gunbattle between the Muhajir and Pathan ethnic groups.

Hundreds of soldiers were sent to Karachi today to reinforce army units deployed during the weekend. Troops manned machine gun positions and erected barbed-wire barricades at key intersections and patrols moved through the city.

Belgium recalls envoy

Brussels, Belgium

(AP) Belgium officials said Monday it was recalling its ambassador in Damascus for consultations, becoming the first Common Market nation to take such action since Britain broke relations with Syria.

Patrick van Houte, a spokesman in the Foreign Affairs Ministry, said Ambassador Andre Verbiest would return to Brussels by Thursday to consult with government officials on a possible joint Common Market response to British charges of Syrian involvement in terrorism.

Britain broke diplomatic relations with Damascus on Oct. 24, saying it had proof Syria was involved in an attempt in April to blow up an Israeli jetliner at Heathrow Airport in London. The United States and Canada recalled their ambassadors in Damascus, but did not sever relations.

Verbiest is to return to Damascus about one week after his arrival in Belgium, van Houte said.

Abortion funds upheld

Washington, D.C.

(AP) States may not cut off their funding of private groups because the groups offer, among other things, abortions or abortion counseling, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

By a 5-3 vote, the court upheld rulings that Arizona's funding policy violated the constitutional rights of Planned Parenthood organizations in the state.

Although Monday's decision was not accompanied by any written opinions, it sets a national precedent. Without waiting to conduct oral arguments in the case, the court affirmed a ruling that such state funding cut-offs interfere with constitutionally protected abortion rights.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White and Antonin Scalia voted to hear arguments in the case, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

Booster plan doubted

Orlando, Fl.

(AP) Several NASA engineers have questioned a plan to add 100 bolts to a crucial joint in space shuttle booster rockets, saying it carries a "potential for disaster," a newspaper reported.

Adding the bolts to the nozzle joint to prevent hot gases from leaking would introduce 100 new locations for dangerous leaks, The Orlando Sentinel said in a copyright story Sunday, quoting National Aeronautics and Space Administration documents.

The shuttle Challenger exploded Jan. 28 after O-ring gaskets sealing a field joint between solid fuel segments leaked hot gases, igniting the huge external fuel tank.

The nozzle joint is near the base of the boosters, between the rocket exhaust nozzle and the solid fuel segments.

The State

Nuke plant loaded

Scriba

(AP) Fuel loading began at the Nine Mile Point 2 nuclear power plant, putting the country's most expensive nuclear plant on the road to production of energy, possibly by year's end.

The assembly was delayed 17 hours because of a problem with placing key neutron-producing devices in the main reactor vessel, according to Frank Deusel, a spokesman for the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., the principal owner of the plant.

The devices, known as neutron sources, were to be fitted into a grid mechanically, by an underwater spring-load device. However, technicians were unable to compress the spring enough with tools, and frogmen were called in Saturday night to dive into 65 feet of water in the core and press the spring down themselves.

Neutron sources, long rods about 10-15 feet long, provide small particles of matter known as neutrons that collide with the uranium fuel, splitting the atoms apart and creating heat. The water surrounding the devices and the fuel acts as a shield to keep radioactivity from spreading.

Verdict questioned

Smyrna

(AP) A jury in Chenango County, which acquitted evicted farmer Harold Ingraham of resisting arrest and deadlocked on an accompanying trespass charge, was swayed by their emotions, said the assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case.

"Underlying the whole thing was an element of sentimentality," said James Cushman, who suggested jurors may have felt sorry for the Ingraham family, which was evicted from its 220-acre farm in July after refusing to pay back taxes.

The six-member jury found Ingraham not guilty of resisting arrest late Saturday and deadlocked 3-to-3 as they tried to decide whether the farmer was guilty of trespassing after refusing for almost two days to leave the property at the request of deputies.

Two of Ingraham's children had pointed shotguns at sheriff's deputies during the tense standoff at the Smyrna farm.

No bones about it

(AP) Police made no bones about arresting a city shopkeeper for displaying a nattily-dressed human skeleton in his window. Flint said the tuxedo-clad skeleton was used by David B. Ornstein as a Halloween attraction at his downtown antique store. Flint called it "humorous, but a violation of the (State Public Health) law."

"Human remains are to be cremated, or buried, or otherwise disposed of," he said. He said the bones were real.

However, Ornstein, 39, predicted Thursday's charge won't get very far. He said the skeleton had been in his shop window for three years without complaint.

FAFs now in Spanish

Spanish-language '86-87 Financial Aid Forms — 22,000 in all — are being released this week as the first non-English version of the New York State Student Payment Application (SPA).

"From now on, the application will also be printed in Spanish on an annual basis," said Dr. Dolores E. Cross, President of the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation (NYSHESC). "By making it available in Spanish, we hope to encourage more Hispanic students, parents, and prospective students to explore the various state financial aid opportunities and apply for appropriate assistance."

Directories in limbo

Student directories have been printed, but are awaiting delivery to the Campus Center, according to Don Bielecki, director of the Campus Center.

Originally all scheduled to arrive by late October, only a few desk copies are now available at the information desk.

Irwin Weinstein, building supervisor of the Campus Center, said, "We're surprised by the lateness also," adding that he believes that one possible cause of the delay is an extension of deadline for off-campus students to hand in their phone number and address.

O'Leary hits top 100

University President Vincent O'Leary was recently named one of the top 100 most effective U.S. college presidents by an Exxon Educational Foundation study.

During O'Leary's tenure, both the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and the School of Public Health Services have been founded, and the external funding for research and training has increased 500 percent.

"You're always pleased when someone says you've done a good job," O'Leary said, adding that he also credits the school for the distinction he received. "I think it really reflects a good deal on the institution," he said.

O'Leary said, "If something good occurs at an institution, you look to the leadership to credit it," explaining that people tend to associate what's happening with the university with the president.

D'Amato, Bond Act score big wins

Democrats gain control of Senate

New York (AP) Republican Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato was re-elected to a second term Tuesday, easily surviving a tough-talking but underfunded challenge by Democrat Mark Green.

But D'Amato's victory was overshadowed nationally as the Democrats broke the Republicans' six-year hold on the Senate.

Majority Leader Bob Dole said Tuesday control of the Senate will pass into Democratic hands — it's only a question of whether the Democratic majority will be 53 or 55.

Meanwhile Democrat Sam Stratton has won a 15th term in Washington representing New York's 23rd Congressional District which includes Albany.

James Joseph Callahan of the Socialist Workers Party offered Stratton token opposition on Tuesday's ballot.

The House appears certain to stay in Democratic hands as well, meaning President Reagan will serve the last two years of his term with a predominantly Democratic Congress. As House Speaker Tip O'Neill said, if there was ever such a thing as a

Voters say 'yes' to toxic clean-up

New Yorkers have given their permission to create the largest state pool of money in the nation for the clean-up of hazardous waste sites as the Environmental Quality Bond Act was approved Tuesday.

Incomplete returns showed 67 percent of the vote was in favor of the bond act, while 33 percent was against it.

While exact figures were not available for most of SUNYA's uptown polling places, students supported the bond by a 10-to-1 margin at the Gym.

The overwhelming student approval could be attributed to efforts by the New York Public Interest Research Group. According to Joe Sammons, volunteer coordinator of the Get Out the Bond Act campaign for NYPIRG, the group concentrated its efforts on passing the bond.

"We got lots of students really interested in the environment," said Sammons, who also serves on the state board of NYPIRG. "They committed their time and their votes."

"This victory for the bond act shows how relatively little student work can go a long way."

The spending measure permits the State to borrow $1.45 billion, with $1.2 billion going to clean up about 500 hazardous waste sites over the next 13 years.

It also allocates $250 million dollars for the State to purchase wilderness areas in the Adirondack and Catskill mountains, along with other park land and historical sites.

The remaining $100 million will be used as no-interest loans to municipalities to assist in the closure of non-hazardous municipal landfills.

O'Leary call-in show aired by WCDB

The anti-grouper law, new dormitories, and University Auxiliary Services were just a few of the topics addressed during WCDB-91FM's call-in show with University President Vincent O'Leary Monday night.

years. The most recent show aired last fall.

Discussing the grouper law, O'Leary said Albany officials may have issued summonses to those students recently charged with being in violation of the law because they created a nuisance.

When asked why the city made the move when students seem to be "less rowdy" downtown this year, O'Leary said "that is not the case in specific cases in which they move against. That's my understanding of it."

It is specifically in those instances where there is a substantial nuisance that the city is likely to move," O'Leary said. "We've been trying to get that clarified. I have some reason to think that is the case."

But O'Leary later said that he was not sure if that was the case with the students recently issued summonses.

WCDB News Editor Julie McNamara asked O'Leary about what she called the University's apparent "hands-off" attitude toward the issue.

"The University can't do much about the law," O'Leary said, adding that one reason for the new Fuller Road dorms, scheduled to open in 1987, is "to ease this whole grouper [law] thing."

SUNY's graduate-initiative proposal, which would bring $13 million to SUNYA during the next five years, for graduate program funding will benefit undergraduates as well as graduates, O'Leary said, because additional graduate faculty would also teach undergraduates.

O'Leary said the student/faculty ratio would be reduced from 18-1 to 16-1 under the proposal.

Student arrested for attack on frat

By Lisa Rizzolo

A Colonial Quad resident was arrested and charged with second degree assault after allegedly taking part in an attack against Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) members early Thursday morning.

Stephen M. Oliver, 17, was released on $3,500 bail at Albany Police Court pending a later hearing.

According to Assistant Director of Public Safety John Henighan, three of the fraternity members taking part in pledging activities by the soccer field were injured.

"There were various injuries including a broken nose, a badly injured jaw, and facial lacerations," he said.

"The assaulters may have used something other than their hands. There were no bats, clubs, or knives, however," said Henighan.

Oliver, who resides in Hamilton Hall, was also charged with possession of false identification. Investigations are currently underway to find others involved in the assault, Henighan said.

The incident began when "words were passed between Oliver and some members of TKE," said Henighan. Oliver then left the scene and returned with some friends, and "some TKE guys got beat up," Henighan said.

One TKE member left the scene to call Public Safety, who responded to the call.

According to Henighan, "five or six TKE fraternity members and ten to 12 people of the second faction were involved in the incident."

There is no indication that the alleged assaulters were specifically after the TKE fraternity, said Henighan.

TKE President Kevin Allen refused to comment on the incident. "Some guys from National [TKE Chapter] called me and told me not to speak [about it]," he said.

