Allan A. Kuusisto, acting president of State University of New York at Albany, has been elected a member of Higher Education Colloquium, a national group established five years ago. It is composed of active practitioners who have made significant contributions to the study of higher education.

The colloquium meets twice a year to consider issues confronting colleges and universities and to honor or recognize guest leaders in higher education. Membership is limited to 50 persons. Chairman this year is Paul Dressel of Michigan State University. Dr. Dressel also is president of the American Association of Higher Education.

Paul C. Bulger, professor of higher education at SUNYA, also is a member of the colloquium, an informal and unofficial organization. Dr. Bulger formerly was president of State University College at Buffalo and associate commissioner for higher education, New York State Department of Education.

Dr. Kuusisto will become president of Hobart and William Smith Colleges next month.

A citation of appreciation has been presented to Reno S. Knouse, professor of distributive education at State University of New York at Albany, by the American Vocational Association.

The award was made for "guidance and inspiration given to former students who have entered professional careers in distributive education and who have been elected to the Distributive Education Hall of Fame." The citation recognizes Professor Knouse for "exceptional leadership in the field of marketing and distribution."

The award is the second honor Professor Knouse has received from the American Vocational Association. In 1960 he was the recipient of the President's Citation for Contributions to the field of vocational and practical arts education.

Professor Knouse was honored as the nation's outstanding teacher educator in the field of marketing and distribution when he became the first recipient of the Academy Award presented by the Council for Distributive Teacher Education in 1968. He served as the first president of the organization in 1962.

The professor has been active in research and writing during the past 24 years at the university. The latest of his nearly 60 publications is a textbook, Franchise Merchandising, published by the New York State Education Department.

Jose E. Arraras, rector of the University of Puerto Rico at Mayaguez, will give the commencement address at the 126th annual exercises Sunday morning (June 7) at State University of New York at Albany. Dr. Arraras has headed the Puerto Rican institution for the past four years.

The educator, who holds degrees from Princeton University and from the University of Puerto Rico, is considered to be one of Puerto Rico's most distinguished intellectual public leaders. His publications include learned articles on public administration, law, and social problems of Puerto Rico and the family. In 1963 Dr. Arraras was awarded the prize for the "most outstanding young man of the year" by the Rio Piedros Junior Chamber of Commerce. He is 33.

Beginning at 10 o'clock, the commencement ceremony will take place at the Campus Center Mall. Prior to the program, the academic procession will move from the Campus Center to the mall.

The Signum Laudis Scholar this year is Anne Regina Seymour, of Staten Island. Miss Seymour, an English major, had the highest academic average, 3.96, in September of her senior year. She has prepared for teaching.

Candidates for degrees will be presented by Charles T. O'Reilly, acting vice president for academic affairs; W. Warren Haynes, dean, School of Business; Richard A. Myren, dean, School of Criminal Justice; O. William Perlmutter, dean, College of Arts and Sciences; John J. Farley, dean, School of Library Science; Fred J. Tickner, dean, Graduate School of Public Affairs; William S. Rooney, acting dean, School of Social Welfare; and Randolph S. Gardner, dean, School of Education. Degrees will be conferred by the university's acting president Allan A. Kuusisto.

State University of New York at Albany

Commencement -2-

Bachelor degrees will be awarded to 1,100 candidates. Seven hundred three will receive bachelor of arts degrees and 393, bachelor of science degrees. Master degrees will be awarded to 479 candidates. This year's master's degrees include arts, 168; science, 147; social work, 33; public administration, 25; business administration, 25; and library science, 78.

Doctoral degrees will be conferred on 30 candidates, an increase of nine over the number awarded last year. They include 17 doctor of education degrees and 13 doctor of philosophy degrees.

For the first time the university, in cooperation with WMHT-TV, will broadcast the commencement exercises live. Coverage will begin at 9:30 a.m. on the area educational television, channel 17.

In the event of rain, two commencement ceremonies will be held in the Physical Education Center. Bachelor degrees will be awarded at 10 a.m.. All graduate degrees will be awarded at 1 p.m. in the same building.

