Welcome Faculty

When welcomes are extended by student newspapers, they usually center entirely on students. We wish to welcome our new faculty and our new staff members.

No university community is composed entirely of students; the community is made up of everyone from President Collins to a freshman to a kitchen worker. We of the ASP hope you will all be members of our reading audience and that you will feel free to express your opinions in letters to our

We extend a special greeting to the new professors, instructors and graduate assistants. We are enthusiastic in this welcome because of the position teaching holds in this university.

Albany State has never been a "publish or perish" institution. The teaching of students and the counseling of students are of as great importance as publishing. We feel this is as it should

Activities Day

Welcome, freshmen, to our forever expanding University. Like most freshmen you are eager to take an active part in the various activities on cam-

Tomorrow on Activities Day you will receive your chance to sign up for these activities. In your eagerness many of you will probably join several organizations. This is all well and good, if you are going to be able to be an active member in the organization.

But many of you will find that you do not have enough time to devote to each organization. If this happens, you will become a vestigial member in each activity you join.

To avoid becoming a do-nothing member, just sign up for a few organizations. Be active in only them and contribute as much as you can. If you find you have additional time to contribute to other activities then do so.

But it is better to be active in a few organizations, than to become deadwood in many.

There are interesting sidelights to most controversies. The witchhunt over The Torch is no exception.

Now that The Torch is preparing its book for 1966, it is going through a process of evaluating the various sections of the 1965 book.

The section that evoked the greatest number of complaints was the section on the fraternities and sororities.

Of eight sororities, not one has paid its bill to the yearbook. The first bill was sent last April. Two notices were also ignored. Only KB of the five frats has bothered to fulfill its financial ob-

Probably the most common criticism of the conference was that there were "too many lectures." The opening convocation, for example, received the lowest percent of excellent and very good ratings (39.5%), but 43.7% of the eshmen found it "satisfactory." Talks on the new student gov-

S.P.C. Emphasizes Scholastic Responsibilities, Freedoms

"Welcome to Albany's community of scholars. No matter what you thought of yourself before, here at Albany we think and assume that you are a person who is coming to college to learn."

With these words at the Opening Convocation, Dr. Howard Maxwell Director of Academic Advisement set the tone for the Summer Planning Conference.

From the very beginning of the conference, the freshmen were treated as scholars. Each activity was geared to acquaint them with the freedoms and responsibilities of a scholar in an academic community.

Individual Freedoms
"The freedoms that you will experience can be a misleading drug and will prove to be your most valuable lesson of the freshman year," continued Dr. Maxwell. "The test of real maturity will be the use of this freedom with responsibility.

"The student remembers that he is here in college to make of himself all that he is capable of becoming. He has an obligation to his family, state, and nation, as well as to himself, to take advantage of the educational opportunities that are available here at the University."

Dr. Morris, who spoke to the group earlier, outlined the resibility which the University felt in helping students to achieve this feeling of community.
"The State University of New York at Albany is committed to the elimination of those causes which tend to annihilate the feeling of personal worth on the part of the individual," he said.

"You will find that almost all members of this faculty, adminisdence hall directors, and resident assistants are ready, willing, and able to discuss any matter of personal concern to you at any time.

University Extends Help

Dr. Maxwell also spoke of the University's willingness to extend aid, especially in regard to the University College, "We are ex-perienced in helping freshmen through a year that will prove to be exciting and at times difficult.

I think you will find that we can be of great help to you, but you must let us know when you do need help."

This responsibility of the fresh-man to take the initiative was emphasized by Richard Thompson Chairman of Central Council, in his explanation of the student government structure.

"Through the Central Council-Commission form of government, the causes of individual discontenhopefully be eliminated, But it depends upon your support and your involvement in the govern-

"Your primary concern is academic achievement. But there is much to be gained from the many activities and programs available activities and programs available here. If you are to fully develop your potential, I feel, it is neces-sary that you seek out the avenue which can best fulfill your needs."

The emphasis on individual responsibility carried throughout the three-day program. It also formed the essence of the concluding remarks of Dr. Morris.

"You are to be congratulated on your demonstrated intellectua ability. Your records are of high caliber - You have the ability to do the work here - there is no doubt about this fact.

"You will get out of your collegiate education as much as you put into it. However, as in any phase of a person's life, you will only get from your collegiate edu-cation in proportion to that which you give to it."

THE TALK NEVER STOPPED, especially during meals. The good food was only a background for more conversation, more information, more friendships.

Dr. Morris talked with the parents at length about probable changes in academic performance. A RayView of Sports

by Ray McCloat

Peering out of my lofty.tower abode out on the new campus earlier this week, I watched the spectacular movement of some 1300 freshmen letting their presence be felt on the SUNYA scene. Included in the formation were approximately 600 males, reportedly in healthy states of mind and body and seemingly enjoying being outnumbered by members of the opposite sex. A typial freshman class,

Now, being of unsound mind and body, what else does an ASP (that's the name of the newspaper) sports editor do but wonder how many of those sound specimens will lend themselves to the ause of bettering State athletics. Having already established the class as "typical," the answer is an unfortunate too few, far too few."

Over the past several years Albany has been experiencing a tremendous growth in size, population, and prestige, all of which has been effected by the power of SUNYA's by word - transition. We are in the process of performing a transition from a State Teachers College to a State University. Academically and architecturally we are succeeding; athletically we are not.

Turnout Smaller

For a good many years now, Albany's incoming class has been "biggerand better" than the preceding one. And yet, of late, the turnout for athletic teams has been progressively smaller (percentagewise). Perhaps increased academic pressure or apprehensions about intercollegiate competition has served to dissuade high school athletes from taking up sports in college. Whatever the reasons, the end result is always the same for school-poorer andpoorer teams.

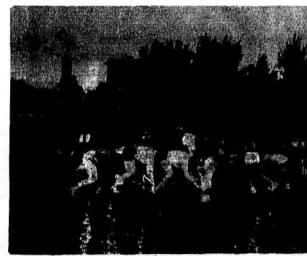

In part the school is to be blamed. Recruiting restrictions, lack of administration support, poor facilities, and general hardships on athletes have all helped to push State athletics into the back seat of SUNYA's transitional movement. Oh, granted we've changed our mascot from a penguin to a great dane, but nominal changes aren't the kind our athletic system needs.

Hope With Frosh

Only the administration can correct the aforementioned faults; it could be a long wait. And with most upperclassmen well rooted in their college careers, the great hope of Albany's athletic program lies in the incoming Class of 1969.

What the men of the Class of '69 can do is examine the State sports program, evaluate the sports and what you can offer them and what they can offer you, and, finally, decide if you can fit a sport into your academic schedule. If you have any questions about time budgeting, or if you wonder about your qualifications for making a team, just consult with your gym instructor. He'll be more than glad to help you.

I can't imagine any freshman not being proud of being a member of the class that revived State's fine old tradition in athletics. That revival is long

Richard Thompson, President of Central Council, said that he hoped to have these constitutions ratified by October 15. He said that the two commission representatives on the council will act as a medium between heir individual commission and the council in putting the finishing touches on the constitution.

Thursday Meetings

Thompson said that the council will meet every Thursday night until the work on the constitution is completed. He said hopefully, "if the theory behind the government works out, the council will not have to meet every week be-Excitement and variety have become the keynote to be directed by James E. Leonard.