Speculating on why the assault occurred, Henighan said that "There may have been drinking by at least one individual. It [the assault] was certainly not a planned activity."

According to Director of Campus Life Jim Doellefeld, "There are inherent risks with any group being in an isolated area at night. There is nothing [legally] wrong with it. I haven't heard any reports that TKE was violating anti-hazing regulations."

Local voters keep Democrats in office

By Jennifer McCormick
EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

Local Democrats, led by state Sen. Howard Nolan's solid defeat of Republican Peter Crummey, scored major victories at the polls Tuesday to continue Albany's Democratic tradition.

The only Republicans to win on the local ballot were incumbents State Comptroller Edward Regan and U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato. With 79 percent of the vote in,

Nolan defeated Crummey 67 to 33 percent, a 2-to-1 margin.

Nolan said his priorities this term would be to "continue to work hard for the people of Albany County and [to] try to keep this country's economic development moving."

Nolan said that if Democrats gain control of the Senate, he would "probably be chair of the codes committee," one of the Senate's more powerful committees.

A student voting rights bill would also be one of Nolan's priorities, he said. "I supported it very strongly in the last session. I think we can pass it in a Democratic senate. It's the Republicans that held it up last session."

Crummey could not be reached for comment after the polls closed.

With 79 percent of the vote reported, Assemblyman Richard Conners looked to be on his way to securing the largest victory in the 1986 local elections, receiving 72 percent of the vote. Republican opponent Domenic Robortella received 28 percent of the vote.

Conners said he will continue to support student aid and added that the amount of New York state financial aid has tripled during his time in office. Referring to the state constitution's guarantee of a free education, Conners said, "Education in this country is one thing that has a bulge on other countries."

Conners said he is also concerned about drug-related issues and approves of recently passed drug legislation, but added that the laws "have to be enforced." Conners said he is also interested in providing long-term care for the elderly.

Robortella was unavailable for comment.

In a close race for state Supreme Court justice, 52 percent percent of the 83 percent of votes reported went to Democratic incumbent F. Warren Travers, with opponent John Clyne winning 48 percent of the vote.

Clyne is a Democrat who ran on the Republican line after failing to receive his party's nomination.

When asked if he ran an old-fashioned campaign, "Travers replied, 'You betcha!' He described the campaign as 'just a tremendous effort — it's the American way,' and said he received 'a lot of hard work from a lot of supporters.'"

In conceding the race, Clyne said, "I wish [Travers] well. At least the class of 1953 from Albany Law School has their first JSC [Justice of the Supreme Court]."

Botwinik said a direct correlation existed between where polls were located and voter turnout. Figures at the Thruway House are consistently lower than State Quad because the Thruway House is "inherently more difficult for students to get to," he said.

State Quad residents are the only on-campus students who actually vote on their quad. Other on-campus residents have to leave their quads to vote.

If Duarte's estimation of 1,700 student voters is correct, totals will be three times as much as last year's student figures.

Things didn't proceed so smoothly at Alumni Quad, however, where residents had to go to one of three downtown polling places. Several students who thought they were registered found out differently Tuesday.

"I was registered with a person from NYPIRG and apparently someone never handed my card in," said Renee Fass, a junior on Alumni Quad. "They always let on that students should become active politically."

"For something this important they should get their files and their organization straightened out first."

According to Margaret Hart, chair of election inspectors for the polling place at 646 State St., approximately 15 people came and could not vote because of processing errors.

arson until a motive is established, and a possible apprehension of a person."

The University is currently conducting a "three-prong investigation" headed by Rinaldi in conjunction with the Department of Public Safety and the Albany Fire Department, said Rinaldi.

Heavy damage was done to the third-floor classroom and much of the third floor, said Rinaldi, adding that there was also smoke and water damage on the first and second floors.

Some University records were destroyed in the sub-basement room, which also suffered minor smoke and water damage, Rinaldi said.

Two graduate students were almost trapped in the building during the fire, Rinaldi said. "They literally had to crawl out of the building," he said, adding that although the students were "shaken and scared," they suffered no injuries.

Albany Fire Department Battalion 2 responded to the call. In addition, three engine companies, two ladder companies, and one squad company arrived on the scene, said Rinaldi.

A complete evaluation of damages hasn't been conducted yet. "Until it's all said and done, we won't be able to tell how much it's going to cost to refurbish the building," Rinaldi said.

"Many people don't realize how serious [the fire] is considering how very little combustible material was in the storage room, said Rinaldi. "It's a very serious matter."

Rinaldi said that the department will "keep investigation flowing."

An Art department member, who asked not to be identified, said that people had been working all night trying to repair the damage. □

Reagan revolution — "it's over."

With 98 percent of the precincts in D'Amato's race reporting, he led Green by 2,537,436 votes to 1,669,616, a 41 percent margin. It was the largest margin by a Republican senatorial candidate in the modern history of the state.

"Let me serve notice that we've only just begun," D'Amato told cheering supporters as he declared victory at 10 p.m., an hour after the polls closed.

D'Amato said his victory marked "a new coalition of the middle class."

Green was narrowly leading in heavily Democratic New York City, but D'Amato was trouncing the challenger in the more conservative suburbs and upstate counties. □

Two Albany charities adopted by Telethon '87

By Colleen Cross

Organizers of Telethon '87 have decided upon the Mont Pleasant Boys Club and the Drakeland Daycare Center as their recipient charities for the coming year.

Each year, Telethon raises money for local children's charities through a year-long series of fundraising events, culminating in a 24-hour student-run telethon in the spring.

Telethon '87 co-chairs Maraya Gallo and Sandra Lehrman said that 66 percent of funds raised will go to the boys club, with remaining 34 percent going to the daycare center.

Last year, Telethon '86 donated $16,000 to the Child Cancer Care and Spina Bifida programs at Albany Medical Center and the Parsons Child and Family Center. "This year we are hoping to donate over $20,000," said Lehrman.

The Mont Pleasant Boys Club runs afterschool and evening programs for boys and girls living in the Arbor Hill area.

"Our major need was to remodel the bathroom and the kitchen. Any money left over may go towards equipment," said Director Bruce Levy.

The kitchen is used to teach cooking classes, and because of its condition, the club cannot accept any food donations, according to Gallo.

"Bathrooms and [the] kitchen have been on tap for remodeling since 1973," said Levy, adding that "[They] definitely need [remodeling] by now."

The boys club is mostly a recreational facility providing a "home away from home" for children who deal with child abuse and drug abuse in their families, said

Levy.

Levy is also a 1984 SUNYA graduate who was a student Telethon staffer for three years.

Drakeland Daycare officials say they plan to use their donation for construction of a state mandated playground at the center's new Second Street location.

Serving 45 children, the center is currently located in the Metropolitan Baptist Church and will be moving into a larger facility capable of serving up to 75 children upon its completion.

"The money could not have come at a better time. Children need this service," said Executive Director Janice Parker.

"Daycare is overlooked," said Parker, because "federal and state governments do not provide enough support. We need agencies like [Telethon] to help."

The theme for Telethon '87 is "Growing Up, Growing Strong, Growing Together," which Lehrman said "describes both the charities and our staff."

Selection of the recipients is a "very hard and lengthy process," said Gallo. Telethon staff members visit each candidate organization in order to get an overview of its services and its basis for need.

When tours are completed, Telethon staff members meet to decide upon the recipients. "We take into consideration the organization's budget and our own personal feelings," said Gallo.

According to Levy, the boys club had been denied as a recipient last year. "We totally appreciate [Telethon's donation]," he added.

Other events planned by Telethon '87 are a dance marathon scheduled for Nov. 7 and 8, and Rock-and-Roll Warfare Dec. 15. Telethon sold candygrams and is continuing to sell balloons in the Campus Center to raise additional funds.

This weekend's Dance Marathon, co-chaired by Kim Caporal and Tanya Wilcox, will run from 8 PM Friday to 8 PM Saturday and has a 'safari' theme. An Air Band Contest will kick off the dance on Friday night. "The air band contest is a party for the entire University," said Gallo.

"We're encouraging everybody to go," said Caporal.

"Daycare is overlooked. . . Federal and state governments do not provide enough support. We need agencies like [Telethon] to help."

— Janice Parker

The dance marathon will feature musical sets from different eras and prizes will be awarded throughout the 24-hour period. "Rock Around the Clock" will be played at the passing of each hour.

"In the early years of Telethon the dance marathon was one of the biggest money raisers," said Gallo. "Entering would be 150 to 200 couples. As recently as four years ago, over 100 couples participated, but last year only 20 couples participated. This year's goal is to have at least 50 couples entered," she said.

Several fraternities and sororities are helping out this year by sending couples. Sponsor sheets are available at the Campus Center information desk or in the quad offices, said Gallo.

Students wishing to get involved with Telethon '87 can attend a general interest meeting to be scheduled for November or get in touch with either Gallo or Lehrman through Student Association. □

Frat sponsors balloon launch

About 5,000 balloons were set aloft behind the campus center Saturday as part of a nationwide simultaneous balloon launch to support the Arthritis Foundation.

Organized by Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity's Community Service Chairman Aaron Fritzhand, the event raised $250 for the foundation, according to TEP President Andrew Leibhafer.

Similar balloon launches were held simultaneously at various points throughout the country, also to raise money for the Arthritis Foundation.

SUNYA was chosen as a launch site because it was a central location for local high schools whose Key Clubs helped organize the event, said Fritzhand.

Though organizers "expected a few more people from the University to be there," Leibhafer said that "the school was very co-operative" in helping with the posters and banners.

About 100 people were present at the 3 p.m. launch, said Fritzhand.

Originally an SA-sponsored event, "about a month ago," Leibhafer said, "SA decided not to go ahead with [the event] and we decided to take it on ourselves."

Podium 'witch burning' recalls women's struggle

By James O'Sullivan
CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

A Halloween day "witch burning" by members of SUNYA's Feminist Alliance drew a crowd of over 80 students, but also drew angry shouts of "Start the fire" and sexual slurs from some who watched at the Campus Center fountain.

About six women started chanting "Burn the witch, burn the witch" outside the Campus Center shortly after noon Friday while banging sticks on the ground. Then, pulling a woman along with them, they set the wood in a circle and put the "witch" in the center of the "fire." After silently displaying various placards with slogans on them for about ten minutes, the women dispersed.

According to Feminist Alliance co-chair Leslie Williams, the "street theatre" demonstration was planned at the weekly Alliance meeting Thursday night. "Halloween naturally brings up images of witches and we started a discussion of witches and witch trials," she said.

