Max Lerner, author, professor of American Civilization at Brandeis University and syndicated columnist for the New York Post will give the address at the 121st annual commencement exercise at State University at Albany. His topic will be "The Continuing American Revolution." The program will begin at 10 a. m. on June 13 at Thurlow Terrace when 1080 degrees will be conferred by Dr. Evan R. Collins, president of the University.

Dr. Lerner did his college and law studies at Yale University, his graduate work at the Brookings Graduate School, and has taught at Sarah Lawrence College, Williams College, and Harvard University. He is currently Professor of American Civilization and World Politics at Brandeis University.

His recent book, AMERICA AS A CIVILIZATION (1957) received wide acclaim and has been a best-seller since its publication. It has been translated and published around the world, and is now available in a 2-volume paperback edition here. His latest book is THE AGE OF OVERKILL, subtitled A PREFACE TO WORLD POLITICS (1962).

He has travelled as a journalist and scholar to almost every part of the world -- Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Middle East. He has recently spent a year in Europe, in connection with a Ford grant for research and study of the shape of the new emerging Europe. He returned from Europe on June 10.

Commencement program participants will include faculty members, Rabbi Alvin Roth and Rev. Frank L. Snow, both of Albany, and the University Band.

In the event of inclement weather, the commencement exercises will be held at the Palace Theater.

In a commencement address this morning at State University of New York at Albany, Max Lerner, author, professor of American civilization at Brandeis University, and columnist, told an audience of over 5,000 that "we shall never be able to eliminate the tragic from life, but we can and must remove the pathetic, the man-made social obstacles which prevent the growing youngster in America from becoming a man or woman who can explore life's heights and depths and endure life's tragedies without being crushed by them."

Dr. Lerner said to the throng gathered on Thurlow Terrace, "Men are not equal because they are born with different potentials, but we must give all of them equal access to equal life chances, so that each may develop his potentials as nearly as possible to the full. The civil rights revolution is part of that revolution of equal access. If we carry it off well it will prove the most powerful resource at our command in the world political war."

"The greatest revolution ahead is the time revolution, made possible by automation," Dr. Lerner emphasized that "this time will not mean much unless we can rid ourselves of our sleazy attitudes toward 'the job' and recapture from the Protestant ethic of the past the idea of the dignity and creativeness of work."

At the 121st annual commencement exercise Dr. Evan R. Collins, president, conferred 1034 degrees. Among the 712 students receiving bachelor degrees were 112 honor students. Three in the class were graduated summa cum laude; twenty-nine, magna cum laude; and eighty, cum laude.

Excerpts from the commencement address by Max Lerner, author, professor of American Civilization at Brandeis University and syndicated columnist for the New York Post, at State University of New York at Albany, Sunday, June 13, at 10 a.m.

THE CONTINUING AMERICAN REVOLUTION

In the deepest sense of the term, "revolution", the American society into which we are moving -- computer-gearred, information-directed, leisure-oriented -- will be an authentic revolutionary society. But we must make certain that it will not become a "brave new world," squeezed dry of human values, a world in which automation results in a kind of automated man. We shall never be able to eliminate the tragic from life. But we can and must remove the pathetic -- the manmade social obstacles which prevent the growing youngster in America from becoming a man or woman who can explore life's heights and depths and endure life's tragedies without being crushed by them. Poverty, slums, alcoholism, addiction, racial discrimination, religious bigotry: these are not tragic; they are pathetic. Because they are man-made they can be man-resolved. Men are not equal because they are born with different potentials, but we must give all of them equal access to equal life chances, so that each may develop his potentials as nearly as possible to the full. The civil rights revolution is part of that revolution of equal access. If we carry it off well it will prove the most powerful resource at our command in the world political was.

America is also caught in an uprooting revolution which will make it difficult to develop the whole person in a creative culture. We have been uprooted from the soil, the farm, from the small town, now even from the neighborhood and the city core, from religion, from tradition, from the cohesive family. This is part of the price we have to pay for the accelerated change of our time.

But there are also things happening in American society which bring within our reach a chance to build a sense of identity. These are the knowledge and education explosion, the paperback explosion, the reading revolution, the cultural explosion, the communications explosion. The greatest revolution ahead is therefore the time revolution, made possible by automation. But this time will not mean much unless we can rid ourselves of our sleazy attitudes toward "the job" and recapture from the Protestant ethic of the past the idea of the dignity and creativeness of work.

Dear Dr. Schultze:

The Financial Aids committee of the University has determined the scholarship recipients from the class of 1969. It is with real pleasure that I forward these names to you for confirmation by the Alumni Association and inclusion in the Alumni Day program.

