Freshmen Present Stunt

CHEER AND SONG LEADER
TRYOUTS

The Freshman stunt, which consisted of a "two act play in two acts" entitled "A Modern Day in King Tut's Court" was put on in Assembly Friday morning, April 13. The first scene depicted the throne room in which was assembled Old King Tut, his attendants and his harem—with his favorite sitting at his knee. Old King Tut was ably played by Mr. Haight, while Margaret Flanagan, as Cleopatra and Mark Antony's pledged lady, basked in the glory of the King's favoritism. The King's worthy attendants, Harry Godfrey and Marion Landon, stood on guard at the sides of his throne, waving palm leaves over his head, while the ladies of his harem reclined on soft cushions. Jenette Manville, Olla Goewey, Miriam Snow, Marjorie Bellows, Muriel Wenzel, Zelma Gorman and Helen Barclay constituted the king's household. Oriental costumes, soft pillows, burning incense, and red roses added to the effectiveness of the scene, while modern slang and ways of vamping aroused the laughter of the upper classmen. An Egyptian dance in solo by Mary Flanagan proved very entertaining as well as one by Ieta Shopmeier and Jeanette Wright, which showed their talent in skipping the light fantastic in Oriental style.

The second scene, consisting of the same setting as the first, was made amusing by a trick handkerchief which hopped around in a mysterious fashion and made everyone wonder just how it was manipulated until a string attachment was discovered. Adaline Sohns and Percy Briggs rendered a jazzy violin duet, giving proof that the present day music can claim some relations with that of olden times—and then—the curtain fell.

Mary Flanagan was the author and producer of the playlet.

Previous to the stunt there was a try-out for next year's song leader. The Freshmen try-outs were Helen

MISS FUTTERER GIVES PLEASING INTERPRETATION OF "THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON"

Dramatics Class Plans Play

Friday night, April 13, in Chancellors Hall, Miss Agnes Futterer gave a most charming and deceptive reading of Sir James M. Barrie's play, The Admirable Crichton, for the benefit of the Dormitory Fund. The reading was deceptive in that it gave the impression of a completely set stage peopled by the distinctly different characters of the play.

The story of the super perfect butler in an aristocratic English household; the trick of fate which wrecked the family on a desert island and reversed the social position of Lord Lome and Crichton, the butler; the return to civilization and the old order of things make the play itself an amusing and interesting one. Miss Futterer, with the aid of three chairs, a table, and her voice and gestures created for the audience the dignified person of Crichton, the pompous Lord Lome, the bored Lady Mary, the cringing Twenceny and the epigrammatic Ernest. She was the play in herself, a most enchanting and lovely play which lasted all too short a time for the delighted audience.

The Dramatics' Class, under Miss Futterer's direction, will present the play "The White Headed Boy" on May 26, in the Vincentian Institute. The play is a quaint Irish comedy which affords great opportunity to the characters. The cast is not yet complete but promises to be an excellent one.

Baseball Season Opens Saturday

STATE MEETS UNION AT RIDGEFIELD

On Saturday, April 21, State will play its first scheduled baseball game of the season with Union at Ridgefield. The game with the Albany Y. M. C. A. was not played, but a game with Albany High took its place. Albany High did most of its scoring in the first two innings, and State piled up its scores in a bunch during the fourth and fifth innings. While the game showed good playing on the part of both teams it also gave them an opportunity to pick out their weak points. The game ended with a tie score of 6—6.

The game was an excellent practice game for State before playing Union. While no definite line-up can be given for Saturday's game, the prospects are as follows: For the infield—Sage, McMann, Caton, Rude, Cassavant, Stahlman, and Daley. For the outfield—Smith, Cole, Crane, Davis, Roberts, and Snyder. For the pitchers there will be Gainor, Caton and Casarette, with Anderson in the catcher's box.

The freshmen men on the team have all had experience on High School teams and the upperclassmen have had experience either on College or Normal teams.

Tax tickets admit college students to the game. This is the first game of the season. It is also a home game, and the support of the whole student body is desired.

PUTNAM TO MANAGE BASKETBALL TEAM NEXT SEASON

Juckett Basketball Captain—Scott Baseball Manager

At a meeting of the Athletic Council held Thursday, April 12, the election of captain and manager of basketball for next year took place.

Oliver Putnam, better known as "Put" was elected manager. "Put" has been working for the basketball team since his freshman year and will be a manager with plenty of experience to back him up.

Edwin Juckett was elected captain of the team. "Jucks" fighting spirit and good guarding which he has shown in basketball ever since his freshman year has won him this place. He was unanimously elected by the council.

Frederic Scott '24 will manage the baseball team next season. "Scotty" also has a great deal of experience and will undoubtedly handle the baseball affairs creditably.

