Gershon B. O. Collier, visiting professor in the department of Afro-American studies at State University of New York at Albany, will participate in the Judges Conference on The Future of The World Court to be held Saturday at the Center for International Studies at New York University.

Professor Collier will read an invited paper on "The World Court in the Eyes of the New Nations." Other participants in the conference will include six members of the International Court of Justice, 13 United States federal justices, and members of the judiciary of Canada.

Professor Collier, formerly Ambassador to the United Nations and to the United States from Sierre Leone, has served as chief justice of the highest court in his country. Before coming to the Albany university he was visiting professor and senior fellow in the department of law at the NYU Center for International Studies.

At SUNYA Professor Collier teaches a course in black nationalism in Africa and also conducts a comparative study seminar on colonialism and powerlessness in Africa and the United States. Currently he is writing a book, "Experiments in Democracy in African Nations" to be published by the New York University Press.

A governmental management seminar for administrative management personnel in state government and private business will be offered by the department of administrative and governmental services, College of General Studies, State University of New York at Albany, beginning Monday, April 6.

The purpose of the course is to acquaint administrative trainees, newly appointed government professionals, and others with points of view of key officials in state government service. The series of seminars will cover subjects such as administrative law for governmental employees, current trends in internal auditing, public information and communication development, human relations and local government, and a bird's eye view of governmental operations.

Guest speakers from state offices include Dr. Theodore Becker, administrative director, Administration Bureau, Department of Law; Franklin M. Bridge, director, Division of Municipal Management Services, Office for Local Government; Martin Ives, deputy comptroller, Division of Audits and Accounts, Department of Audit and Control; and Frank H. Otwell, public relations director, Department of Taxation and Finance. General C.V.R. Schuyler, commissioner of general services, Office of General Services, will speak at the dinner meeting on May 4. The meetings will be held at the university's Campus Center from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on April 6, 13, 21, 27, and May 4. Certificates will be awarded at the final meeting. The fee for the course is $35. Professor Reno S. Knouse, Professor of distributive education, SUNYA, is directing the seminar.

Leon J. Calhoun recently joined State University of New York at Albany as director of management information systems. His responsibilities include the designing and development of a University Information System, which will deal with program activity, resources, management, and long-range planning and recommending priority for development of programs.

Mr. Calhoun, a graduate of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., is a retired Lieutenant Colonel of the U. S. Army, with 20 years experience in the management of resources and personnel. He formerly was employed by the New York State Department of Transportation and at one time was on the faculty of Florida A & M University.

At Albany, Mr. Calhoun will report to acting Vice President for Academic Affairs Charles T. O'Reilly. He will work with other vice-presidents and their staffs, the academic deans, and with other officials in the gathering of data and information, in establishing criteria for program evaluation, and in development of the overall information in the system. He also will be involved with personnel in budget and accounting, and with faculty and students through the Council on Educational Policies.

Bela Kiraly, associate professor of history, Brooklyn College, will lecture on "The Hungarian Revolution of 1956" at 8 p.m., April 8, in lecture room 1, State University of New York at Albany. A reception will follow his address.

Mr. Kiraly, a Hungarian native, graduated from that country's "West Point," the Ludovika Military Academy, in 1935. He was a member of the Hungarian underground during World War II and became Commander-In-Chief of the Infantry of the Hungarian Army in 1949. During the Stalinist period in 1951, he was arrested and condemned to death for resisting the Bolshevization of the Hungarian army. Following Stalin's death in 1953, his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, but in 1956 he was freed and chosen Commander-In-Chief of the freedom fighters. After the Soviets crushed the revolution, Kiraly escaped to Austria.

Since 1965, Mr. Kiraly has been a naturalized citizen of the United States. He holds MA and Ph.D. degrees in modern history from Columbia University, has lectured widely and is the author of several books and numerous articles. His Hungary in the Late 18th Century (Columbia University Press) appeared last year. He was named "Teacher of the Year" at Brooklyn College in 1969.

A pair of visiting professors in the department of chemistry recently arrived on the State University of New York at Albany campus. Each is teaching a graduate course in the department and giving public lectures.

The distinguished visitors are Dr. Oleg Jardetzky, chairman of pharmacology, Stanford University Medical Center, and Dr. Albert Moscovitz of the University of Minnesota, a well-known theoretician and experimentalist in spectroscopy. ✓ Dr. Jardetzky is a pioneer in using NMR, an extremely sensitive physical technique, to study the correlation of structure and function of biological systems. From his studies, a number of biological reactions have been clarified.

Dr. Moscovitz has done extensive investigation in the field of Optics and an important equation in that field bears his name.

April 15 is the final date for filing applications for admission next fall to grades eight through 12 in The Milne School, campus laboratory school of State University of New York at Albany. Applicants filing after April 15 will be put on file for the following year.

The placement examination for determining admissions will be given at Milne on Saturday, April 25. Students who have taken the admissions examination previously are not required to take it again to be considered for vacancies available in September.

Eighty-five applications already have been received for the approximately twelve vacancies expected in the upper grades in September. Performance of these students on the admissions examination will determine their place on the waiting list for vacancies. The number of places in any grade will vary according to the number of withdrawals or removals for that particular grade.

Speakers, panel discussions, films, skits and displays will be featured on Earth Day at State University of New York at Albany Wednesday, April 22. Student and faculty members of FYE (Protect Your Environment) are inviting the public to find out what can be done about environmental problems by attending the ^{morning,} /afternoon, and evening teach-in.