As a matter of interest, I would indicate that each of these young men and women maintained a ninety (90.0) or better Regent average throughout their high school career. They all have demonstrated, beyond a doubt, that financial assistance is necessary for continuation of their education.

Thank you for your assistance and understanding co-operation in this matter.

Very truly yours,

The responsibility of the faculty in the academic community will be the subject of an hour long lecture to be delivered by Dr. Evan R. Collins, president of the State University at Albany, at a three day institute on higher education being sponsored by Boston College's School of Education on June 16. The title of his lecture will be, "Who is the Administration?"

Participants at the annual institute are drawn mainly from faculty and administration in northeastern colleges and universities although 18 states were represented last year. Overall theme for the institute is "Critical Issues in Higher Education." Other topics discussed in the Institute include: College Teaching, Faculty Responsibility in the Academic Community, The Philosophy of Student Personnel, Application of Student Personnel Philosophy, Management of Student Publications, The Philosophy of College Administration, Administrative Theory, and The College Calendar.

No stranger to the Boston area, Dr. Collins earned his masters and doctors degree in education at Harvard after receiving his B.A. at Dartmouth. He also served as assistant dean of the school of education at Harvard before serving as dean at Ohio University and president at SUA. Dr. Collins is currently serving as president of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Forty school librarians from 13 states will participate in a special institute during the summer session, July 5 - August 13, at the State University of New York at Albany, sponsored by the School of Library Science.

Using National Defense Education Act funds, the Institute is designed to explore administrative and supervisory problems involved in developing and supervising instructional materials centers and to examine new media, equipment, and techniques. Participants are restricted to librarians who are now or will be soon, directors or supervisors of school libraries.

The institute will be housed in special quarters in the Dutch Quadrangle residence hall on the new $80 million University campus. All facilities of the new and old campuses will be available and used, including closed circuit television.

Dr. Susan Smith, professor of library science at SUA is institute director. Assistant director is professor Vincent Aceto who just returned from a year's service at the University of Dacca in Pakistan.

Participants in the Institute include librarians from: N. Y., 12; Penna., 4; Mass., 2; Ala., 2; N. J., 2; and one each from Wash., Calif., S. C., Mo., Dela., Conn., Ohio, and Md.

Their names, addresses and school systems follow.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Frances D. Clark of 58 Laurel Avenue, Cornwall attended the institute. She is librarian of Cornwall Central High School. Although library oriented, the institute provided introductions to the rapid changes currently taking place in education nationally and presented concrete data on innovations at the state level.

Mrs. Clark's personal assignment at the institute revolved around the preparation of a report for the school administrators, the Board of Education and the people of Cornwall interested in educational improvements. The report concerned the conversion of the Cornwall Central High School Library to an instructional materials center. Included was an explanation of the concept of such a center, its purpose and how the services provided by such a center will enrich the educational opportunities of area high school students. It sought to demonstrate that such conversion is timely and presented a projected five-year plan for complete implementation. A floor plan outlining the utilization of existing library facilities and audio-visual equipment accompanied the report.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Ruth Itkin of 6 Oak Terrace, New City, who serves as coordinator of the elementary libraries for the Clarkstown Central Schools, attended the institute. Mrs. Itkin has worked for the development of school libraries in Rockland County for many years. She plans to use the information and techniques developed during her stay in Albany to strengthen the contribution of the school libraries as resource centers for the teachers and students of Clarkstown. The development of libraries as the instructional materials centers within the schools is considered by many to be a major step forward in support of the curriculum of both elementary and secondary schools of today.

Mrs. Itkin is a graduate of Brooklyn College and the Columbia University School of Library Science. She has worked in supervision and administration of libraries at Rutgers University and the City College of New York. Mrs. Itkin has served as president of the Rockland County Association of School Librarians, as trustee of the New City Public Library, and is currently chairman of the Supervisors Section of the New York Librarians' Association.

Attention: Education Editor, Rhinebeck Gazette

Miss Mary Decker, 110 East Market Street, Rhinebeck, a attended the institute. She is librarian at Rhinebeck C Central School, Rhinebeck.

Miss Decker's project at the institute was to examine and evaluate media needed for library service in Rhinebeck's elementary school. Consultants who can advise possibility of materials and equipment under the NDEA Elementary and Secondary Education Act and other funds were accessible at the institute.