A REQUEST

We wish our contributors would realize that in order to get their "News" out on time each Friday, it is necessary for all material intended for publication to be in the office before the Monday noon previous. In this way more time can be given to the makeup of the paper.

If sorority and club reporters will try to get their notes in on time, the editors and printers can give more careful attention to arrangement and composition. We trust that this will be kept in mind. Can we have your cooperation?

STUDENT COMMENT

COLLEGE SPIRIT vs BARBARISM

In assembly on Friday, representatives of the class of '26 entertained the student body by an interesting stunt. We believe that the frosh merit much praise and commendatory encouragement for their initial appearance before State College. If they are able to maintain the reputation gained by Friday's performance thruout their collegiate course, they will surely attain the high water mark of success socially. Note particularly that there was no slam or even the slightest derogatory remark against their traditionally inimical rivals of '25. There was nothing antagonistic or challenging in the entire stunt—it was just a piece of good fun and jolly humor presented for the entertainment and amusement of the student body.

Just as the curtain was being drawn on the last act of the performance, there was hurled from a certain section of the auditorium a great deluge of cabbage, grapefruit, onions, books and so forth. Instantly the warriors behind the curtains charged with full force and the loaded (with juice!) missiles came whizzing back thru the air, bespattering the floor and seats with pulp, juice, and seeds. The innocent suffered with the guilty, for even the non-combatants sustained a wreckly spoilation of armor in the guises of dresses. After a further discharge of weapons from both armies, the participating legion on the auditorium flank of the trench, which consisted of the curtain, made one wild rush for the exit and dashed out on top speed, hardly delaying to hurl back the scattered instruments of attack. And it all happened so quickly and unexpectedly that the student body was at first hardly conscious of the proceedings. Then it became aware of the conflict and immediately there arose a great commotion. Everyone jumped up and rushed toward the scene of action, uttering cries of exclamation and astonishment at the hurlers of onions and cabbages! Then there was much pointing to a particular spot on the wall above the platform, much wide-eyed expression, and a great deal of discussion among the women as they gazed at the offensive, ugly stain of fruit juice raised to such a lofty and conspicuous position by the results of vegetarian warfare. Thus even our assembly bears the marks of vicious operations.

May we ask first; was such conduct fair to the sophomore class? It was neither indulged in nor sanctioned by the concerted action of that class. Was it fair that a group of individuals should disturb and disrupt the entire student body? And was such lawless behavior fair to the dictates of Myskania? Did it symbolize respect for or obedience to the rulings of our governing organization to preserve law and order in the college community? Finally is such vehement and unkindly action included in that great code which constitutes college spirit? No!!!

A FABLE

Once upon a time in the days of long ago, there were a great many young men and maidens gathered unto a great institution of learning. Now these many people were divided unto four great classes at this great institution, and each class, according to custom, was requested to produce a play for the benefit and amusement of their fellows.

The oldest class presented their play, and there was naught but applause among the assembly. The next oldest class presented theirs with a similar result.

Now it came time for the next youngest class to give their play and the young men of the very youngest class, feeling it their duty to give a new form of applause to their rival class, went down to the beach and gathered many small pebbles. And after the play had been given the young men did not applaud as usual but hurled the pebbles which they so carefully gathered.

At last the younger class gave their play, and this time the young men of the second class, wishing to outdo their younger brothers, had gone up into the mountains and gathered huge rocks by which to signify their applause.

Now, after many days upon earth the young men of both classes were summoned before Zeus on Mount Olympus. And Zeus remembering the plays where the young men had so willingly hurled rocks, decreed that for several eons the young men should be allowed to increase their skill at hurling missiles. But in case the hurling rocks should become too dangerous a sport he bade them practice with the best vegetables from the king's garden. And the scribe wrote in the Book of Deeds and Men, "They that hurlerth—"

SERIOUS THOTS

The last lap of the race is before us, the final warning gong was rung on Thursday last, and the most laggard of the entrants knows that the time has come when he must put forth his best effort—or be left behind at the finish. Of course, each of us reacted differently to this knowledge according as his age, class and general record of work accomplished varied.

To the seniors, who have covered much the same course three previous times, this gong meant a number of things; it acted as a fore-announcer of the fact that their play-days are almost at an end, and that short indeed is the time before another period of their life will be definitely rounded out. And such is the perversity of human nature, that although they have spent four long years in preparing themselves for entrance into this, the "derby" of educational fields, they are not now totally happy at seeing the goal so near at hand. The coveted gold seal with all that for which it stands, does not seem quite so desirable now, as it did four years ago, in view of all that must be renounced to attain it.