MEMORANDUM TO NEWS EDITORS:

Special arrangements are being made to accommodate representatives of the news media planning to cover our 126th annual commencement program here on Sunday, June 7. Parking facilities will be available for you at the Dutch Quadrangle parking lot, at the southwest side of the campus. Additionally, there will be a number of seats reserved for your convenience. The press section will be at the front of section 1 in Tent A.

Enclosed with this memorandum is a list of picture possibilities and a time schedule of places and events. The list of graduates will be mailed at a later date.

This year we will not keep the Office of Community Relations open but rather, for your convenience, we will use the information desk at the Campus Center, telephones 457-6925 and 457-6926. Robert H. Rice, Jr., assistant director for information services, will be on hand to assist during the commencement program.

Your letting me know by Friday what coverage you are planning will be helpful. Enclosed are press badges for reporters and photographers to aid security in keeping the area clear near the speakers' platform.

Eugene E. Rabinowitch, professor of chemistry and biology and interim director of the Center for the Study of Science and Society at State University of New York at Albany, has received an honorary degree from Alma College, Alma, Mich. The honorary doctorate in science was conferred at the Alma College honors convocation held June 3.

Dr. Rabinowitch, who was honored for his activities in the field of science and society, edits the "Bulletin of Atomic Scientists". The theme of his address at the Alma convocation was "Human Evolution - A Deadlock?".

The prominent scientist has been affiliated with the Center for the Study of Science and Society at SUNYA since it was instituted in 1968. He served as its first director and later was named interim director when his son, Victor Rabinowitch, resigned his post as director of the center to return to the National Academy of Science in Washington.

Leonard V. Gordon, director of the program for behavioral research, School of Education at State University of New York at Albany, will be visiting Japan from June 9 through the 21st. His trip is partially sponsored by The Yomiuri, one of the leading Japanese newspapers, which will feature an article by him on the implications of growing bureaucratization on modern society.

While in Japan, Dr. Gordon, also will address the Institute of Industrial Behavior on his research on the bureaucratic personality, discussing both his American results and those obtained in collaboration with researchers in Japan and India.

Other activities will include visits to several Japanese universities and a meeting with the Organizing Committee for the 1972 International Congress of Psychology, to be held in Tokyo, regarding the development of a symposium on the cross-cultural measurement of values. Hosts during Dr. Gordon's trip will include Professor Akio Kikuchi, who spent the 1969-70 academic year in Albany under the sponsorship of the Japanese Minister of Education, Dr. Kazuo Shimada, president of the Japanese Association of Social Psychology and Kozo Ono, president of the Institute of Industrial Behavior.

On the return trip, Dr. Gordon will visit Dr. T. Ryan and staff at the Educational Research and Development Center at the University of Hawaii to discuss new directions in research on the value conflicts of elementary school students. Dr. Gordon is a member of the Office of Education Advisory Committee which was concerned with the original planning of the research project.

Dr. Jarka M. Burian, professor of theatre at State University of New York at Albany, will appear in a half-hour special program on WRGB-TV (Channel 6), Schenectady, at 7 p.m. (EDT) on Saturday, June 13. The 30-minute filmed program, entitled "An American in Occupied Prague," is an informal conversation with Dr. Burian, during which he displays photos and other memorabilia of his year-long stay in Prague, Czechoslovakia in 1968-69, during the Russian occupation.

The program, produced by WRGB-TV News, features many photos never before seen in this country, and the in-depth, detailed commentary of an American who was there, and watched the Czech people closely during a critical time in their history.

Dr. Burian has been on the staff of the department of theatre at SUNYA for 15 years, and has traveled several times to Czechoslovakia. His book about Czech scenic designer, Josef Svoboda, is expected to be published soon.

The program was produced by William F. Snyder, a full-time student at SUNYA. He is employed by WRGB-TV on a part-time basis.

A comprehensive exhibition of the graphic art of Robert Rauschenberg will be shown in the Art Gallery at State University of New York at Albany during the summer school session. The exhibit, which will open on July 1 and run through August 13, will contain 97 works by Mr. Rauscheneberg whose activities in the vanguard of multi-media art have received wide attention in both the art world and the popular press.