The women at the event were surrounded by a silent crowd, but several hecklers cursed at the demonstrators calling them "sluts," "bitches," and "lesbians," among other slurs.

"It was a lot of anger. From where we stood you could really feel it," said Williams. "It reminds me of how much there is to be done. We were not doing a radical thing, it was an educational event."

Historically it is known that hundreds, possibly thousands, of women were killed for witchcraft in late Medieval Europe from about 1300 to 1700. "Those centuries were a time of switching over from traditional healing to the patriarchal or Church healing," said Williams, explaining that women were seen at the time as a threat to the new "scientific" medicine.

Women served as healers and midwives for communities for centuries before, noted co-chair Betty-Ann Sanders. She added that what little data from the period is available indicates that most accused women were financially independent, divorced or widowed, and therefore on the fringes of the traditional male society.

"Any woman who stepped out of line had this threat hanging over her head," said Williams. Added Sanders, "It was a systematic extermination of women who they could not quote control unquote."

Speaking of the hecklers at the event, Williams said, "I felt that I had crossed some line, [but] I didn't know what line is some behavioral taboo." "The modern equivalent of calling someone a witch is to call them a lesbian because it's intended to discredit, to discriminate, and to keep women in line," said Sanders.

Williams said she believes most people missed the point of the event. "People didn't get it. You have to make the connection for them...Our hope was that people would see that and let the image sink in."

"There is no real time for discussion, for focusing attention on this holocaust, so we thought Halloween was an appropriate time to do this," added Williams. □

Frankenstein falters at Proctor's

The American Shakespeare Repertory brought Victor Frankenstein's theories to trial last Thursday at Proctor's Theatre for an appropriate Halloween eve performance of Frankenstein.

Dennis Sheridan

Victor Frankenstein had a theory. Every being, he thought, seeks to balance its proportions of life force and substance. The power that sparks life in bodily elements is the same for all creatures. He believed the spark of life could be isolated, artificially manufactured and introduced into a body. And the balance sought by the newly created being would be superior to the average human. Evil would cease to exist through the manipulation of life.

Directing the performance as well as playing two small parts was the ASR's co-founder Janet Farrow. Co-founder Douglas Overtoom played the lead as Dr. Victor Frankenstein.

The action of Frankenstein takes place in two cities, Geneva and Ingolstadt. Geneva is the location of the house of Frankenstein, where Victor's father, Baron Frankenstein (Paul Rubin), and fiancée, Elizabeth Beaufort (Carol Dearman) reside. Henry Clerval (John Viscardi), the family physician, makes frequent appearances.

Far away in Ingolstadt is the residence of the young Doctor Frankenstein, who, because of an obsession with his theories, left the university he was attending to pursue his experiments in his home laboratory. Living with him is an Amsterdam libertine, Liza (Janet Farrow), who groans perpetually of Victor's lack of attention to her desires. Her street friend and later Victor's man servant, is a very likable, very harmless mute (John Stang).

As Victor's visions approach fulfillment, he finds need for a variety of fresh organs with which to equip his creation. The task is allotted to a local street thief (Gregory Formley), who provides comic relief in the first act by showing up with a mail sack filled with bloody, stringy organs. Victor is later seen stepping on them and leaving them inadvertently about the stage. Most of these organs are obviously useless to the Dr.'s work, but certainly serve to momentarily relax the audience with their humorous presence.

The evil of the drama begins to surface when the thief kills Liza for her heart, and the flaw in the doctor's character appears plainly after the monster comes to life.

There are a variety of shortcomings in the play, perhaps the most serious being the script. Much of the dialogue is tiresome and unnecessary. The plot seems secondary to something more abstract happening on stage.

The ASR proclaims itself as offering "alternative interpretations of standard text," and draws from a philosophic premise to explore diverse possibilities in a work and its characters. It seems, however, that in an attempt to fulfill this approach, writer Anthony Urgo slips in every weary interpretation of the novel and captures none of its dilemmas in the process.

The theme of Victor as "The Modern Prometheus" is severely diluted and appears only briefly in a few convoluted soliloquies. The script seems to contain such a sparsity of pertinence that the play seldom picks up any sort of rhythm.

Overtoom is excellent, however, as the distracted Dr. Frankenstein. His voice is steady and clear, and his actions on stage are clean and professional. His performance captures the obsessiveness and sincerity of a man completely overcome with a passion to create life out of the lifeless and simultaneously keeps a noble, almost classical air of the character's noble upbringing. His movements about the laboratory, hands stained pink from his bloody business, disallow most distractions between himself and his audience.

Excellent, too, is John Stang as the mute who happily mimes his way through the play, showing only true human emotions among a cast of characters who are all obsessed with one thing or another.

The drama takes place on a unit set which allows for quick, smooth changes of locations between the 2 houses and a few outdoor scenes. The scenery, however, is at best unremarkable. The back drop, a collage of dark bare trees painted unconvincingly on a transparent fabric, leaves a little much for the imagination to piece together.

The props are functional, but an avant-garde Benjamin Moore clearly appears to have been responsible for the paint job, and the contrast from props to backdrops is unpleasant.

The "eerie" organ music was only mildly effective. Organ crescendos rarely matched a climax in dialogue and quite often the taped music ended before the scene closed.

Kathe Berl, makeup and costume consultant, deserves recognition for an above average job on costume design.

ASR's Frankenstein does present diversity of ideas, and Anthony Urgo's mastery of the subject is evident. However, the translation of his thoughts to the stage does not entertain as much as it seems to work itself out as it goes along. The monster's coming to life scene is anticlimatic — I suppose the audience envisions the classic, overall, greenish, thin monster (with electrodes) coming to life in a flash of electricity. Instead a bloke in chains who looks like Peter Frampton suddenly starts coming forth.

The climatic final scene, where alter egos Victor and the monster (now looking like the Incredible Hulk in mid-transformation) meet face to face, is a montage of dead bodies, primal screams, noisy special effects and stifled laughter from the audience.

The substance is there, somewhere. Where is the spark of life? □

Alley Cat survives

The Alley Cat
by Yves Beauchemin
Henry Holt and Company, Inc.
450 pages, $17.95

The Alley Cat, a million-selling novel by Canadian author Yves Beauchemin, is a rich collection of the comic and the catastrophic, the fateful and the farcical.

Jim Chevalier

Set in the city of Montreal and providing a wealth of characters, the action centers around Florent Boissoneault, a would-be restaurateur, and his wife Elise, and upon their life's dream: opening their own restaurant. Their struggles to succeed against what seem insurmountable difficulties weave a common thread throughout the book; one which must surely strike a chord of understanding and familiar sympathy in the heart of each reader.

With the aid of his wife, a famous French chef, an incredibly wealthy aunt living in Key West; an unofficially adopted child alcoholic, Monsieur Emile, and the boy's alley cat Breakfast, Florent wages an epic war against the forces formed against him.

The Alley Cat is more than a tale of a man who has been cheated in business and his attempts to regain what he rightfully owns. On a deeper level, it is the story of a

... On a deeper level, it is the story of a man's striving to fulfill a dream against overwhelming odds; of good fighting against a tangled web of bureaucracy and corruption...

Florent, as the story begins, is able to open his long-dreamed of restaurant, but only through the financial assistance of an aged, wealthy patron, Egon Ratablavasky. It soon becomes apparent that this "God-send" is from quite a few feet below heaven, as he attempts to take ownership of the thriving establishment in order to steal the fruits of Florent's labor for his own profit.

After being cheated out of his business, Florent's fight has only begun; as he must take on a retinue of modern evils in the form of corrupt bureaucrats and police, dishonest businessmen, and deceitful journalists, led by the demonic Ratablavasky.

man's striving to fulfill a dream against overwhelming odds; of good fighting against a tangled web of bureaucracy and corruption; of hope in the face of seemingly inevitable defeat.

Beauchemin's humor is not that of Twain, but that of the darkly intertwined humor and horror of Dickens. His prose is elegant and descriptive, with a subtle foreign feel which the translation into English (the book was originally written in French) brilliantly captures. The Alley Cat is a novel of hope against despair in which we may each, in some small way, recognize a part of our own lives and ourselves. □

Jackson an entertaining Eo

Angelica Huston as the Supreme Leader in Captain Eo.

The cover of the Captain Eo press material pretty much sums up the $25million plus, 17-minute spectacular: "Captain Eo—a 3-D Musical Motion Picture Space Adventure at Disneyland and Walt Disney World Epcot Center...and nowhere else in the Universe!"

Ian Spelling

Eo boasts the best in the entertainment business. George Lucas, of Star Wars fame executive produced, Francis Coppola (The Godfather, Peggy Sue Got Married) directed, and the next Howard Hughes, Michael Jackson, plays the Captain.

Captain Eo offers absolutely nothing original, but nevertheless represents the fastest 17 minutes ever to unspool on a screen. A mix of Star Wars, Beat It and that old Disney magic, Captain Eo is really an expanded version of the Rick Springfield video, Bop 'Til You Drop.

The story consists of the Captain arriving on a planet strewn with the burnt out carcasses of countless spacecraft. Eo and his crew of assorted Muppet-like creatures are soon confronted with the evil forces of the planet's Supreme Leader (Oscar Winner Angelica Huston). Using his powers of music and dance, Eo transforms the wicked leader into a beautiful woman and the bleak planet into a colorful utopia.

Per minute, Captain Eo is the most expensive film ever made. Were Eo an hour and a half long, its cost would be an astronomical 150 million. But this is not a money-making venture. Eo cannot be shown in ordinary theaters. In addition to the state of the art 70 millimeter film stock and the 3-D, lasers shoot about the theater and steam billows out from under the screen.

There is no acting in Captain Eo. Michael Jackson speaks in his usual Mickey Mouse — on helium voice. But Jackson's not known for speaking. In the singing and dancing categories, Jackson is without competition. Huston brings a real nastiness to the Supreme Leader, coming off much like Margaret Hamilton's wicked witch in The Wizard of Oz. Huston's problem isn't acting, rather it's her looks. At the conclusion, she's supposed to represent all that is beautiful, but Elizabeth Taylor she's not.

Eo features awesome special effects. Technically it's perfect. One sequence, in which several of the creatures become musical instruments, simply boggles the mind. The 3-D works well without straining the eyes. When Huston reaches into the audience with her sharp talons, people actually scream. For amusement a little orange-haired space monkey with butterfly wings named Fuzzball floats on and off the screen.

Those who get a chance to visit Disneyland or Epcot Center should definitely catch Captain Eo. But wait a year or two before heading out to either Anaheim or Orlando. Lines for this terrific little film have been so long that the wait can be three hours. It's well worth the wait.