Leading off the day's events will be a speaker and panel discussion on the topic of environmental law enforcement. Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz will be the principal speaker. Panelists will include Albany Mayor Erastus Corning and Vincent Schaefer, director of the university's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center. Dwight Metzler, New York State assistant commissioner of health, will moderate. The discussion will take place in the ballroom in Campus Center beginning at 10:30.

In the afternoon, at another speaker and panel discussion, the principal speaker will be Congressman Richard L. Ottinger. The subject will be "Citizen Action: Working with Legislators and the Courts". Among the panelists will be Gerald Handler, assistant administrator of the Northeast Environmental Health Service, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; Peter Costas, patent attorney; and Adrian Gonyea, former city manager of Troy. The program, also to be held in the ballroom, will begin at 1:30. *

Late in the afternoon, at 5:30, the Now Teen Mime Troupe will present "Man and Environment" in the university's Performing Arts Center. Additionally, throughout the all-day teach-in, there will be an environmental fair in the ballroom where displays, information booths, films, and skits have been scheduled.

Earth Day -2-

In the evening, beginning at 7:30 in the ballroom, Congressman Daniel E. Button will discuss the "Federal Outlook on Population and the Environment". Participating on the panel will be Robert G. Fichenberg, executive editor of the Albany Knickerbocker News--Union Star, and Michael Rosenzweig, of SUNYA's department of biology. The moderator will be Lyndon Schendel, executive director of the Albany Branch of the Planned Parenthood Association.

Concluding the day's scheduled events will be a second performance by TNT (The Now Teen Mime Troupe) of "Man and Environment" at the Performing Arts Center, starting at 9:30. Also, during the day, environmental trips can be made by bus to an outdoor art exhibit in Altamont.

As a prelude to the teach-in, there will be an Earth Day parade Saturday, April 18. The line of march will form at 10:30 a.m. in Capitol Park. At Washington Park there will be an address by Mayor Corning and a "trash-in", or clean-up of the park.

Joseph Slack, publicity chairman for FYE, in his appeal for attendance at the instructional sessions on Earth Day, states: "It is doubtful that man, given a choice, would choose to obliterate himself. But in examining the decisions made by men which affect our chances of survival, there is a great cause for concern."

He added, "We seem to consistently choose quantity before quality. At the expense of the quality of our air we have chosen the quantity of our automobiles; at the expense of the quality of our water we have chosen the quantity of industrial profit/cost ratios; and at the expense of the quality of our social institutions we have chosen the quantity of our ever-increasing population. These decisions we have made and continue to make. FYE has organized a teach-in program in order to present the public with information so that decisions determining our future as consumers, and as human beings, can be made intelligently."

A program brochure comments, "The conquest of the earth must end. Man, equipped with a technology and a way of life, daily consumes and degrades the sphere upon which all life depends. We must learn to live within the Finite Earth: an earth finite in resources, limited in tolerance to poisoning, and capable of supporting only a finite population.

"The Environmental Teach-In is a step towards self-consciousness. The people of the earth must be aware of their impact on the environment. Our unchecked numbers, our misdirected consumption cannot proceed without final diaster. Attend the Teach-In. There are things to be done. Life depends on it."

The first Black Cultural Weekend, April 10, 11 and 12 at State University of New York at Albany, will feature performances of the play, "The Association," by Milledge Moseley, guest lecturers, and a special concert with Miss Nina Simone. The cultural weekend is being sponsored jointly by the Third World Liberation Front and the Black Ensemble.

The weekend will begin at 1 p.m. Friday with an opening introduction followed by films and a discussion led by Edoho Bassey Edoho, professor of African history at the university. Other scheduled events Friday include speaker Horace Holliday, former bodyguard of Malcolm X; a jazz workshop; and theatre productions.

Saturday afternoon's program begins with "An Hour in Memory of Malcolm X" presented by the Black Ensemble. The production, including a play and poetry reading, will be given at 1 p.m. and at 2 p.m. in the Studio Theatre, Performing Arts Center (PAC). In the evening a pre-concert fashion show will feature creations from New Breed. Then at 9:30, in the physical education building, Miss Nina Simone will appear in concert.

The weekend will culminate Sunday afternoon in the PAC Recital Hall with the production "Hip Black and Angry," presented by the New Heritage Repertory Theatre. Six performances of "The Association" are scheduled throughout the weekend. Tickets for the Nina Simone concert are available in the Education Opportunity Program office, university library basement room 94. Admission is $3.50 in advance, $5 at the door.

Members of the Protect Your Environment (PYE) Club, State University of New York at Albany, will sponsor an "Earth Day Parade" Saturday, April 18, in downtown Albany. The parade will be "a march for 'Environmental Awareness'", according to its sponsors and is part of a planned program of activities related to the Environmental Teach-In at SUNYA, April 22.

The line of march will form in Capital Park at 10:30 Saturday morning, and will pass by the capitol up Washington Avenue, and into Washington Park. Albany Mayor Erastus Corning will address the marchers briefly there and then will help with the "Trash-In."

The "Trash-In" will be a "sweep through the park to pick up papers, bottles, cans, and other remains of people living without environmental awareness."