Although the Rauschenberg exhibit includes a woodcut from 1948 and a 1949 blueprint, which are the earliest works shown, it is concerned with Mr. Rauschenberg's work of the 1960's. At that time the artist, who was making a series of drawings to illustrate Dante's Inferno, developed a rubbing and drawing technique that transfers images from printed sources directly on to the paper.

Mr. Rauschenberg began to use the same technique to work the lithographic stone. The process combined with silk screen and the direct use of printing plates plus the traditional print making techniques of drawing and wash produced the Rauschenberg graphics of the 60's.

In his catalog essay for the exhibition Lawrence Alloway suggests that the Rauschenberg lithographs present a sort of contemporary inventory of events. Mr. Alloway has this to say of the artist's "iconography": "There are recurrent sport subjects... There are endless technological images... There are architectural and environmental images... The relations of man and machine underlie many of the chosen images."

In 1969 Robert Rauschenberg was invited by NASA to attend the Apollo 11 launching. The resulting lithographs which are included in the exhibit are entitled 'Stoned Moon Series' Mr. Alloway says that one has the impression of the series as "early Space Age commemorative art."

The SUNYA Gallery will be closed from June 14 until the opening of "Robert Rauschenberg - Graphic Art" on July 1. Gallery hours during the summer will be 9-4 Monday through Friday, 7-9 Wednesday evening, and 2-5 on Sunday.

Please Note: Not to be released before Thursday, June 11, date of the Carnegie Corporation
announcement.

State University of New York at Albany has received a $108,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation to support a proposal for development of a new doctor of arts program at SUNYA, prepared under the direction of Edgar W. Flinton, dean of graduate studies. The work will begin formally July 1 with Arthur N. Collins, professor of English, serving as director of the project, under appointment by Allan A. Kuusisto, acting president.

Grants for similar efforts also have been awarded to nine other institutions of higher education to plan new graduate programs aimed at improving the quality of college teaching. They include Ball State University, Brown University, Claremont University Center, Dartmouth College, Idaho State University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, University of Michigan, University of Washington, and Washington State University.

In announcing the awards totaling $935,000, Alan Pifer, president of the educational foundation, said, "The highly specialized research required for the Ph.D. is simply not appropriate training for much of undergraduate teaching. These ten institutions are dedicated to designing a new kind of degree that will attract first-rate students to teaching careers. With one possible exception, the planning envisages that this will be the Doctor of Arts degree."

Financial stringency and the much publicized "surplus" of Ph.D. holders are causing many graduate schools to reassess their doctoral programs, the Carnegie

Corporation indicated. At the same time, there is a growing market for people trained primarily as teachers rather than researchers in the rapidly expanding community colleges and four-year state colleges, which already enroll well over fifty percent of all undergraduates. Mr. Pifer stated, "We need to encourage rather substantial numbers of Ph.D. aspirants to work toward a different kind of degree, one which will provide training appropriate for the jobs that are open."

The project to develop doctoral programs at the Albany university for the preparation of teachers of the arts and sciences in two-year and four-year colleges is planned to take a year, beginning July 1. If approved by the appropriate faculty councils and committees and state education agencies, programs which will enroll students will be introduced in September 1971. Doctor of arts programs will supplement present doctor of philosophy programs which will continue to be directed toward the preparation of research scholars and university professors.

At the Albany university the project will operate under the general responsibility of the vice president for academic affairs. All agencies involved will be represented on a steering committee which will provide overall direction for the project. They include College of Arts and Sciences, Office of the Provost, State University of New York, and Division of Higher Education, State Education Department.

The proposal to plan and develop experimental programs leading to the doctor of arts has been approved, in principle, by the Graduate Academic Council of SUNYA. Additionally, deans and associate deans of the schools most concerned, namely, the College of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School of Public Affairs, have expressed their general interest in the project. Louis T. Benezet, who becomes president of the university next month, also has expressed his personal interest in the development of the program.