ASP rating:

Michael Jackson as the Captain with Fuzzball in Captain Eo.

The bureaucracy of Acid Dreams

As the latest wave of anti-drug fury sweeps the nation, a book chronicling the history of LSD — and how the very government that's leading the charge against drugs today used to feed drugs to its citizens — is flying off the shelves and filling up campus lecture halls.

Andrew Breslau

Acid Dreams: the CIA, LSD and the Sixties Rebellion recounts in unprecedented fashion the little-told story of the U.S. intelligence community's longstanding and intimate relationship with the powerful hallucinogen.

To tell the story authors Martin A. Lee and Bruce Shlain obtained some 20,000 pages of once-classified government documents, and conducted interviews with many leading figures of the sixties counterculture.

Of course, when one thinks of LSD one thinks of Haight-Ashbury, the Summer of Love, the Grateful Dead and Timothy Leary — the Pied Piper of the flower children — who touted acid as a benevolent mind expander, a chemical for inducing religious experiences.

But there were others who had very different ideas about what to do with LSD.

"Fifteen years before the hippies started dropping acid," Lee notes, "the CIA and the Army were utilizing the same drug not to expand the mind but to control it. This is the central irony of LSD — that it's been used both as a weapon and a sacrament."

Beginning in the forties under the auspices of programs with such Bond-like appellations as "MK-ULTRA" and "Operation ARTICHOKE," the CIA sought to develop a "speech-inducing drug for use in interrogations." After working their way through cocaine, peyote, heroin, uppers and downers, the spymasters even tried a marijuana extract called "TD" before dismissing it as too unpredictable for the espionage trade.

... Major Gen. William Creasy, chief officer of the U.S. Chemical Corps, wanted to dose thousands of American subway riders with "madness gas" (an aerosol version of LSD) just to see what would happen...

Then, in the early fifties, the CIA took notice of Dr. Albert Hoffman's chemical problem child: LSD — 25.

Lee and Shlain trace the byzantine path of the drug's development through people like Major Gen. William Creasy, chief officer of the U.S. Chemical Corps, who wanted to dose thousands of American subway riders with "madness gas" (an aerosol version of LSD) just to see what would happen.

Unsubstantiated charges that the Army actually slipped LSD to unknowing citizens — causing a few of them to develop mental illness — still abound. There's also the hapless experiments of Dr. Jolly West, a former CIA contract employee, who once killed an adult elephant with a massive shot of the drug. Dr. Paul Hoch advanced the science by lobotomizing mental patients before, during and after administering LSD to them. Hoch went on to become New York's commissioner of mental hygiene.

Possibly the most intriguing character is Capt. Alfred N. "Cappy" Hubbard, a crewcut, pistol-packing LSD Johnny of President Kennedy's girlfriends turned on with Timothy Leary, and hint the president himself may have taken the acid test.

And now, as the president and Congress call for a holy war against substance abuse, the book also reminds us that such pious declarations almost always have hidden political undercurrents.

"The Nicaraguan contras are heavily involved in cocaine trafficking, and the U.S. — backed Afghan rebels are major players in the poppy trade," Lee charges. "If Reagan is really serious about dealing with the drug problem, he should stop supporting those groups who are bringing the drugs into the country."

Just as the CIA seems to have a persistent hand in Central America, Acid Dreams suggests it had a hand in the black marketeering of LSD in the late sixties and early seventies.

The authors focus on Ronald Stark, a paunchy man with a huge walrus moustache, both a CIA informant and master con artist. He spoke ten languages, and was as difficult to pin down as the drug he peddled.

In a four-year sojourn through the acid underground, Stark produced nearly 50 million hits of illicit LSD before colliding with the law in Italy in 1975. He was arrested, and charged with drug trafficking and armed banditry. But just as suddenly, he was released. Judge Giorgio Florida explained that "Stark belonged to the American secret service."

Appleseed.

Hubbard, an admirer of J. Edgar Hoover, was one of the most ardent and persuasive proselytizers of LSD's transcendent possibilities. During the fifties, he gave the drug to people from all walks of life, including Aldous Huxley and Vancouver's Catholic archbishop, who subsequently recommended the experience to his parishioners in a letter.

There's a "Who's Who" of unlikely trippers in Acid Dreams. Time, Inc. founders, Henry and Clare Booth Luce, Ethel Kennedy and Groucho Marx are among them. The authors disclose that one

EDITORIAL

Guest writer

During WCDB's live call-in show Monday night with University President Vincent O'Leary, a question was raised about the Albany Student Press.

We would like to thank President O'Leary for his kind words about our newspaper. We're glad he thinks the paper looks more professional now than it ever did before.

We also appreciate his interest, expressed half-jokingly during the show, in writing some of this paper's editorials, as the ASP's editorial stance frequently differs with O'Leary's beliefs. Unfortunately, setting editorial policy is a duty reserved for the Editor in Chief, who writes the editorials with some assistance from members of the ASP editorial board.

Since O'Leary is neither the Editor in Chief or a member of the editorial board, we won't be able to fulfill his wish.

But President O'Leary is still more than welcome to write for the paper. Just to the right of this editorial is the space for columns. On the opposite page is the space for letters.

Both sections are open to anyone — including President O'Leary. Just write a column, about 800 to 1,000 words, or a letter and drop it off at the ASP office (CC 329) with your name and phone number on it for verification purposes.

We're looking forward to hearing from you.

Modern witch

To be called a witch in medieval Europe was a fate that sometimes resulted in death. The luckier ones got to live, but were shunned and ostracized the rest of their lives.

The women who were accused of being witches weren't practicing black magic; they were simply women on the fringes of a male-dominated society. Although the name people use today to describe this type of woman has changed, it appears some people's attitudes haven't.

Several students made that quite clear Friday afternoon, choosing to demonstrate their lack of decency and intelligence by rudely interrupting a group of women from Feminist Alliance who were performing a mock witch-burning ritual.

They called the women sluts, bitches and lesbians, among other things, ironically demonstrating a modern-day version of "witchburning." They used those labels because the six or so demonstrators were perceived as "different" — outcasts because they dare to question male domination.

During medieval times, some women were called witches if they were financially independent or divorced or widowed, which would render them strange and unacceptable to the traditional male society.

Today's labelled lesbians and feminists also pose a threat to the same traditional male-dominated society. The women who were verbally harassed Friday were calling attention to historical oppression of their gender. While these women aren't threatened with death at a burning stake, they still face the shunning and the ostracization without due cause.

Being called a lesbian, as Friday's demonstrators were, shouldn't even have the same negative connotations that being a witch once had. A witch is supposed to be an evil woman who practices the devil's work. A lesbian is woman who has a sexual preference for other females, for political or other reasons. The two should hardly relate to each other.

But what's at issue isn't the names the hecklers found so easy to use — it's the intolerant attitude behind the name calling. People should have the right to say what they want in the manner they find appropriate, without fear of reprisal.

To permit anything less than that clearly demonstrates an attitude that's way behind the times.

What next for Mark Green?

In the world of politics, being the most qualified candidate does not always insure success. The old axiom, "Nice guys finish last," couldn't be more true when applied to political campaigns. Such is the case in this year's election for US Senate between Republican incumbent Alfonse D'Amato and Democrat Mark Green.

Michael Reisman

As I write this, the election has not taken place, but it is painfully evident that Mark Green will lose the election, despite running one of the most courageous political campaigns to be seen in recent years. Although grossly underfunded in the primary and in the general election, Mark Green has been able to give the vested interests of Alfonse D'Amato a run for their money. Most of us probably don't realize why it was so important that Mark win the election.

For the past 15 years, Mark Green has been a leading progressive spokesman for both fresh ideas and Democratic ideals. As head of Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, Mark led efforts to clean up toxic waste, deregulate and reduce airline fares, enforce occupational safety laws, and provide more than $500 million in loans to small businesses. It was Mark's lawsuit (Green v US Department of Commerce) that forced the public disclosure in 1980 of 1400 American companies that were cooperating with the Arab states' boycott of Israel. Mark has written a dozen books on business and government, including the best-selling book Who Runs Congress?, which established him as a national authority on how Congress works.

Today, Mark runs the Democracy Project in New York, a leading Democratic policy group. In 1984 he served as chief speechwriter in Senator Gary Hart's presidential campaign. And last year Governor Mario Cuomo appointed Mark to his Industrial Cooperation Council. Mario Cuomo said that Mark Green is "one of the best articulators of issues you've ever seen in a Senate race." Anyone who saw either of the Green-D'Amato debates could attest to the truth of this statement. D'Amato was clearly on the defensive as Green raised issues to which he could not respond.

According to The Nation magazine, "Next to Ralph Nader himself, Mark Green is probably the most industrious and successful public interest lawyer of his generation." Ralph Nader himself says Mark Green has already accomplished more than most US senators.

The foundation of Mark Green's campaign was his refusal to accept campaign contributions from political action committees, or PACs. Mark Green was the first statewide candidate to refuse all special interest political action committee money, because he wanted to show that the State and Senate are not for sale. Since the big interests had no claim on Mark Green, if he won, we would have won. A good deal of money was raised for his campaign by special events with celebrities like Warren Beatty, Paul Newman, and Crosby, Stills, and Nash.

Contrary to popular belief, Alfonse D'Amato does not represent the interests of New York. From 1981 to 1985, D'Amato received $500,000 in campaign contributions from Wall Street investment firms, while acting as chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on securities. The Wall Street Journal has called him "Wall Street's favorite senator."

Among D'Amato's biggest contributors (to the tune of $75,000) are New York landlords and real estate interests. One of his first steps on taking up his Senate duties was to propose a measure that prohibited federal housing assistance to communities with rent control.

In 1984 D'Amato told Public Citizen's Congress Watch that he supported a bill introduced by Senator Robert Kasten that would limit the liability of manufacturers of defective products.

D'Amato has also received substantial contributions from the gun lobby ($36,000) and defense contractors ($115,650), subsequently voting to weaken gun control and to strengthen the military buildup while allowing fraud to continue in Pentagon contracts.

In contrast to his image as a crime-fighter, in 1983, Alfonse D'Amato was the sole character witness of one Philip Basile, a Long Island nightclub and disco owner who was later convicted of fraud. After serving as a Long Island official, D'Amato testified that he didn't know that the Republican organization required employees to kick back 1 percent of their salaries. While speaking in favor of an improved judiciary, D'Amato voted to confirm Daniel Manion, a poorly qualified judicial appointee in Indiana.