PYE organizers welcome all to join the parade but have made three stipulations: no motor vehicles will be permitted, all floats must be handdrawn or drawn by animals, and at the end of the parade, all materials in the floats will be sorted and sold for scrap.

Further information on the Earth Day Parade may be obtained from Michael Brennan, Fine Arts 218.

"ALA-ED-DIN, The Caliph and The Dreadful Magician" by Paul Bruce Pettit, chairman, department of theatre, State University of New York at Albany, will be presented April 15-18 in the university's Laboratory Theatre, Performing Arts Center by State University Theatre. The production is directed by Patricia Snyder and choreographed by Adrienne Spagnola and Kathleen O'Neil.

The first version of "Ala-ed-din" was commissioned by the Ministry of Culture and National Guidance of the Syrian Arab Republic. It was made possible by a grant to the author by the United States Department of State. The original premiered at the Azum Place in Damascus and was performed by the National Theatre and the National Ballet in August 1965.

The current version was rewritten in the Spring of 1969 with considerable changes and expansions. ASSITEJ (The International Association of Theatres for Children and Youth) identified "Ala-ed-din" as one of the ten best children's plays of that year.

The large cast includes William Synder as Kuffa, a souss seller; Gary Joel Maggio as Mustafu; Marcia Cox as Mother; Peter Hasler as Caliph Shahriyar; Gary Restifo as Ala-ed-din; Mary Ann Wilson and Barbara Richards as Princess Badoul Boudour, and Jared Hershkowitz as the Grand Vizier. Twenty others are featured in the roles of townspeople, handmaidens, royal guards, royal slaves, and dancers.

The technical staff is comprised of Robert Donnelly, scenic design; Jerome Hanley, lighting; Mary DiLella, stage manager; and Karen Prete, assistant stage manager.

"Ala-ed-din's" original score was composed by Dennis Buck, a graduate of Albany, and recorded on campus. The score, written for oboe, harp, piano, flute and percussion, is performed by Lenny Tobler, Gail Pantley, Joan Goldsmith, and Dennis Buck.

In addition to each evening's performance at 8 p. m., there will be three matinees, April 17 at 1 p. m. and April 18 and 19 at 2 p. m. Admission is $1 or student tax, children under 12, 50¢.

State University of New York at Albany and the Greece Central School District have established a teacher education center in the field of business education at Greece, New York. The secondary schools involved are Greece Arcadia High School, Greece Athena High School, and Greece Olympia High School.

The program is being conducted in the belief that the university must establish stronger alliances with the public schools in the mutual effort to achieve teacher preparation of the highest quality. The concept is a departure from the standard off-campus student teaching program in that a professor from the university is in residence in the Greece School District full-time for the school year in lieu of visitations to student teachers whenever possible. Miss Helen Safford, assistant professor in the School of Education, is in charge of the program, which has as its nucleus twenty senior student teachers of business education for the academic year. *

It is felt that both the public schools and the university profit from the proximity of the professor to the situation. Some of the benefits to be derived from the program are: improvement of the quality and quantity of supervision because of the ability of the supervisor to be closer to the student teachers, new and creative ideas brought to the staff, the exchange of ideas between cooperating teacher and student, more realistic relations between student teachers and faculty, and availability of the supervisor as a resource person for the school.

*See attached list.

The New York Pro Musica, performers of Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque music, will be heard in concert Friday evening, April 24, in the Main Theatre of the Performing Arts Center at State University of New York at Albany. The program, to begin at 8:30, is sponsored by the university's Music Council.

The famed ensemble, founded by Noah Greenberg and directed by John Reeves White, provides concert audiences with a unique opportunity to hear the musical masterpieces of an age that produced such giants as Shakespeare, Leonardo da Vinci and Dante, performed by young singers and instrumentalists who have been acclaimed widely for their artistry and authenticity. A Pro Musica concert has been described as "an exciting excursion into the great musical past."

The ensemble's repertoire is as wide and as vari-colored as the period that it musically depicts. Included are sacred works that were performed in such cathedrals as Chartres and Notre Dame, lusty songs and dances of 15th Century Germany, music at once elegant and earthy from Elizabethan England; music from the courts of Spain and the Low Countries, and madrigals of the Italian renaissance.

Tickets for the general public are $3 and may be reserved by calling 457-4879.

A unique state-wide exhibition of work by State University of New York student artists will be shown at the University Art Gallery in Albany beginning Sunday, April 19.

The exhibition, which is sponsored by the University-Wide Committee on the Arts, will be the first of its kind for the State University. James W. Hall, assistant university dean for university-wide activities, and Donald Mochon, director of the art gallery, have coordinated the plans for the exhibition.

According to Dr. Hall, students from 60 State University campuses were invited to submit work to six regional centers at Albany, Buffalo, New Paltz, Potsdam, Cortland, and Queensborough Community College. The exhibition juror, Stephen Propokoff, director of the Institute of Contemporary Art of the University of Pennsylvania, made a final selection of 68 works from 17 campuses for inclusion in the exhibit.

The student works are in all media and reflect the interest of young artists everywhere in experimental techniques and materials. A statement (about the young artists) by Mr. Propokoff in the catalogue of the exhibition follows:

"In its totality this exhibition...exemplifies an imaginative encounter with aesthetic issues and is a credit to its participants. The work brought together here possesses impressive qualities and forms a diverse and altogether handsome ensemble. The sense of professionalism it embodies is surely a tribute not only to its creators' talents and diligence but to their teachers skill and support as well."