Benjamin Meffert, librarian at Webutuck Central School, and Miss Decker are developing a proposal to establish a county or regional instructional materials center to make available, even to small districts, services, equipment and materials which cannot be economically nor practically purchased by the individual district.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Jean Badten, coordinator of Library Services for the Federal Way School District, Federal Way, Washington, who attended the institute, has been working on a special project of studying the existing library program within the district and providing means for improving instructional materials and services of all kinds within each school and to all school district personnel. The work will be coordinated closely with the new branch of the King County Schools' Instructional Materials Center which will be located in Federal Way this fall, serving Federal Way, Kent, Auburn, Enumclaw, and South Central School districts.

Attention: Education Editor,

Miss Mary McGuiness, librarian at the Hicksville Senior High School, who attended the institute is preparing a suggested policy for library services in the Hicksville school system which will combine the multi media with the present facilities. The NDEA institute is cultivating the idea of an instructional materials center which gradually replace the traditional library program.

Attention: Education Editor,

Miss Myrtle O. Ennett, librarian at William P.
Bancroft Junior High School, Wilmington, Delaware, attended the institute.

Attention: Education Editor, Newsday

Three librarians from Nassau County attended the institute. They are Mrs. Justine Sullivan of Mineola, librarian of the Cross Street School, Williston Park; Mrs. Mary McGuinness, of Levittown, librarian of Hicksville Senior High School; and Mrs. Mary Martin of Levittown, district chairman and Senior High Librarian in Island Trees School District. They studied many changes in education, particularly those involving instructional services with the aim of improving library resources and service to schools.

Attention: Education Editor, Buffalo Evening News

Mrs. Richard F. Weil, librarian at Fillmore Junior High School, 106 Appenheimer Street, Buffalo, New York, participated in the institute.

In the light of the modern concept of the library as the key resource center for all educational media, Mrs. Weil is reexamining the library program in the junior high school to expand library services to include the materials resource center concept.

Attention: Education Editor,

Attending the institute from the Capital District was Mrs. Ethel Severinghaus, a librarian in the Guilderland Central School District, and former president of the Eastern New York School Librarians' Association. Mrs. Severinghaus explored the areas of need that may best be served by the individual school library, the school district resource center, and the area or regional cooperative educational resource center.

Attention: Education Editor, Amsterdam Evening Recorder

Mrs. Evelyn Riccio, 59 Arnold Avenue, Amsterdam, ~~who attended~~ the institute joined in a program of research and inquiry into the concept of the school library as an instructional materials center. In view of the great technological advances which have made non-print materials a vital force, participants planned new ways to make their libraries a key resource in education. Mrs. Riccio is librarian at Wilbur H. Lynch Senior High School, Amsterdam.

Attention: Education Editor, Cheektowaga Times

Arvilla Annis of Cleveland Hill High School, attended the institute. Her project concerned methods of improving and extending materials and services of the instructional materials centers in the Cleveland Hill Schools.

Attention: Education Editor, Norwich Sun

Miss Laura Wedge of 17 Maple Street, Norwich, head librarian of the Norwich City Schools, attended the institute. She explored the instructional materials center concept as it might be applied in the Norwich area. The trend to expand current library services to meet rapidly changing educational needs involves all types of communication media and materials. Miss Wedge is focusing her work on the Senior High School library as an example.

Attention: Education Editor, Nyack Journal News

Mrs. Miriam Wexler, 245 Broadway, Upper Nyack, attended the institute. She has developed a plan of library service which emphasizes the flexible use of library facilities, as an initial step toward the transformation of the traditional library into an instructional materials center. Mrs. Wexler, librarian at Hempstead school, Spring Valley, is planning to enrich the collection with audio-visual materials for the use of children as well as teachers and to provide unscheduled time for them to use the materials independently.

Attention: Education Editor, Quincy Patriot Ledger

Denise M. Buckley, director of Library Services for the city of Quincy School Department,, attended the institute.

Attention: Education Editor, Carlisle Evening Sentinel

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Owen, 141 S. Big Spring Avenue, Newville, Pennsylvania, director of the Secondary Library Program for the Cumberland Valley School District, attended the institute where her special project was the development of policies and procedures for implementing use of the Instructional Materials Center of Cumberland Valley's new Good Hope Junior High School, as well as the development of criteria for the proposed staff of the center and a program for the orientation of teachers to the instructional materials concept within the framework of the "team-teaching concept" which is proposed for the new junior high school.

Mrs. Lucy Costello of 16 Stivers Street, Cresskill, New Jersey attended the institute. She has been librarian of the Albert C. Tice Memorial Library of the Waldwick Junior Senior High School since it opened in September, 1963.

The library will become the library-materials center of the school. Mrs. Costello participated in the institute to become more familiar with the latest methods, practices and materials needed to organize, and supervise such a center.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Arlene Sargeant, librarian at Cairo Central School, attended the institute. She plans to set up an instructional materials center using all types of media. Mrs. Sargeant is especially interested in starting a professional collection for the teachers and administration and in getting a variety of equipment for audio-visual instruction over a five-year period.