For some time at SUNYA there has been a concern for investigating the best ways to prepare teachers for colleges and universities. Many of the university's students who complete graduate studies enter teaching in two-year and four-year institutions. The new grant provides an opportunity for the university to free qualified faculty for the purpose of working full-time in the development of the proposed new program.

Interest in the Doctor of Arts (D. A.) degree is developing rapidly. The first D. A. program was established in 1967 at Carnegie-Mellon University with support from a previous Corporation grant. Both the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities have issued guidelines for universities interested in developing the new degree. At latest count, some 75 institutions are considering the idea. Clark Kerr, chairman of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, recently stated, "The Doctor of Arts should become the standard degree for college teaching in the United States."

For the past year the department of English at SUNYA has been engaged in formulating a proposal for a doctor of arts program. Serving with Dr. Collins will be Robert B. Pettingill, department of economics, and a representative of the division of science and mathematics. The three faculty members will serve as the chief operational team.

Three subsidiary, unpaid committees for the major divisions of humanities, sciences and mathematics, and social and behavioral sciences, also will assist. Departments or separate doctoral programs to be represented include classics, English, French, philosophy, Romance languages, Spanish, astronomy and space science, atmospheric sciences, biological sciences, chemistry, physics, mathematics, history of science, anthropology, economics, history, political economy, political science, psychology, and sociology.

The planning and development project will aim to develop at least five programs to start in 1971-72, two each in the humanities and social sciences, and one in the natural sciences and mathematics. Currently, prospects for the development of such programs in English, economics, French, and Spanish are described as good.

One function of the development project will be the establishment of cooperative arrangements with two-year and four-year colleges for teaching experience and for their participation in the induction and supervision of students in teaching internships. In the Capital District, consisting of 11 counties in New York State, the westernmost county of Massachusetts, and the southwestern counties of Vermont, are 21 institutions of higher education. They include 13 colleges and universities and eight two-year colleges.

The new degree programs will entail a minimum of three years' study beyond the bachelor's degree and will be designed to produce college teachers with broad academic training and a solid understanding of higher education. The programs will include work on a major project or dissertation focused on the organization and teaching of existing knowledge rather than the creation of new knowledge. Supervised teaching experience will also be required in most cases. All ten institutions, recipients of the Carnegie grants, reportedly will plan to hire, promote, and pay graduates of the new programs as they do holders of Ph.D. degrees.

Carnegie Corporation was founded in 1911 by Andrew Carnegie for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the peoples of the United States and of certain British Commonwealth countries.

Adrienne Spagnola of Amsterdam and Gary Restifo of Schenectady have been named winners of the annual Agnes E. Futterer Awards at the State University of New York at Albany. The two seniors were cited for their outstanding contributions to drama at the university during their undergraduate study.

The Futterer Awards, established in honor of Professor Emeritus Agnes Futterer, are presented annually by the Theatre Alumni Association of the university. The recipients are nominated and selected by the department of theatre of which Dr. Paul Bruce Pettit is chairman.

Mr. Restifo's award was based upon a variety of activities, including starring roles in Royal Hunt of the Sun, Orestes, and Your Own Thing during the past year. He has also been active in the theatre department's workshop in Experimental Theatre, in the university talent show and the university revue. Last summer he played in Ohio University's Monomay Summer Theatre. Restifo plans to do graduate work in theatre next year.

The award to Miss Spagnola, a transfer from Ohio State to State University at Albany in 1969, cited her choreography for all the major theatre productions of the past year, her organization of a dance club, and her teaching of a class, "Movement for Actors." She too plans to do graduate study in theatre next year.

The Futterer Award is usually presented at the annual Alumni Day. However, with the cancellation of Alumni Day activities this year, the awards were presented at a meeting of the theatre department practicum on May 13. Professor Arthur Collins of the English department presented the awards in behalf of the Awards Committee of the Theatre Alumni Association.

The Center for Humanistic Education, affiliated with State University of New York at Albany, has occupied new quarters at Selinus House located on Retreat House Road, Glenmont. The property, formerly known as the Jesuit Retreat House, has been leased up to a period of five years with an annual renewable option from Albany House of Retreats, Inc. During its formative stage, the center was housed at Richardson Hall on the university's downtown campus.