The exhibition will open at 7:30 on April 18 with a reception for the artists followed by a performance by the New Percussion Quartet. The reception and performance will be open to the public.

Forty-two Parole Board members representing 24 states will join members of the New York State Board of Parole for a national institute on parole with the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany, serving as host beginning Sunday, April 26.

The week-long institute, to be held on the 100-acre campus of the Institute of Man and Science at Rensselaerville, will provide an opportunity for intensive interaction between faculty and parole board members in an integrated program centering on the theme, "Realistic Problems of Decision-making in Parole." Participants, staff, and faculty will live together during the institute to facilitate a climate of mutual learning. The program is designed to maximize small group interaction and feedback as participants and faculty will work together to review current practical concerns including questions on parole of violent offenders, techniques of improved decision-making, use of computers and statistical resources, and due process regarding legal rights of inmates and parolees.

Among the faculty members participating will be Professors Donald Newman, Fred Cohen, and Vincent O'Leary, of the School of Criminal Justice; Alvin Cohn, director of correctional training for the National Council on Crime and Delinquency; and Dr. Don Gottfredson, director of uniform parole reports.

The National Parole Institute is co-sponsored by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration of the Department of Justice. Other sponsors include the Interstate Administrators Association for the Council of State Governments, The Association of Paroling Authorities, and the United States Board of Parole.

Applications are being received at State University of New York at Albany for its Junior Year Study in Madrid. The program, which begins in the fall, is under the direction of the Albany university center. It was established by State University of New York through its Center of International Education and World Affairs.

Xavier A. Fernandez, professor of Romance languages, is administrative director of the program which offers nine months of intensive study and cultural experience. Formal instruction is given by native professors outstanding in their respective fields and chosen for their excellence as teachers.

The center for studies in Madrid will be the International Institute in Spain. It is directed by an American foundation and was established to foster cultural relations between the United States and Spain.

The four main areas of study are language in its written and spoken forms; history and civilization; Spanish literature, both modern and classic; and art in its different manifestations. All courses will be conducted in Spanish. Course offerings will be determined each year by the SUNYA faculty and the program director in consultation with the faculty in Madrid.

Students will earn a minimum of 26 hours and a maximum of 30 hours except in special cases authorized by the department of Romance languages. An approximate cost estimate is $1,800 for New York State residents and $2,000 for out-of-state students. Cost of the round-trip, chartered flight organized by SUNYA, will be about $200.

"Welfare Rights and Our National Priorities" will be the subject of the annual institute of the Northeast New York Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers Wednesday, April 29, at State University of New York at Albany. The institute will be held from 1 to 5 in the afternoon in the Assembly Hall at the Campus Center.

Co-sponsored by the university's School of Social Welfare, the program will feature Richard A. Cloward, professor at the Columbia University School of Social Work. Dr. Cloward was associated with the founding of the National Welfare Rights Movement, a grass roots organization of welfare recipients, and continues to be an active participant. He publishes frequently in scholarly and professional journals and in leading magazines such as The Nation, the New Republic, and The Saturday Review. He also was a founder of Mobilization for Youth, a forerunner of Economic Opportunity Community Action programs. Presently he is a member of the board of the New York Civil Liberties Union and the Poverty Rights Action Center.

The discussants will include Chuck Griffin, New York State organizer for the National Welfare Rights Movement; Winifred Bell, of the School of Social Welfare; and Mrs. Vivian Moomaw, of the National Association of Social Workers. Irving Landa, of the SUNYA school, is serving as institute chairman and will preside.

Mr. Griffin, a public school teacher for seven years, has devoted his full time to the Welfare Rights Movement. Dr. Bell has been associated with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and Model Cities programs. She also has written widely in the area of poverty, welfare,

Marilyn Walsh, a graduate student in the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany, is one of 90 winners of the Herbert H. Lehman Graduate Fellowships in Social Sciences and Public and International Affairs. The awards, presented each year by New York State, were established by the Legislature in honor of the former governor of New York.

Recipients of the award, who are designated as New York State Lehman Fellows, may receive up to $5,000 a year for four years of graduate study, beginning in September 1970. Applications for Herbert H. Lehman Fellowships were received from a total of 1100 candidates who plan to pursue graduate study in a college situated in New York State.

The recipients were chosen by a panel composed of fellowship officers from graduate schools throughout the country. Awards were based on an evaluation of test scores, academic records, and personal qualifications.

The university also has three alternates, D. Sandra Hettum, Donald MacDonald, and Charles Mizejeski.

For the second year at State University of New York at Albany, the activities of State Fair, Parents' Weekend, and Alumni Weekend will combine to create a carnival weekend on May 8-10. Planning committees for all three events are working out the details of schedules that will feature concerts, banquets, campus tours, open houses, and the games and booths of State Fair.

The fair is planned for Saturday, May 9, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thirty-five groups will sponsor some kind of fund-raising booth or activity. Booths will be located on the lawns in back of the Campus Center or in the Campus Center itself in the event of inclement weather. Fraternities, sororities, dormitories, the Faculty Wives Association, and the Alumni Association are among the organizations which will participate in the State Fair effort. All funds raised by the fair go toward scholarships for foreign students to study at Albany. The fair's coordinators hope to raise $2,000 for the scholarship fund this year.