The issues in this year's election were clear. D'Amato's voting record may seem muddled, but from the perspective of his narrow self-interest, D'Amato's strange voting habits make plenty of sense. His "interests" are not those of the people of New York; they are the interests of his campaign contributors.

The voters of New York had a chance yesterday to pass judgment on Al D'Amato's first term in the Senate. It clearly has not been in the best interests of the majority of New Yorkers for D'Amato to seek funding for Westway, the MX missile, chemical weapons, and the contras. It was not in the best interest of New Yorkers that he voted to recriminalize abortion, cut Social Security, put more guns on the streets, cut funds to clean up toxic dumps, cut funds for mass transit, and promote the Gramm-Rudman budget strategy, which took $4.6 billion out of New York State. Al D'Amato has pretended to be the man from Main Street. Instead, he has been the senator from Wall Street. We should continue to ask ourselves, "Has Al D'Amato 'delivered' and for whom has he 'delivered'?"

If you haven't heard of Mark Green until now, it is probably because of the lack of media attention he has received. Without a sizable campaign chest (due to his refusal to accept PAC money), he has been relegated to the sidelines in this year's election. However, his victory in the primary over John Dyson, despite overwhelming odds (Dyson had millions of dollars and the support of almost every major Democrat in the state) proves something: Despite the primacy of money and image in politics today, it is possible for an unknown, yet progressive candidate to run a successful campaign.

The fact that Alfonse D'Amato has been forced to hide behind a facade of flashy television commercials and watered-down press statements and has been unable to answer Mark Green's charges of dishonesty and corruption, shows that there is hope for the American electoral system, at least in New York. Old-style politicians like Al D'Amato are a dying breed. Mark Green's campaign has raised the consciousness of many people in New York. No longer will special interests dominate politics as they have in the past. D'Amato may have won the battle, but he certainly won't win the war. Watch out for Mark Green in the future. He'll be back. The next six years will not be as easy as the first six were, Al.

To the Editor:

It is obvious to me that the author of the article entitled "World Series Needs Warmth" only watched the first two games. Complain! Complain! Complain! You must remember not every game, World Series or not, can be a classic. How can you even talk of a boring series after the awesome comebacks of the Mets in the Playoffs, not to mention Game 6 of the series. I'm embarrassed to have read such an article.

Also, the author of the little snip of verbiage to the left entitled "Back to Earth" obviously doesn't believe in enthusiasm, excitement, or cutting classes for a cause. Pseudo-fans or not, everyone likes the fun. Stop preaching and start cheering! The Mets are clutch — you can say more but you can't say less. To those who appreciate the Mets and the game-What a win!

Risky business

To the Editor:

I have been out of college for roughly four months now and I often find myself recalling those days of academia. It is because I have friends in this city and friends in this university that I write. My letter shall be a post-script for me but a pre-script for those of you who may benefit from it. It goes something like this:

I graduated with a major in Business (marketing concentration) and a minor in Economics. I had not enough interest in both of these areas combined, to fill a very small thimble. Why on earth would anyone major in business at Albany? Firstly I shall discuss the many positives. One positive is the relative ease of program; the way in which the advisor of the program, John Levato, guides you through the program in a maternal manner. Another positive is the supposed benefits of this major when it comes time to job hunt in the future. A third positive is that all the exams are multiple choice so it is relatively easy to cheat if one is so inclined. The exams are frequently stolen, so cheating can be done beforehand. All emphasis on the process of learning for the sake of the individual has been eliminated; in this sense "fast-food" education can emerge. We all presently reap the benefits of a well constructed Whopper, do we not?

I now turn to the negatives. I can say straight out that accountants and finance majors have no choice but to do this major and forget about this letter if you can. But for the rest of us there lies no, I repeat no course which can be savored. In fact the only course I truly savored in four years was the symphony course given by Mr. Randall Ellis. Bravo. I hold the Sociology course given by Dr. Higgins a close second, but at the time lost faith, it having been a REQUIREMENT of the business major, like so many others.

I shudder to think of the multitudes of students who would avoid the business building and all its contents if they got a good taste of what future awaits them as business majors. Then there are the teachers who are speakers not "teach"-ers; they are paid to speak. They do that, in between their outside real, high-paying, time-consuming careers. The business profession needs to keep its hand off education, or forget the profession and start to educate. One or the other.

I can say in all honesty that if I had it all over to do again, I would do nothing the same. I would take courses in areas in which I was interested, do internships and take my REQUIREMENTS in classes that interested me. There is no market for a business major. There is a market for people not majors. It seems now that undergraduate work is to graduate work as high school was to undergraduate work not more than a few years ago. That is the key to education. This is a warm-up. A bull-pen. Anything can be taken now, and anything can be taken later, there are infinite possibilities.

Don't screw around in Accounting 211 (Lecture Stadium 7, no doubt) when it a) will never be necessary again, b) is a pain in the butt, c) is only being taken in the first place because it is a requirement.

Stop. Think. Do you want to be 110-20-1387 or Jonathan L. Seagull for the next four years? It is the Motor Vehicle Bureau augmented 1,000 times in terms of idiocy, and an outlandish display of misdirected authority.

All those things about the business school are true and cannot be denied. Actually they can and have been denied. But as that crazed pop star once said, "Would I lie to you?"

Reason for protest

To The Editor:

I was recently invited to be a guest speaker on campus by the Campus Crusade for Christ group. At the meeting on October 9 there were about 50 Jewish students who came to protest my presence there. The rabbis who organized this protest wanted to give the impression that all Jews are angry about the message of Jews for Jesus. This is far from the truth. The real reason why the rabbis organized such a protest is because there are so many Jews who are coming to believe in Jesus today. If the gospel were not having an impact on the lives of Jewish people today, then the rabbis and the Jewish groups like the one on your campus were just picking on us. But their presence there in protest is making a statement to the contrary.

The Campus Crusade for Christ group on campus is not just interested in reaching Jewish people. But following the teaching of Jesus they are interested in reaching all people, Jewish people are part of that universal commitment they have to the gospel.

As a Jew who has come to believe in Jesus, I am convinced that if there were more Christians in the world like the Campus Crusade for Christ people on campus, who love God and love the Jewish people, there would be more Jews like me, who believe in Jesus.

Spirited away

To The Editor:

On Saturday, October 18, Purple and Gold held this school's first homecoming parade. All clubs and student organizations were invited to participate.

In all, 22 groups took part in the event. Some covered cars with colorful banners, others had large groups of people marching, the fraternity EAM made a beautiful float (which they spent many hours working on) and the riding club even brought horses to campus. It was a great show of the school spirit which SUNYA supposedly lacks. And, each of these groups received publicity that could never be gotten in any other way.

There was one problem, however. The ASP, supposedly a student press which covers the events of this campus, printed neither a picture nor an article (not even one line) about the event. We carefully covered the following Tuesday and Friday issues of the ASP and were quite disappointed by this revelation. Perhaps there was some explanation, such as lack of space, but even this doesn't fully justify the lack of interest demonstrated by this paper.

Many students put much time and energy into the success of this event, and it is disgraceful that their efforts went unacknowledged.

— T.J. Krantz
— Pam Strauber

Editor's note: A photo of the homecoming parade with a caption ran on page 2 of the Tuesday, Oct. 21 issue of the ASP. We regret that we were unable to give more complete coverage.

GROWing up

To the Editor:

Do you get nervous in front of a group of people? If you're asked to help lead an activity do you suddenly freeze up because of some inane fear taking over that says, "But I've never done this before"? Do you want to become active in groups on campus but have trouble overcoming this fear? If you answered yes to any of the above questions then your chance to GROW has arrived.

We are writing this letter to let the students know about an important event happening on SUNYA campus the weekend of November 7-9. It is called GROW which stands for "Grass Roots Organization Workshops" and is being sponsored by SA (Student Association) and SASU (Student Association of State Universities). We'd just like to let everyone know how beneficial it would be to attend these workshops by explaining its objectives and sharing the opinions of other students who have already experienced GROW.

GROW was developed by and for students to give student organizers the tools to solve the problems they face. The GROW seminar is designed to help you:

- Overcome campus apathy
- Increase the membership, reputation, funding, and influence of your organization
- Build more effective coalitions
- Understand and use the real power of student run groups
- Develop strategies to win specific issue campaigns
- Gain hands on organizing experience, and
- Build leadership skills

According to Jane McAlevey, immediate past president of SASU, "The success of our state Student Association lies in our ability to act on issues. The organizing sessions have significantly helped to build our state Student Association by giving the necessary organizing skills to students on campus." Stephanie Peters, immediate past president of Ohio Student Association, said, "By far GROW was the most organized and productive training I've been in contact with. Even the most experienced student leader will learn something new and useful."

Remember, group leaders especially, it's November 7-9 on SUNYA's campus and the cost is a meager $10; pretty low for one of the best learning experiences you'll ever have a chance to take part in. So don't waste any time. There are only 40 spaces available on a first come first serve basis. Applications and information is available in the SA office (just past moneymatic). Don't miss your chance to GROW.

Know your laws

To the Editor:

I feel compelled to write to you because in my view your recent editorial on the Anti-Grouper Law is substantially inaccurate on several points relating to the University's role. For example, you indicate that the University could at least have reminded students that the law is still in effect. The Off-Campus Housing Office provided this information directly to students who came to the office for information and assistance; workshops held on each quad addressed this issue, along with others, for students thinking about moving off campus; the Off-Campus Awareness Day in the Campus Center on April 3, 1986 had a panel discussion on "Tenant/Landlord Obligations and the City Codes/Ordinances" with Mr. Alvaro of the Code Enforcement Bureau as a panel member; and the "Basic Guide to Living Off-Campus" includes a statement from Dr. Pogue calling attention to the Anti-Grouper Law. In fact, none of the articles I have seen quoted students as being unaware of the existence of the Anti-Grouper Law.

The fact is that on this and several other significant points the editorial is based on a lack of information. I would have been happy to provide the editorial staff with specific information regarding communication with students about the Anti-Grouper Law and University activities designed to reduce the housing shortage for students had they asked. Unfortunately, that did not occur and the community the ASP seeks to serve was short-changed by this lack of attention to checking the information on which the editorial was based.

ASP Sportswriters meeting to be held on Sunday evening Nov. 9 at 8:30 pm in the ASP newsroom. This is a very important meeting as we will assign winter sports, therefore everyone must attend. There will also be a guest speaker — a sportswriter from a local daily paper. New writers are welcome as well. Contact Kris at 442-5660 if you can not attend or for more information.

Happy Birthday Rachel!
I hope you have a great one. Don't forget we have to get together one of these days.