To the juniors, this warning meant that an added burst of vigor applied immediately to their "ed" theses would be very apropos. The sophomores gave an indifferent shrug in the direction of '26, as though to signify how impossible it would be for anyone to think such superior beings as they need take heed—and then began privately to brush up on "emotions" and "sensations." while the freshman—alas poor infants, they have been roughly awakened from their dream that all tracks this side of the regents' one were thornless, and are flocking ensemble to the library.

But some of the feelings of the students were general when it was so forcibly brought to their attention that the second semester is more than half over. The usual vain regrets that more had not been accomplished, the usual bewilderment that the time had flown so quickly and the usual promises of what hard work the future will witness. This latter will probably receive more than the ordinary amount of attention in the next two months due to the wonders that "extra pressure" are said to accomplish. But whatever the cause which prompts you to work, whether it be a true student's desire for knowledge, or a mere catering to A's, we wish you success, and trust you may deserve it.

G. A. A. NOTES

The juniors did not surprise us when they carried off the basketball championship last week. We congratulate them upon their brilliant undefeated season.

Their college debut three years ago, when their first team defeated the sophomores, an almost unheard of occurrence at State, promised some kind of dazzling career. Yet youthful prodigies are often looked upon askance as being too good to live. We find the exception in our unusual class of juniors whose illustrious squad is composed of:

Heinemann, r. f., Miller, l. f., Liebeck, c., Belding, r. g., Bach, l. g.

Tomorrow night is a big night in athletic circles! The Alumnae's famous stars of former years will play the Varsity team. Finish your dinner early, gather your friends about you, and bring them over to the gym. at half past seven. If they do not care for basketball, whisper in their ear that there will be dancing afterward. They will then not be concerned over parting with twenty-five cents, especially if you tell them it goes toward the erection of our new residence hall.

Monday evening April 30, Miss Johnson is planning for an interclass athletic meet and exhibition. Sophomores and freshmen will be obliged to take part in competitive marching, calisthenics, and dancing. Besides class work, there will be non-compulsory class competition on the apparatus.

Juniors and seniors, since gymnasium work is not compulsory with them, will not be required to enter the meet; but interested members of the two classes are invited and urged to participate.

An added attraction for spectators will be general dancing after the meet.

We are expecting the exhibitions to attract three classes of people: those who are interested in athletics, those who enjoy dancing, and those who are interested in the coming dormitory, for the twenty-five cents admission is for that benefit. Pardon! There should really be only two classes! We are all interested in the dorm.

If you can't attend, buy a ticket anyway.

A Family Matter.

A man of considerable position and importance confesses, with a merry twinkle in his eye, to a serious blow to his reputation from an unexpected quarter.

His small son returned from school and confronted his father with the question, "Father, what are you?"

"What am I, my boy? Why do you ask?"

"Well, father," was the reply, "Jenkins came up to me in the dinner hour and said, 'What's your father?' 'And what did you say?' asked his father."

"I didn't say anything," answered the boy. "I just hit him."—Tit-Bits.

Her Mind Upon It

"It is very annoying," he said to his wife when they returned from the bridge party; "you asked what was trump at least a dozen times."

"Yes, dear, I know," she explained, "but I really didn't have to. I did it to show I was taking an interest in the game."—Boston Transcript.

Clerk: Is he a big man?

"No, he's just a bookkeeper, but he's going to be."

The clergyman felt annoyed to find that an old gentleman fell asleep during the sermon on two consecutive Sundays. So after service finally he asked the boy who accompanied the sleeper into the vestry.

"My boy, who is that elderly gentleman you attend church with?"

"Grandpa."

"Well, if you will keep him awake during my sermon I'll give you a nickel each week."

For the next two weeks the old gentleman was attentive to the sermon. The third week, however, found him soundly asleep again.

The vexed clergyman sent for the boy. "Didn't you promise to keep him awake if I paid you a nickel a week?"

"Yes, but grandpa now gives me a dime not to disturb him."

NOTICE FROM DEAN OF WOMEN

All extra-curricular affairs that are to take place during the day are registered in the office of the Dean of Women. The Dean will aid in assigning a room and in suggesting a time for committees, club, and other group meetings so that a minimum of confusion may result.

For permitted evening affairs, the Dean will provide at the time the function is registered, cards which are made out in duplicate and left in her office at least 24 hours before the affair is to take place. This insures the committee in charge that the building will be open to them.

The college furnishes tickets of admission to functions that are held in the evening and at which there is the problem of uninvited guests. These are stamped by the official stamp in Dean Pierce's office and, after collection, are filed there.

The names of those students who are serving on a committee of arrangements for an evening function of this nature are to be registered in the Dean's office, and the names of the floor committee, if dancing is to be permitted, must be given in full. It is suggested that the committee in charge of affairs of this kind complete arrangements for chaperonage at least one week before the function takes place.