Many events are being planned especially for the alumni and parents who will be visiting the campus that weekend, including campus tours and open houses designed to acquaint them with the life of the university.

An estimated 100 State University faculty members and technical professionals will discuss the more effective use of computers for college instruction Thursday, April 30, and Friday, May 1, at State University of New York at Albany.

Called the Conference on Computer Assisted Instruction (CAI), the two-day meeting is sponsored jointly by the Faculty Senate committee on undergraduate instruction and the Office of Computer Systems Development of State University. Its objectives are to provide a forum for faculty members in CAI, to assist them to identify colleagues on other campuses, to discuss the future of CAI at State University colleges and centers, and to establish a university-wide CAI committee.

Harold B. Wakefield, director of computer systems development for State University, said research in this area has been extensive in the university since 1965. Where facilities are available, computers can contribute greatly to teaching and learning without reducing the quality of instruction, he indicated.

Speakers at the conference will include Kenneth Iverson, a consultant at IBM's scientific center complex at Yorktown Heights and the inventor of the programming language APL, and Dr. Edward Lambe, director of the instructional resources center at State University at Stony Brook.

Robert Ford Named to Albany Staff

Robert M. Ford, 32, currently completing his Ph.D. requirements at Springfield College, today was appointed assistant professor of physical education at State University at Albany, effective August 27, 1970. In addition to his teaching responsibilities in the department, he will coach the university's first-year football club and the varsity lacrosse team.

Ford formerly was assistant professor of physical education at St. Lawrence University, where he was head football and freshman lacrosse coach. He also has taught at Albright College and Springfield.

Albany will begin intercollegiate football with a six-game schedule in the fall. The historic opener is slated October 10 against visiting Rochester Institute of Technology. Other opponents will be Siena College, Towson State (Md.), Marist College, State College at Plattsburgh, and Hudson Valley Community College. Home games will be played on the field surrounded by the running track behind the physical education building. Permanent bleachers for an estimated 2,200 persons are being constructed on the steps of the building and additional accommodations also will be available.

In four years at St. Lawrence, Ford compiled a 14-23-1 football record. His 1965 team won the Independent College Athletic Conference (ICAC) championship with a league mark of 3-1. That fall, the then 27-year old Ford was recognized as the youngest head college football coach in the nation. In 1967, he was named one of the Outstanding Young Men of America by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He also had three undefeated seasons as freshman lacrosse coach at St. Lawrence.

Ford originally had gone to St. Lawrence as a graduate student in 1959, after receiving a B.S. in physical education from Springfield. At St. Lawrence, he earned an M.Ed. in educational administration and coached the freshman football team to a 4-1 season.

He then went to Albright College for four years (1960-64), where he was back-field coach on the football team which posted 21 straight victories, longest winning skein in the country at the time. As head wrestling coach at Albright, Ford recorded the school's first winning season in the sport and had three winning campaigns in four years. He also turned the golf program around, ending a 31-match losing streak and leaving with a 14-match winning streak.

After a year as a doctoral teaching fellow at Springfield, during which time he was offensive coordinator and backfield coach for football, Ford moved to St. Lawrence for his four-year stint. He returned to Springfield last fall to complete his studies and will receive a doctorate in physical education in June. His dissertation is entitled "Anxiety in Non-Competitive and Pre-Competitive Situations Involving Intercollegiate Football Players."

As a student at Wachusett High School, Holden, Mass., Ford lettered in football, basketball, and baseball, captaining all three sports his senior year. He then played four years of football at Springfield and was first-string quarterback as a senior.

Ford is a member of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation; the National College Physical Education Association for Men; and the American Football Coaches Association. He has served on the faculty of a number of athletic clinics and was director of the St. Lawrence football clinic for four years.

A recent ruling by the International Studies and World Affairs Office, State University of New York at Albany, has made it mandatory for participants in Albany's summer language programs in Canada, Puerto Rico, and five European countries to register officially in the SUNYA summer session, thus making SUNYA students eligible for financial aid. Formerly local registration was not planned and credit could be achieved on the basis of proficiency examinations.

The College of Arts and Sciences is sponsoring summer language training at beginning, intermediate, and advanced levels in French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish at institutions of higher education in countries where the languages are spoken natively. This is the second year of the program which has been extended to other languages following the first successful experience last summer in Germany at the Goethe Institut.

Although the program is designed primarily for entering freshmen, it is open to interested students at all educational levels, undergraduate and graduate, from SUNY or non-SUNY institutions, as well as to persons not currently enrolled in any educational institution, but who are interested in learning or perfecting another language. The branches of the program vary from six weeks to eight weeks of language training. The branches in Quebec City and Mayaguez, Puerto Rico have an inclusive fee of $525, and those in Europe, of $725. The latter includes one week of sponsored travel. The groups going to Europe depart June 24 and return August 30.

Additional information is available from William Derrick, College of Arts and Sciences, International Studies, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany 12203 (telephone 457-7624).

PRESS RELEASE: FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

A four day festival of Electronic Music will be presented in the Art Gallery Lounge at the State University in Albany beginning May 7th. Called "The Many Sounds of Electronic Music: an International Sampling" this unique survey of a still young musical medium has been selected and organized into concert form by Joel Chadabe, Assistant Professor of Music at the University.

Mr. Chadabe has written extensive program notes for the festival with Warren Burt and Randy Cohen, both students in the Music Department. The compositions of all three men will be included in the program.

