The annual "Parents' Night" of Milne High School will be held tonight at 8:00 o'clock. The program will be opened by speeches to the parents in the Page Hall auditorium.

After the speeches the parents will have an opportunity to inspect the pupils' work, which will be on exhibition in the open class rooms.

Punch and cookies made by the cooking classes will be served in the Home Economics rooms. The table will be set for a St. Patrick's Day luncheon. Notebooks, posters, and many clever tricks and articles of sewing will also be shown.

Motion pictures of various subjects studied by Junior High students will be shown in the Biology room (320). Experiments and soap carvings are a few of the many exhibits which will be found in the General Science room.

Exhibits of every subject will be found in the proper rooms. Although this night has been set aside for the parents, the students are invited to conduct their parents through the school.

"JUNIOR HIGH PAPERS TO CONSIST OF 60% FEATURE STORIES AND 40% NEWS", MISS MOORE REPORTS

TRAFFIC CLUB ANNOUNCES RULES

Betty Reudemann, president of the Traffic Club, announces the following rules: everyone should put his chair back under the table when he finishes lunch in the Cafeteria. Also, all food and papers should be thrown in the basket provided for them.

BIOLOGY PUPILS FINISH PROJECT

The pupils in the ninth year biology class have just finished a project on fish. This project consisted of life histories, spawning habits, food, conservation, and respiration of different species of fish. On the day before the project ended, motion pictures of a New England Cod Fishery were shown. The pupils had the use of live fish which they paid for themselves.

Original soap carvings pertaining to biology may be seen in room 320.

"We were told at the Columbia Scholastic Press Association Convention that it is a good policy to have sixty per cent of the Junior High paper made up of feature stories, and that forty per cent should consist of news. The reverse is true of the good Senior High School paper," Miss Moore told a JUNIOR Crimson and White representative today.

Mr. Stefansson, world traveler and authority on Alaska, and Sir Willmott Lewis were some of the speakers who addressed the convention.

The Crimson and White was awarded second place in the mimeographed school paper class. The Milne High representatives brought back some samples of other school papers.

JUNIOR HIGH ASSEMBLIES

In homerooms we have been discussing proposed changes in the future junior high assemblies. In the first place, the question of faculty participation was brought up. We do not believe that the faculty should take part in our assemblies because their program would make ours seem poor in comparison. Then, too, we do not believe that the faculty has enough time to prepare a program.

The question of singing popular songs in assembly has been brought up. We think this is a very good idea for many of us are better acquainted with these songs and do not enjoy singing songs that are not popular. Many of the students will have an opportunity to learn recent music in assembly.

LITERARY

THE MYSTERIES OF ENGLAND (conclusion)

The dog looked at the man intelligently, then at the house and then he began to sniff. In a second he would have been off had not the man held on to him. The man called an officer and together they were led by the dog across lawns and streets to the lot behind Greystokes' mansion. They were led over to a clump of bushes, where, to their surprise, they found the entrance to a secret underground tunnel. This discovery was reported to Scotland Yard. That night Inspector Malone and Saunders went to this tunnel. Down a small, winding flight of stone stairs they went and along an underground tunnel. It was a dark, dank place with a musty odor. Soon they came to the end of it and saw, with the aid of a flashlight, a small button. They pushed it and a sliding panel opened quickly but silently, admitting them to Greystoke's PANEL-WALLED laboratory! Over in the middle of the room was an easy-chair, back toward them.

In it Lord Greystoke was sitting. "Put up your hands, Greystoke. We have you now!" yelled Malone. Greystoke stood up quickly and reeled around with a wild look in his eyes! He snatched a revolver from the pocket of his robe and screamed madly, "You haven't got me yet." Before he could use the gun, Saunders shot him in the shoulder. Greystoke was rushed to the hospital as he was dying fast.

Greystoke confessed to the murders and when they asked him how he got to sleep so quickly, he said, "Sleeping powders."

"Why did you commit these murders, Greystoke?" they asked him.

"Well", he answered, "I-I-----" at this point Lord Greystoke died, and so the reader will have to figure the rest out for himself.

OUR POETRY CORNER

THE WEST

by James Griffin

I'd like to live on a ranch in the West,
Because of all stories I like those
the best
That tell about cowboys and cattle
and riding
And a life that's all thrills, and seems most exciting.
I'd like to go riding into the sunset
all red
And come back all weary and ready for bed,
To climb a high mountain and view a broad land
And see shining rivers where gold was once panned.
If I got invited to visit a ranch,
I'd pack in a hurry. Oh boy! What a chance!

LIMERICK

There was once a school called Milne
High,
When I went there I felt very shy,
But I did all my work,
And tried not to shirk,
And now I like Milne High.