O'Leary

Speaking about SUNYA's proposed fieldhouse, O'Leary said a model should be available in about a month.

Groundbreaking would begin in April if the state legislature approves building funds. At this point, only planning funds have been approved.

O'Leary said his major reason for supporting construction of the fieldhouse was to give "students something to do other than [being] stuffed in dormitory rooms watching TV," during winter months.

"The weight room is a disgrace for a major university," he said, adding that the average high school provides better facilities.

When asked about SUNYA's withdrawal from the SUNY Athletic Conference and the possibility of having teams play in Division I, O'Leary said that a Division I sports program isn't one of his priorities.

He did say however, that withdrawing from the SUNYACs gave the University increased flexibility and "more fun" playing other teams.

"We're not going to stop playing SUNYAC teams, but I'd like to play NYU [New York University], a Division III school," O'Leary said.

O'Leary also fielded questions on topics such as teaching assistants who speak with foreign accents, the forthcoming
plus/minus grading system, SUNYA's Educational Opportunity Program, the effectiveness of Student Association, and financial aid.

After the show, O'Leary explained that by speaking on WCDB he is "trying to find ways to interact with students. The call-in show is a good opportunity to answer the questions that are on students' minds.

"A lot of people are curious about a lot of things," O'Leary said. "There are new students here all the time and you have to explain things to them.
Therefore, I don't mind people asking me these questions."

WCDB General Manager Chris Clark said O'Leary will do another call-in show in March.
He added that no "prank" questions were received, although there were no direct phone lines to O'Leary.

"Our phone lines have no delay," Clark said. "It would have been horrible if someone called in with a joke."

However, not all questions got through because of a limited amount of time, Clark said. No accurate measure of the number of listeners could be made.

"I'd guess 4,000 to 5,000 people were listening, but that might be a generous estimate," Clark said. □

Spirit of Black Solidarity Day is model for every minority group

By Roderick M. Williams
MINORITY AFFAIRS EDITOR

On Nov. 3, millions of blacks across America celebrated Black Solidarity Day. People acknowledged the day in a variety of ways.

Many chose to take leave of work and/or school to attend events such as parades, cultural expositions, and — on this campus — a series of day-long activities highlighted by a discussion of Afro-centricity by Dr. Manning Marable, a professor at Purdue University and a noted columnist. The activities were sponsored by the Albany State University Black Alliance (ASUBA) and included poetry reading, gospel music, and a soul food dinner on Dutch Quad.

Black Solidarity Day is a day we should examine and reflect on what we have done as individuals to help blacks both here and abroad. I hope that on this Black Solidarity Day each one of us has learned a little more about our culture, gained a sense of commitment to the plight of blacks all over, reflected on how far we've come as a people in this nation, and yet realize how far we still have to go.

The theme behind Black Solidarity is — and should be — echoed by all so-called minority groups. Solidarity must come from within individual groups so as to achieve a coalition-type solidarity.

A bit of solidarity was seen on campus prior to the activities of Nov. 3. Two parties were planned, on Friday Oct. 31, both directed at the black and Hispanic campus community.

One party was being planned by the Pan-Caribbean Association, Fuerza Latina, and ASUBA, and the other by a Omega Psi Phi fraternity. Representatives of the organizations met and prevented a potentially embarrassing situation which would have had them competing against one another on the weekend before Black Solidarity Day.

This campus has such few cultural and social events for minorities that it would be a shame to have two events in direct competition. I hope this show of unification can continue and lines of communication will stay open so as to have more joint functions without conflicts.

As the Albany Student Press' new minority affairs editor, I'd like to offer a general overview of this column and its purpose.

I'd like to solicit your help with this column because it is in fact your column. It's written for you and about you. We, as minority students, should use the paper as a means of bringing our issues and concerns to the attention of this campus.

A letter to the editor is another visible means of communication on an issue.

In addition, the ASP is seeking new reporters. It's very important that members of the minority community participate in the writing and editing of news stories, especially those articles relevant to minorities.

This column will appear regularly in Friday's edition of the ASP. In future columns, there will be listings of campus activities sponsored by various minority groups on campus.

Since I am black, my column will naturally slant toward black issues, but the position of minority affairs editor is such that I, through the reader participation, must inform other editors of minority concerns.

That is one reason why I recommend to those interested in writing for the ASP that they do so. If the diverse minority community of this school is to be best represented in the writing of accurate and fair articles, then a culturally diverse group of reporters is necessary.

All ideas and suggestions should be placed in my mailbox in the ASP office, CC 329.

Many public college presidents hit campaign trail against budget cuts

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE — Unbeknownst to each other, public college presidents — normally a decorous bunch of people — in a number of states last week resorted to "last ditch" barnstorming trips, splashy lobbying media events and postures of outright defiance to convince state legislators not to impose what the presidents say will be a ruinous new round of budget cuts.

Texas, Alaska, Idaho, Indiana, Wisconsin, Montana, Alabama, Utah, Iowa and Missouri, among other states, have recently — or are about to — cut the amount of money they give to their public colleges.

And their college administrators, claiming six years of federal budget cuts already have forced them to cut their operations to the bone, are warning that new state budget cuts will force them to take drastic measures.

They say they will have to close some academic departments, cut back on student service, hike tuitions and maybe even merge with other colleges.

"It's close [to squeezing blood out of a turnip]," said University of Alaska President Dr. Donald O'Dowd, whose school has had to slash spending by 35 percent over the last several months. "Alaska's state revenue has been cut in half the last eight months."

When Utah didn't collect as much in taxes as it had planned, it ordered all state agencies — including colleges — to slash their budgets. At Weber State, it meant firing 58 people, disbanding the men's wrestling and the women's golf teams, and dropping the economics degree program, among others.

Budget cuts left the University of Texas unable to make some promised payments to one of its research partners, and it is now losing faculty to better-paying schools, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said last week.

The Kansas Board of Regents last week announced it might soon start closing masters degree programs, while Alaska's O'Dowd reported "we'll probably have to cut academics. We can't continue to protect it any longer."

"This has not been the best of years," said Montana State President William Tietz, whose campus budget is $1.2 million less than it was last year at this time.

Meanwhile, some state college officials began fighting back with some unusual histrionics last week.

University of Wisconsin System President Kenneth Shaw tried to make the point by saying budget cuts that have forced state campuses to turn students away "make me cry."

The presidents of Idaho's four state-supported colleges went on a highly publicized "barnstorming tour" of six cities to plead their case for more funding.

"We were given a good hearing," said Idaho State President Richard Bowen. "The minds are more open" to college funding needs, he added.

Purdue and Indiana universities, rivals in virtually everything, have been jointly wining and dining legislators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner" to try to win more funding, said Purdue Vice President Dr. John Hicks.

The Faculty Senate at Utah State, meanwhile, voted flatly to refuse to join the administration's mandate effort to cut an extra six percent of this year's budget in order to absorb the state funding decline.

Northern Iowa's administrators were so upset by state budget news two weeks ago that they bought an ad protesting state education funding "stinginess" in the Des Moines Register newspaper.

"The governor believes the money spent on this ad would be better spent on student education," Dick Vohs, Gov. Terry Branstad's press secretary, replied angrily. The half page ad cost $2,050.

But few expect the state funding cuts to stop any time soon, if only because states in the energy and farm regions don't have more money to give to their colleges.

"Times are tough for the state. I wouldn't call this a decline in state funding, but a flattening," said Illinois State's Dr. Edward Hines, who tracks state funding of colleges.

"I do expect it to last well beyond five years, however. The economic future is not particularly bright or rosy for some farm state and those with oil or mineral related industries," Hines said. "They will experience problems again next year."

Counseling center provides a variety of helpful referrals

By Rochelle Katz
and Annette Perot

Middle Earth Counseling Center's many services include a wide range of referrals on anything from sexuality to substance abuse. Many students are already aware of this, but far fewer are actually familiar with some of these helpful referrals and what type of services they provide to students and other members of the community.

Middle Earth Roots

One common referral is Planned Parenthood, which provides routine gynecological exams and treatment, contraceptive prescriptions and supplies, pregnancy testing, venereal disease and cancer screening, and counseling. Planned Parenthood is located at 259 Lark Street in Albany, and serves the University community at the infirmary (Student Health Center) on Monday and Thursday evenings from 4:30 to 9 p.m. All services are confidential and special rates are available for college students. Appointments for either location of Planned Parenthood can be made by calling the Lark Street office at 434-2182 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Most people would agree that life can be a hectic, confusing place at times and students are definitely not exempt from this feeling. But many students might not be aware of the services provided by the University Counseling Center (UCC), which offers free individual and group counseling for SUNYA students. The counseling center is staffed by professional psychologists, graduate assistants, and graduate students involved in practicum, all of whom are trained to provide a variety of services related to personal and social concerns as well as vocational and educational counseling. UCC is located at the Student Health Center, room 214. The center is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and can be contacted at 442-5800.

If supportive group counseling for alcohol abuse is something you're interested in, meetings for Alcoholics Anonymous are held right on campus every Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5 p.m. in CC 357. Anyone requesting additional information about the meetings is encouraged to contact Christopher Mills at 458-7234.

Another common on-campus referral is GALA, a social and supportive organization dealing with homosexuality. GALA provides numerous services that are open to all members of the University community, including weekly meetings, guest speakers, referrals, social and educational events, and a housing-roommate exchange. Meetings are held every Tuesday evening at 8:30 p.m. in CC 375 when classes are in session. For more information call 442-5672 or stop by GALA's office in CC 333.

A very important concern for many college students is the issue of acquaintance rape. An excellent referral in the community for victims and friends of victims of acquaintance rape or sexual abuse is the Albany Rape Crisis Center. The center offers information, long and short term counseling, and crisis intervention for both males and females. The number for their 24-hour hotline is 445-7547. Rape Crisis is located in room 1100 at 112 State St. Albany, and their services are confidential. Also, for information about the services they offer, the office can be called at 447-7100, Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Those interested in further assistance regarding these or other referrals are encouraged to call Middle Earth at 442-5777.

Middle Earth can also provide information, ongoing and hotline counseling, and referrals. The office is located at 102 Schuyler on Dutch Quad and is open from noon to midnight from Sunday to Thursday and 24 hours on weekends. □

Albany swims to first and fourth place finishes

By Mike Brewster
ASSOCIATE SPORTS EDITOR

For the first time in over four years the Albany State mens swimmers staked a claim to some of the medals awarded in their own Great Danes Relays on Saturday as they finished in fourth place behind U.S. Coast Guard, the winners of the meet.