Mr. Chadabe has chosen tapes from throughout the world which embody the striking differences in aesthetic and technique that recent developments in sound generating and processing equipment are making possible. Among the composers whose work will be presented during the festival are; Milton Babbit, Mario Davidovsky, Sal Martirano, Karlheinz Stockhausen, and Iannis Xenakis. In his introduction to the program notes Mr. Chadabe says,

"Each studio is capable of producing a vast variety of sounds, although working techniques usually lead the composer in any specific studio to do what is most efficient for that equipment. But the total range of diversity in

Bela Kiraly, associate professor of history, Brooklyn College, will lecture on "The Hungarian Revolution of 1956" at 8 p.m., April 8, in lecture room 1, State University of New York at Albany. A reception will follow his address.

Mr. Kiraly, a Hungarian native, graduated from that country's "West Point," the Ludovika Military Academy, in 1935. He was a member of the Hungarian underground during World War II and became Commander-In-Chief of the Infantry of the Hungarian Army in 1949. During the Stalinist period in 1951, he was arrested and condemned to death for resisting the Bolshevization of the Hungarian army. Following Stalin's death in 1953, his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, but in 1956 he was freed and chosen Commander-In-Chief of the freedom fighters. After the Soviets crushed the revolution, Kiraly escaped to Austria.

Since 1965, Mr. Kiraly has been a naturalized citizen of the United States. He holds MA and Ph.D. degrees in modern history from Columbia University, has lectured widely and is the author of several books and numerous articles. His Hungary in the Late 18th Century (Columbia University Press) appeared last year. He was named "Teacher of the Year" at Brooklyn College in 1969.

Professor Collier will read an invited paper on "The World Court in the Eyes of the New Nations." Other participants in the conference will include six members of the International Court of Justice, 13 United States federal justices, and members of the judiciary of Canada.

Professor Collier, formerly Ambassador to the United Nations and to the United States from Sierre Leone, has served as chief justice of the highest court in his country. Before coming to the Albany university he was visiting professor and senior fellow in the department of law at the NYU Center for International Studies.

At SUNYA Professor Collier teaches a course in black nationalism in Africa and also conducts a comparative study seminar on colonialism and powerlessness in Africa and the United States. Currently he is writing a book, "Experiments in Democracy in African Nations" to be published by the New York University Press.

Members of the Protect Your Environment (PYE) Club, State University of New York at Albany, will sponsor an "Earth Day Parade" Saturday, April 18, in downtown Albany. The parade will be "a march for 'Environmental Awareness'", according to its sponsors and is part of a planned program of activities related to the Environmental Teach-In at SUNYA, April 22.

The line of march will form in Capital Park at 10:30 Saturday morning, and will pass by the capitol up Washington Avenue, and into Washington Park. Albany Mayor Erastus Corning will address the marchers briefly there and then will help with the "Trash-In."

The "Trash-In" will be a "sweep through the park to pick up papers, bottles, cans, and other remains of people living without environmental awareness."

PYE organizers welcome all to join the parade but have made three stipulations: no motor vehicles will be permitted, all floats must be handdrawn or drawn by animals, and at the end of the parade, all materials in the floats will be sorted and sold for scrap.

Further information on the Earth Day Parade may be obtained from Michael Brennan, Fine Arts 218.

"ALA-ED-DIN, The Caliph and The Dreadful Magician" by Paul Bruce Pettit, chairman, department of theatre, State University of New York at Albany, will be presented April 15-18 in the university's Laboratory Theatre, Performing Arts Center by State University Theatre. The production is directed by Patricia Snyder and choreographed by Adrienne Spagnola and Kathleen O'Neil.

The first version of "Ala-ed-din" was commissioned by the Ministry of Culture and National Guidance of the Syrian Arab Republic. It was made possible by a grant to the author by the United States Department of State. The original premiered at the Azum Place in Damascus and was performed by the National Theatre and the National Ballet in August 1965.

The current version was rewritten in the Spring of 1969 with considerable changes and expansions. ASSITEJ (The International Association of Theatres for Children and Youth) identified "Ala-ed-din" as one of the ten best children's plays of that year.

The large cast includes William Synder as Kuffa, a souss seller; Gary Joel Maggio as Mustafu; Marcia Cox as Mother; Peter Hasler as Caliph Shahriyar; Gary Restifo as Ala-ed-din; Mary Ann Wilson and Barbara Richards as Princess Badoul Boudour, and Jared Hershkowitz as the Grand Vizier. Twenty others are featured in the roles of townspeople, handmaidens, royal guards, royal slaves, and dancers.

The technical staff is comprised of Robert Donnelly, scenic design; Jerome Hanley, lighting; Mary DiLella, stage manager; and Karen Prete, assistant stage manager. "Ala-ed-din's" original score was composed by Dennis Buck, a graduate of Albany, and recorded on campus. The score, written for oboe, harp, piano, flute and percussion, is performed by Lenny Tobler, Gail Pantley, Joan Goldsmith, and Dennis Buck.

In addition to each evening's performance at 8 p. m., there will be three matinees, April 17 at 1 p. m. and April 18 and 19 at 2 p. m. Admission is $1 or student tax, children under 12, 50¢.

The Marlboro Music Festival, which Rudolf Serkin directs each summer in the Green Mountains of Vermont, will present the third program in its "Music from Marlboro" series at State University of New York at Albany, Friday evening, April 17. The program, sponsored by the Music Council, will feature works prepared and performed at the summer festival in the extension of Marlboro's activities into the regular concert season.