Attention: Education Editor, Lowville Journal
Republican

Evelyn Hughes of RD 1, Port Layden attended the institute. She is librarian at South Lewis Central Schools, Turin.

Using some of the ideas gained from the institute concerning the concept of the library as an instructional center, Mrs. Hughes will attempt to provide more opportunity for individual study by students and teachers in the South Lewis Junior-Senior High library. A basic professional collection is part of her project.

Attention: Education Editor, Patent Trader

Martin Brech of Archer Road, Mohopac attended the inst institute. He is librarian at Briarcliff High School, -B Briarcliff Manor.

In anticipation of a new high school in the Briarcliff area, Mr. Brech's term project was to prepare a report advocating the creation of an instructional materials center as the 'heart' of the new school. Such a center would include not only printed matter but other audio-visual media. Thus this expanded library concept would more adequately meet the increasing emphasis in education upon independent, individualized study, along with team teaching, flexible scheduling and a multi-media approach to learning.

Attention: Education Editor, Anniston Star

Mrs. Joy E. Clemons of 1705 West 21st. Street, Anniston, Alabama, attended the institute. She is head librarian at Cobb Avenue High School, Anniston,

M Mrs. Clemons' project growing out of the study is a plan for the improvement of the library and library services at Cobb Avenue High School necessitated by growth toward an instructional materials center. As a member of the institute, she became familiar with the techniques of operation and instructional use of all kinds of educational media, and through field trips, she saw various types of instructional materials centers in the state of New York.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Harris of 6756 Blakemore Street, Philadelphia Pennsylvania, attended the institute. She is librarian at Strawberry Mansion High School, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Harris's main project at the institute was the planning of an effective instructional materials center at the new Strawberry Mansion Junior High School located at Ridge and Susquehanna Avenues in Philadelphia.

Attention: Education Editor, Geneva Times

Mrs. Jane Renshaw, 20 Pleasant Street, Clifton Springs, attended the institute. She is librarian at Clifton Springs Central School, Clifton Springs.

After studying the concept of an instructional materials center and its role in the modern school, Mrs. Renshaw worked out as her individual project a plan to expand elementary library services at Clifton Springs Central School. The intent was to provide many new and varied learning materials and to promote their use in local classrooms.

Attention: Education Editor,

Mrs. Justine Sullivan, librarian at Cross Street School, Williston Park, L. I., attended the institute for the purpose of incorporating the concept of multi-media processes with the present facilities at the Cross Street School library.

Mrs. Sullivan is a graduate of Hunter College and earned her master's degree at Columbia University.

Attention: Education Editor, Birmingham News

Mrs. Ruth W. Waldrop, library consultant for Alabama's Jefferson County Schools, was among those chosen to take special education courses in the organization and administration of instructional materials centers. The work included information about individual schools and county and district systems.

Early in the fall the present collection of instructional materials now housed in the Curriculum Library of the Jefferson County Board of Education offices in the Court-house Annex will be moved to expanded quarters. The new street level location will be on the south west corner of the Board of Education's present property on 21st Street. Plans are being made by Dr. Kermit A. Johnson and members of the Jefferson County Board of Education, C.R. Bottenfield, president, to expand the materials and services of the Instructional Materials Center. The center will serve the 115 schools and more than 2,000 teachers in the Jefferson County System. It will be under the direction of Dr. Joel Hewitt Burgess, Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction.

Over 200 capital area school custodians will be attending the 15th Annual Custodial Conference sponsored by the Capital Area School Development Association, a service organization with headquarters at State University at Albany.

The three day session will begin June 29, at the Ravena-Coeymans Central High School with a keynote address by Franklyn S. Barry, superintendent of schools in Syracuse and past president of the New York State Teachers Association. His topic will be: "Preparation for a Changing School Environment".

Other principal speakers include Alton U. Farnsworth, superintendent of schools, Guilderland; John Buckhoff, plant superintendent, State University at Albany; and, Laurie Davie, supervisor of industrial relations of the Atlantic Cement Company.

Each year operations and maintenance personnel participate in the three-day workshop for which the New York State Civil Service Department grants a certificate of attendance. Classes will be held on "Electricity," "Small Gasoline Engines," "Basic Machines," and "Woodworking."

In connection with this year's conference, a handbook has been developed describing "Basic Machines" as tools for efficient use of energy. The handbook was written by Robert L. Lorette, professor of educational administration at the Albany University.