The women were even more successful as they won first place medals in four different relay events en route to a first place finish.

"I'm very pleased with both the men and women," said third year coach David Turnage. "The men took three second place medals, and those were the first medals we've gotten in four years in these relays," he added.

The three events the Danes took second in were the three hundred butterfly relay, the 800 free relay and the 200 freestyle relay.

In the three hundred three sophomores, Pete McElerny, Rich Van Brundt and Mike Jackson, carried the Danes. Van Brundt credited McElerny and Jackson as having good split times, while explaining that this event isn't his best.

"The butterfly is a weak stroke for me," said the Elmira native.

In the 200 freestyle it was tri-captain Fred Greenbaum, Mike Koutelos, McElerny, and Van Brundt doing the swimming while in the 800 it was McElerny, Jackson, Greenbaum, and Mark touchdown.

The half ended with Hofstra ahead 21-14.

The third quarter was uneventful. Hofstra did score on a 3 point field goal of 35 yards kicked by Kuzniar with 4:15 left in the period to put the Dutchmen up by ten, 24-14.

The Dutchmen soared to a 30-14 lead in the fourth quarter. Squeri's 41-yard pass to Jim Scully set up a first and 10 on the Albany 13. Squeri, who completed 9 of his 18 passes for 172 yards on the day, hit Moore for a 13-yard touchdown. For the first time in his four attempts, Kuzniar's kick was no good.

"I don't know what happened," said Albany's Ryder, who completed 8 of his 22 passes for Champagne, who participated. McElerny was the sole Albany State swimmer to appear in all three medal winning races.

The women were led by tri-captain Carol Pearl, freshmen Kriss Cusse and Caro Russo, Carol Elie, Jeanie Cuniff, Robin Roach and Amy Foster. All par-

153 yards. "I don't think they are that good of a team. We played bad. Once we started passing they dropped back so we couldn't throw the ball."

Hofstra defensive coordinator Harry Royle said that Ryder was the second best quarterback the Dutchmen have faced.

Albany gained 163 yards on the run and a high 153 in the air. Usually the Danes' wishbone is not as pass oriented.

"We were looking for the pass more," said Pedro, who led Albany with 97 yards rushing. "We needed the big score quick and Glenn was having a good day so we threw to him."

He added, "It just wasn't going our way."

Despite catching six passes for the most offensive yards on the participated in more than one of the first place medal winning relays.

Turnage added that the diving team also came in second in both the one meter and three meter diving events. Mike Vardi and Matt Montague were the divers.

The Danes next event is their dual meet match at Hartwick on November 18. Although the men finished higher than Hartwick in this event, Turnage expects Hartwick to be a little tougher in a dual meet format.

"You never know, anything can happen in a dual meet," said Turnage. □ team with 104, Carlin was upset with the passes he missed in the second half.

said Carlin. "I dropped a lot of passes. Pat put them right on the money. Maybe it was a lack of concentration on my part. I don't know what happened."

Ford felt his defense failed to stop Hofstra's backs on the first hit.

"They must have had nine tenths of their yards as violent yards — after we hit them," said Ford. "But that's a credit to the talented people they have."

Defensively, the Danes were led by Sarcone with 8 solo tackles and 5 assists. Singleton contributed 5 solos, four assists and one tackle for a loss and one sack.

"The most important thing," said Sarcone, "is that we lack consistency in defense. We'll stop them in three plays then let them drive from their 4-yard line and score."

He added, "Our defense is capable of stopping anybody. In the second half there were times we rose to the occasion and other times when we didn't."

The Danes dropped to 4-4 while the Dutchmen continue to be a playoff contender at 7-1.

"I guess it came down to big plays," said Royle. "We had more than they did."

"We feel we were very fortunate to win today," he concluded. Great Dane coaching staff. □

Dragon victory in the last game gave them the match and gave Albany their second loss of the season and something to think about going into this weekend's state tournament, which includes both public and private schools.

"I think we tried too hard today. We were seeded first, and some people say we're the best Division III team east of Chicago. We tried just a little too hard," said Dwyer.

The Danes are also seeded first for this weekend's action, and are hoping for a good performance to impress the selection board for the upcoming NAAs.

had an outstanding race. He finished 33rd in 35:09.

Coach Vives felt that Hash, a 15,000 and 800 meter track runner, made the race transition from 5 to 6.2 miles extremely well.

Glaser, a senior co-captain, and the Danes most consistent performer the past two seasons, finished next for Albany. He placed 47th with a time of 35:31.

Miller and Paul were the next two finishers for Albany. Miller placed 54 at 35:50, while Paul finished three seconds behind him.

"When you've got a kid like Pat Ryder," said Head Coach Bob Ford, "you've got to let him throw, but you've also got to catch the ball. On the other hand

"This weekend's performance will probably have a bearing on where we get seeded in the NAAs, assuming we get invited," said Dwyer. "But they have to look at the whole year, and if they take into consideration a record like ours, there's a good chance we'll get invited."

As a side note to the SUNYAC tournament, Dwyer mentioned four players who received all-tournament status. Patty Munhall and Heidi Grunwald made the tournament all-star team while Chris Hofer and Terry Neaton made the Honorable Mention team. □ his young career placed 64th at 36:15.

Coach Vives summed up the day by saying, "There is no question that with Craig (Parlato) running we would have done better, but basically we didn't run that well. Next week we have a break from racing so I think that will be to our advantage as we prepare for the regionals."

In two weeks the Danes compete in the NY regionals. First though is a trip to Sunken Meadow, Long Island for Parlato, Schoenig and the Danes "B" team. There the Danes will compete in the ECAC meet. □

"We had a roller coaster of a season," said head coach Bob Schieffelin. "To finish with a .500 season with the amount of inexperience we had is very commendable. We had good defense all season, we have very high quality kids on the team. We have something to look forward to next year." □

Danes look to rebound against improved Bulls

Albany's Glenn Carlin and Pete Pedro celebrate Carlin's first touchdown of the year at Hofstra.

By Cathy Errig
STAFF WRITER

In looking ahead to this weekend's match-up against the University of Buffalo, the Great Danes could take some comfort in the fact that they handily shut-out their opponent, 20-0, in last year's contest.

But unfortunately for Albany, much of the team they defeated last year has been benched this season to make room for a better one.

"They're much stronger this year," said Albany assistant coach Tim Keenan. "Their whole backfield is back from last season, but they got so many good, new transfers in that they're all sitting on the bench."

Buffalo is 7-2 going into Saturday's game, their only losses being to Ithaca, who defeated the Danes earlier in the season, and Division II Townsend State. The re-vamped team is looking at a possible NCAA or ECAC bid.

"We're an entirely different team than from what Albany faced last year," said Buffalo Head Coach Bill Dando. "We're older, we have some new transfers, and we're healthy."

The Bull's new offensive players have enabled the team to alter their former pass-oriented offense to one more evenly balanced in both passing and running.

"We have a more balanced attack this year," said Dando. "We move the ball through the air or the ground, we don't care which. That means teams can't gang up on us in one area."

The players Albany will most have to gang up upon, include 5-11, 195 pound running back Tim Underwood, 6-2, 185 pound quarterback Ken Crosta, and 5-11, 195 pound fullback Tim Teicher. Underwood, a junior transfer from Division I Kent State, already has gained 977 yards and scored 11 touchdowns this season. Crosta, a senior transfer from Ithaca College, has completed 1340 passing.

If the Danes are going to hurt

Buffalo's defensive unit, they'll have to contain inside linebackers Mike Laipple, a 6-3, 230 pound senior and Steve Wojciechowski, a 6-1, 221 pound junior. Free safety Steve Nappo who has nine interceptions on the season, is also a potential threat to the Danes.

"He captains their defense," said Dane assistant coach George Kontsis. "He returns punts, gets in on tackles, and is always around the ball."

But Buffalo is at a disadvantage in that they haven't seen the wishbone yet this season.

"It's not something you face every week," said Dando. "This is the first time we've seen it all season, and it's always given us a handful."

The Dane offense will be aided this week by the return of offensive lineman Charlie Guddemi, who has been out with a knee injury. The Danes will start freshman Pat Ryder at quarterback and are hoping to attain a

Albany State men booters finish season at .500

Last year, they finished the season with barely a wimper. This year, they went out with a bang.

The Albany State men's soccer team concluded their season with a 6-0 domination of Manhattanville College last Friday. The victory was the third consecutive win for the Dane booters, and their fourth in the last five games. Most significant to the Danes is the fact that the end-of-season surge enabled the team to attain their mid-season goal of finishing with a .500 record of 8-8.

".500 was just what we were shooting for," said senior Captain Carl Ios. "And if we had played the whole season the way we played the last five games, we would have had a winning season. If we could have those earlier games back now, there would be no question about it."

The Danes couldn't have those games back, but they made the most of the only contest they had left. Friday's game was controlled completely by the Danes, and proved that their winning the University Center Championship the preceding weekend had not been a fluke.

The first half was the more even of the game, as the Danes scored only two of their six goals during this period. Foward Bill Knapp scored both for the Danes, and was assisted each time by midfielder Chris Chruma.

The Danes more clearly established their command in the second half when they followed the suggestion of assistant coach Aldo Nardiello to change their game strategy from a long-passing game to a short-passing game.

"Our skill level was higher than theirs," explained Ios, "and by changing to a short-pass game we were able to keep the ball on the ground more and take advantage of that."

The strategy change enabled the Danes to add four goals in the final half. Foward Rowan Campbell had two, one unaided and one assisted by senior foward Tihan Presbie. Presbie ended his collegiate soccer career by scoring a goal of his own with the assistance of midfielder James Debritz, and the final Dane goal was scored by . . . Ios?

"Yeah," laughed Ios, traditionally the heart of the Dane defense. "They moved

Skating Danes defeat Marist for first win, 7-4

By Steve Wortman

Whoever came up with the saying that the play of your special teams could greatly help or hurt you in a hockey game would certainly have liked what he saw Sunday night as Albany State beat Marist College of Poughkeepsie by a score of 7-4. Of the eleven goals scored in the game, only four occurred when the two teams were playing at full strength.

The contingent of Dan Esler, Scott Ely, and Dave Dalbec led the Danes to their first victory of the season as they evened up their record at 1-1. The line had a total of nine points in the game, which was highlighted by Ely's two goals and Dalbec's four assists.

Other scorers for the Danes were Peter Leskody, Tom Wu, sophomore Jeff Murray, and winger Ed Grano. Andrew Gilberti had two goals for Marist as their record now drops to 0-2.