Four noted artists will take time from their solo activities to participate in this performance. Pianist Ruth Laredo, violinist Jaime Laredo, violist Raphael Hillyer and cellist Robert Sylvester will perform a varied program of chamber works which includes the seldom-heard Dvorak Trio in E minor, Opus 90 ("Dumky") and the Kirchner Sonata Concertante, in addition to the Brahms Piano Quartet in G minor, Opus 25.

Now in its fifth season, "Music from Marlboro" is being presented in over 25 cities in the eastern and mid-western U.S. and Canada. The Albany concert will take place in the Main Theatre of the Performing Arts Center. Tickets for the general public are $3 and may be reserved by calling 457-4879.

Applications are being received at State University of New York at Albany for its Junior Year Study in Madrid. The program, which begins in the fall, is under the direction of the Albany university center. It was established by State University of New York through its Center of International Education and World Affairs.

Xavier A. Fernandez, professor of Romance languages, is administrative director of the program which offers nine months of intensive study and cultural experience. Formal instruction is given by native professors outstanding in their respective fields and chosen for their excellence as teachers.

The center for studies in Madrid will be the International Institute in Spain. It is directed by an American foundation and was established to foster cultural relations between the United States and Spain.

The four main areas of study are language in its written and spoken forms; history and civilization; Spanish literature, both modern and classic; and art in its different manifestations. All courses will be conducted in Spanish. Course offerings will be determined each year by the SUNYA faculty and the program director in consultation with the faculty in Madrid.

Students will earn a minimum of 26 hours and a maximum of 30 hours except in special cases authorized by the department of Romance languages. An approximate cost estimate is $1,800 for New York State residents and $2,000 for out-of-state students. Cost of the round-trip, chartered flight organized by SUNYA, will be about $200.

Forty-two Parole Board members representing 24 states will join members of the New York State Board of Parole for a national institute on parole with the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany, serving as host beginning Sunday, April 26.

The week-long institute, to be held on the 100-acre campus of the Institute of Man and Science at Rensselaerville, will provide an opportunity for intensive interaction between faculty and parole board members in an integrated program centering on the theme, "Realistic Problems of Decision-making in Parole." Participants, staff, and faculty will live together during the institute to facilitate a climate of mutual learning. The program is designed to maximize small group interaction and feedback as participants and faculty will work together to review current practical concerns including questions on parole of violent offenders, techniques of improved decision-making, use of computers and statistical resources, and due process regarding legal rights of inmates and parolees.

Among the faculty members participating will be Professors Donald Newman, Fred Cohen, and Vincent O'Leary, of the School of Criminal Justice; Alvin Cohn, director of correctional training for the National Council on Crime and Delinquency; and Dr. Don Gottfredson, director of uniform parole reports.

The National Parole Institute is co-sponsored by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration of the Department of Justice. Other sponsors include the Interstate Administrators Association for the Council of State Governments, The Association of Paroling Authorities, and the United States Board of Parole.

A unique state-wide exhibition of work by State University of New York student artists will be shown at the University Art Gallery in Albany beginning Sunday, April 19.

The exhibition, which is sponsored by the University-Wide Committee on the Arts, will be the first of its kind for the State University. James W. Hall, assistant university dean for university-wide activities, and Donald Mochon, director of the art gallery, have coordinated the plans for the exhibition.

According to Dr. Hall, students from 60 State University campuses were invited to submit work to six regional centers at Albany, Buffalo, New Paltz, Potsdam, Cortland, and Queensborough Community College. The exhibition juror, Stephen Propokoff, director of the Institute of Contemporary Art of the University of Pennsylvania, made a final selection of 68 works from 17 campuses for inclusion in the exhibit.

The student works are in all media and reflect the interest of young artists everywhere in experimental techniques and materials. A statement (about the young artists) by Mr. Propokoff in the catalogue of the exhibition follows:

"In its totality this exhibition...exemplifies an imaginative encounter with aesthetic issues and is a credit to its participants. The work brought together here possesses impressive qualities and forms a diverse and altogether handsome ensemble. The sense of professionalism it embodies is surely a tribute not only to its creators' talents and diligence but to their teachers skill and support as well."

The exhibition will open at 7:30 on April 18 with a reception for the artists followed by a performance by the New Percussion Quartet. The reception and performance will be open to the public.

The New York Pro Musica, performers of Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque music, will be heard in concert Friday evening, April 24, in the Main Theatre of the Performing Arts Center at State University of New York at Albany. The program, to begin at 8:30, is sponsored by the university's Music Council.

The famed ensemble, founded by Noah Greenberg and directed by John Reeves White, provides concert audiences with a unique opportunity to hear the musical masterpieces of an age that produced such giants as Shakespeare, Leonardo da Vinci and Dante, performed by young singers and instrumentalists who have been acclaimed widely for their artistry and authenticity. A Pro Musica concert has been described as "an exciting excursion into the great musical past."

The ensemble's repertoire is as wide and as vari-colored as the period that it musically depicts. Included are sacred works that were performed in such cathedrals as Chartres and Notre Dame, lusty songs and dances of 15th Century Germany, music at once elegant and earthy from Elizabethan England; music from the courts of Spain and the Low Countries, and madrigals of the Italian renaissance.

Tickets for the general public are $3 and may be reserved by calling 457-4879.

State University of New York at Albany and the Greece Central School District have established a teacher education center in the field of business education at Greece, New York. The secondary schools involved are Greece Arcadia High School, Greece Athena High School, and Greece Olympia High School.

The program is being conducted in the belief that the university must establish stronger alliances with the public schools in the mutual effort to achieve teacher preparation of the highest quality. The concept is a departure from the standard off-campus student teaching program in that a professor from the university is in residence in the Greece School District full-time for the school year in lieu of visitations to student teachers whenever possible. Miss Helen Safford, assistant professor in the School of Education, is in charge of the program, which has as its nucleus twenty senior student teachers of business education for the academic year. *

It is felt that both the public schools and the university profit from the proximity of the professor to the situation. Some of the benefits to be derived from the program are: improvement of the quality and quantity of supervision because of the ability of the supervisor to be closer to the student teachers, new and creative ideas brought to the staff, the exchange of ideas between cooperating teacher and student, more realistic relations between student teachers and faculty, and availability of the supervisor as a resource person for the school.

Speakers, panel discussions, films, skits and displays will be featured on Earth Day at State University of New York at Albany Wednesday, April 22. Student and faculty members of PYE (Protect Your Environment) are inviting the public to find out what can be done about environmental problems by attending the ^{morning,} /afternoon, and evening teach-in.

Leading off the day's events will be a speaker and panel discussion on the topic of environmental law enforcement. Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz will be the principal speaker. Panelists will include Albany Mayor Erastus Corning and Vincent Schaefer, director of the university's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center. Dwight Metzler, New York State assistant commissioner of health, will moderate. The discussion will take place in the ballroom in Campus Center beginning at 10:30.

In the afternoon, at another speaker and panel discussion, the principal speaker will be Congressman Richard L. Ottinger. The subject will be "Citizen Action: Working with Legislators and the Courts". Among the panelists will be Gerald Handler, assistant administrator of the Northeast Environmental Health Service, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; Peter Costas, patent attorney; and Adrian Gonyea, former city manager of Troy. The program, also to be held in the ballroom, will begin at 1:30. *

Late in the afternoon, at 5:30, the Now Teen Mime Troupe will present "Man and Environment" in the university's Performing Arts Center. Additionally, throughout the all-day teach-in, there will be an environmental fair in the ballroom where displays, information booths, films, and skits have been scheduled.

But in examining the decisions made by men which affect our chances of survival, there is a great cause for concern."

He added, "We seem to consistently choose quantity before quality. institutions we have chosen the quantity of our ever-increasing population. These decisions we have made and continue to make. PYE has organized a teach-in program in order to present the public with information so that decisions determining our future as consumers, and as human beings, can be made intelligently."

A program brochure comments, "The conquest of the earth must end. Man, equipped with a technology and a way of life, daily consumes and degrades the sphere upon which all life depends. We must learn to live within the Finite Earth: an earth finite in resources, limited in tolerance to poisoning, and capable of supporting only a finite population.

"The Environmental Teach-In is a step towards self-consciousness. The people of the earth must be aware of their impact on the environment. Our unchecked numbers, our misdirected consumption cannot proceed without final disaster. Attend the Teach-In. There are things to be done. Life depends on it."

"Welfare Rights and Our National Priorities" will be the subject of the annual institute of the Northeast New York Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers Wednesday, April 29, at State University of New York at Albany. The institute will be held from 1 to 5 in the afternoon in the Assembly Hall at the Campus Center.

Co-sponsored by the university's School of Social Welfare, the program will feature Richard A. Cloward, professor at the Columbia University School of Social Work. Dr. Cloward was associated with the founding of the National Welfare Rights Movement, a grass roots organization of welfare recipients, and continues to be an active participant. He publishes frequently in scholarly and professional journals and in leading magazines such as The Nation, the New Republic, and The Saturday Review. He also was a founder of Mobilization for Youth, a forerunner of Economic Opportunity Community Action programs. Presently he is a member of the board of the New York Civil Liberties Union and the Poverty Rights Action Center.

The discussants will include Chuck Griffin, New York State organizer for the National Welfare Rights Movement; Winifred Bell, of the School of Social Welfare; and Mrs. Vivian Moomaw, of the National Association of Social Workers. Irving Landa, of the SUNYA school, is serving as institute chairman and will preside.

Mr. Griffin, a public school teacher for seven years, has devoted his full time to the Welfare Rights Movement. Dr. Bell has been associated with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and Model Cities programs. She also has written widely in the area of poverty, welfare,

Marilyn Walsh, a graduate student in the School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany, is one of 90 winners of the Herbert H. Lehman Graduate Fellowships in Social Sciences and Public and International Affairs. The awards, presented each year by New York State, were established by the Legislature in honor of the former governor of New York.

Recipients of the award, who are designated as New York State Lehman Fellows, may receive up to $5,000 a year for four years of graduate study, beginning in September 1970. Applications for Herbert H. Lehman Fellowships were received from a total of 1100 candidates who plan to pursue graduate study in a college situated in New York State.

The recipients were chosen by a panel composed of fellowship officers from graduate schools throughout the country. Awards were based on an evaluation of test scores, academic records, and personal qualifications.

The university also has three alternates, D. Sandra Hettum, Donald MacDonald, and Charles Mizejeski.