In the first period, Gilberti opened the scoring on the power play as he beat Albany's goalie Tim Ruggiero with a wrist shot from the top of the left faceoff circle. The Danes replied quickly thereafter with three goals, two of which came on the power play by Dalbec and Wu. In between them came a shorthanded goal by Leskody as he scored up high over the goalie's shoulder right off the faceoff in the Marist zone.

The difference in the first period and half of the second was the play of Ruggiero. He stopped 18 of the 20 shots he faced in those thirty minutes and kept the Danes in the lead when they were playing shorthanded for a substantial part of the time. Dalbec commented on the sophomore goalie, saying, "Tim came up really big for us. For this being his first game, he played extremely well."

In the second with the the score 3-2 Albany, Ely scored on a beautiful breakaway as he deked to the left and then back to the right to put a backhand past the fallen Ralph Cansella of Marist. With the Danes enjoying a two-man advantage, Murray scored his first goal of the season on a slapshot from just inside the blueline.

Ely then scored once again on the nicest play of the night to put Albany up 6-2. Esler and Dalbec assisted on the play as Ely cut in on the right side of the net, took the cross ice pass and tipped it in the open side for his third goal of the season.

Albany Coach Bruce Pomokoy, in regard to his high powered line stated, "Esler, Ely and Dalbec work very well together. Esler has that sixth sense to always be in the right place at the right time so he can compliment the speed of Scott and Dave."

He added, "We have a much more balanced team this year. All three lines played well tonight, which takes the pressure off any specific line."

With a goal late in the second and another one in the third period, Marist cut Albany's lead in half to 6-4. Late in the third, sophomore goalie Paul Cagnard came up big in the last two minutes as Marist had three or four good scoring opportunities right in front of the net. With only a few seconds left, Ed Grano scored an empty net goal to clinch the 7-4 victory for Albany.

After the game, Coach Pomokoy said, "Our forechecking was much improved from the last game. Because of the pressure we put on them, we had a lot more quality shots." As for the defensive play of his team he said, "Positionally there was a big improvement. We played the man a lot better this game than we did against Fordham."

For the second straight game, Albany was called for a lot of unnecessary penalties. They had a total of 18 penalty minutes to increase their total for the year to 38 minutes in all. But due to the improvement of the penalty killing and the play of Ruggiero and Cagnard, the Danes were not as badly hurt as they were against Fordham when they gave up four power play goals.

Commenting on the penalties Dalbec said, "They are a combination of us not always being disciplined and in some instances it was a case of us retaliating against them highsticking or elbowing us."

Albany's first league game will take place this Sunday against Cortland at 3:00 in Watervliet.

If the Danes can spend less time in the penalty box and play a solid defensive game, they should come out of Sunday's contest with a 2-1 record. With the balanced scoring of the three lines and the solid goaltending they are getting from Cagnard and Ruggiero, there is no limit as to how good this hockey team can become. □

Flying Dutchmen ambush Great Danes, 30-14

By Kristine Sauer

Hempstead, N.Y.

Saturday's football game between Albany and Hofstra began looking like a shootout at the O.K. Corral, but turned into a 30-14 ambush by the Flying Dutchmen, as the Danes' offense ran out of ammunition in the second half.

Inconsistency proved to be the Danes' worst enemy once again, as it was earlier in the season, as Albany's offense failed to score in the second half. Meanwhile, the defense, which was missing the services of senior safety Wayne Anderson who sat out due to an NCAA decision declaring his appearance in a Benetton advertisement last week in violation of student athletic guidelines, was unable to hold off Hofstra's explosive attack.

"We didn't uphold our end in terms of a shootout," said a disappointed Albany Head Coach Bob Ford.

The Dutchmen came out fighting, scoring on their first two possessions, to jump out to a 14-0 lead with 8:50 left in the first quarter. Hofstra struck on a 7 play scoring drive of 80 yards. Senior quarterback Alan Squeri, off an inside reverse pitch from wide receiver Lou Palermo, gained 37 yards to put the Dutchmen in Albany territory. Four plays later, it was Squeri again on another inside reverse for an 11-yard touchdown.

Hofstra kicker, Phil Kuzniar, ranked second nationally, made good for the extra point putting the Dutchmen ahead 7-0 at the 10:42 mark.

When Hofstra scored again with 8:50 left in the first quarter on a Squeri 56-yard pass to Palermo, they showed their ability to nip the Danes quickly as the one play drive only expired 12 seconds off the clock.

Although Albany's offense had yet to even pose a threat, they woke up and retaliated on their next possession to put themselves on the scoreboard.

Albany's freshman fullback Pete Pedro ran up the middle for 24 yards bringing the Danes into Hofstra's territory for the first time in the game. Quarterback Pat Ryder, also a freshman, connected with junior split end Glenn Carlin for 35 yards to set up a first and goal on the Hofstra 3.

After a 5-yard penalty on Albany for illegal procedure, Ryder scrambled left for a 5-yard gain. He then threw incomplete to halfback Ro Mitchell, before he threw complete to Carlin for a 2-yard touchdown at the 5:41 mark, which was the split end's first this year. This drew them to within seven points of the Dutchmen.

"We were a little shaken up being down 14-0 right away," said Carlin. "We're not the kind of team that gives up. I knew once our defense got settled and our offense started moving the ball we'd come back."

And the Danes did, as they stopped Hofstra's next two possessions in three plays with key tackles by linebackers Bo Murphy and Frank Sarcone, and cornerback Rich Kozak. Sophomore Darryl Singleton sacked Squeri for a loss of 11 yards. The Danes defense was also aided by tight pass coverage by halfback Gerry Brown.

Albany struck again to tie it at 14-14 early in the second quarter. To score this time, the Danes drove 95 yards in 5 plays taking 1:52 off the clock. Ryder kept the ball for a 5-yard gain before completing a 41-yard pass to Carlin to put Albany just over midfield. Mitchell carried up the middle for 5 yards. Pedro again set up first and goal on the Hofstra 3, as he broke open for a 41-yard romp. Ryder then connected with Carlin for a 2-yard touchdown pass. Tony Chechile's extra point was on target again to tie up the game.

"The offensive line, they always play tremendous," said Pedro about his breakaway run. "Glenn Carlin had a super day. He made a great block for me that opened the play up."

If Hofstra's last touchdown showed their ability to score in a matter of seconds, the Dutchmen's next trip into the end zone proved their offense is also very patient. Their next drive took 16 plays and ate up nearly 10 minutes of the second quarter as they slowly progressed the 94 yards needed up the field.

However, on this drive the Dutchmen kept to the ground, rushing for 56 yards. Freshman halfback Cedric Dawkins gained 38 of his 155 yards in that drive. The drive was also highlighted by an 18-yard reception by tightend Chris Facas. With 1:22 left in the half, Squeri connected with junior James Moore for an 11-yard

Hoff sparks harriers to seventh place

Albany senior Tim Hoff finished in seventh place at the New York State meet in Geneseo to highlight the Albany State men's cross country team's seventh place showing.

Siena won the nineteen team competition with 58 points. St. Lawrence finished behind Siena with 72 points. They were led by Jukka Tannisvo who won the race individually running a time of 32:59 on the hilly 10,000 meter course.

Albany's 146 points placed them only 12 behind Geneseo, the top SUNY team. This is a big improvement as Geneseo defeated Albany soundly at the SUNYAC meet on Albany's home course.

Additionally, Craig Parlato, the Danes number two runner, sat out the meet with a sore achilles heel. Parlato made the trip with the team, but when he couldn't even jog the day before the race, he knew that he shouldn't risk running the race. Also, Tom Shoenig, the Danes number seven runner was unable to attend the meet.

Albany took out the pace harder than they had anticipated, partly due to the fact that the first mile was downhill. Hoff, as usual, went out with the leaders as he crossed the mile at 4:58 in approximately 25th place. Junior Pat Paul was next as he crossed the mile at 5:03. Junior Trevor Hash, senior Jack Glaser, and sophomore Vernon Miller ran as a pack as they crossed the mile in 5:05.

"I figured we would hit the first mile between 5:10 and 5:15," explained Albany head coach Roberto Vives, "but it was an easy mile and everybody pushed it."

Hoff said, "Despite that the time was fast I knew by my position that I was in the right pack."

The second mile, by contrast was hilly and very slow. Hoff passed through at 10:50. Hash moved up as he ran the two miles in 11 minutes, just ahead of Glaser, Paul, and Miller.

By the 5,000 meter (3.1 mile) mark Hoff had moved up to 15th place at 16:39. However, Albany's pack was fading as they were nearly a minute from Hoff.

Throughout the second half of the race Hoff picked up places. He ran a time of 33:42, which placed him in seventh. This is the best finish of any Dane runner at the State meet in recent years. He was the Danes number one runner at the states a year ago, as well. This has been a banner season for Hoff in which he has improved with virtually every race. He is ninth on the all-time Dane cross country rankings.

Hoff said after the race, "I felt relaxed and picked up momentum throughout the race. I felt strong towards the end and had maybe a little too much (energy) left."

Coach Vives said of Hoff, "You could tell he was relaxed during the race. He now knows he has the ability to run with the top runners in the state and region."

Albany spikers' win streak halted by Red Dragons at SUNYACs

By Mike Brewster

So you think the SUNYAC competition in basketball is fierce? Sorry, but the level of playing in women's SUNY volleyball makes the hoop scene look like little more than a friendly neighborhood 5 on 5.

Albany State, 33-1 and ranked fifth in the nation leading into this weekend's SUNYAC tournament, was knocked off in the semi-finals by the Cortland Red Dragons. The Danes later beat Geneseo in the consolation match to take third place in the tournament.

"It's just one of those things," said Albany coach Pat Dwyer. "We've beaten Cortland three times this year, but in volleyball every match is close and today's could have went either way. I must say I'm disappointed, but it's not like we gave them the match or anything."

The defeat was not catastrophic in nature by any means. The Danes are still pretty much assured of an NCAA bid and as coach Dwyer explains, a loss to Cortland, even when you are 33-1, is nothing to hang over your head about.

"Cortland is 37-12, and I'd say the SUNYAC Conference is one of the best in the nation. And then when you consider that Buffalo is nationally ranked, you can see that when you don't play up to your ability, as we failed to do today, then people can beat you."

Albany started the tournament convincingly enough, downing New Paltz 15-10, 15-9. The Danes were even more impressive in the next round as they pummeled Binghamton by a 15-1, 15-7 score. Geneseo succumbed next, 15-10, and the stage was set for the semi-finals.

Albany won the first game of the match, 15-13, but the second was all Cortland as they won 15-6. The 15-9 Red