Alfred I. Alschuler is director of the center's program which is operated on an income fund reimbursable basis. Funds are received from federal grants and the State Education Department in addition to receipts from conferences and training programs. Income from the operation of Selinus House as a conference center and learning laboratory is estimated to be about $140,000 a year.

Selinus House is situated on a secluded site consisting of 45 acres of wooded hills and formerly part of the Corning Estate. It can accommodate 50 conference or laboratory participants. Several training programs already have been scheduled for the immediate future.

A two-week workshop on growth-oriented groups, under a $15,210 federal grant via the State Education Department, begins June 14 with the approval of the Bureau of Two-Year College Programs. Attending will be 30 two-year college counselors. Possible applications of the objectives of the workshop are the use of group methods in ongoing programs such as orientation or other activities, the design of curricular offerings in areas such as the development of personal values or in effective interpersonal relationships, or the utilization of issue-oriented groups for the resolution of intra-campus conflict.

Under another NDEA Title 5 grant, also approved by the Bureau of Two-Year College Programs, the program in psychological education also is the recipient of $52,418 for consultant services to staff and client schools and equipment support for learning laboratory facilities.

In August an "Early Childhood Education Workshop" will be held for 34 directors of follow-through programs in public schools under a $24,590 technical assistance grant from the U. S. Office of Education for federal Follow-Through Programs. The 12-day workshop is being sponsored by the Bureau of Child Development and Parent Education, State Education Department.

Another grant, under Title 1 of the Higher Education Act of 1965, was continued this year for a program in humanistic education. The amount this year was reduced from $35,000 to $25,000. The grant, from the Board of Regents through the State Education Department, supported 12 diagnostic workshops to assist the Center for Planning and Innovation, State Education Department, in its attempt to provide staff development and consultation support for continuing education.

Earlier federal grants included one for $100,187 in support of a vocational educational project, approved by the Bureau of Two-Year College Programs and the Division of Occupational Education Supervision, State Education Department, and one for a proposal toward the establishment of a program in psychological education.

Selinus House, where training seminar participants will live, has been leased at $1,125 a month for one year, with four one-year renewable options under an agreement with State University of New York on behalf of State University of New York at Albany, and local officials of the Jesuit Order now located at Auriesville.

Extensive renovations, totaling about $70,000 have been completed. They include readying common rooms, kitchen five laboratories, and 25 bedrooms. Additionally, furniture carpets, and drapery have been provided, primarily in the redecoration of the main house, at a cost of approximately $34,825. Structural improvements and other provisions for fire safety also have been completed at a cost of $18,700.

At Selinus House training seminars will be conducted for groups from government and industry, as well as from education. The sessions will last from one to two weeks with all candidates staying at the house during the training period. Suitable fees will be charged for the conduct of the session which will, in effect, make the center's program self-supporting.

Dr. Alschuler was graduated with honors from Amherst College. His graduate degrees from Harvard University are in clinical psychology. Prior to coming to Albany he was principal investigator for the Achievement Motivation Development Project under a grant from the United States Office of Education. He has served as consultant for many projects in his field and is the author of many published works. His latest article, "An End to Alienation" appeared in the May issue of Educational Technology Magazine.

Among those on Dr. Alschuler's staff are Dale G. Lake, associate director; Edward Maurer, coordinator of training; Bailey W. Jackson, 3rd, assistant to the director; and Savannah Scarborough, administrative assistant. Harold C. Skorpen, associate in higher education, Division of Higher Education, State Education Department, works closely with the center in program development.

Dr. Lake holds degrees from Alma College, McCormick Theological Seminary, and Teachers College, Columbia. For two years he was assistant director of Boston University Human Relations Center. Many of his works have been published. Soon to appear in print is "Assessment of Social Functioning" to be published by Teachers College Press.

Now a doctoral candidate at Rutgers University, Mr. Maurer received a Bachelor of Arts from Queens College and a Master of Arts from New York University. He formerly was coordinator of student personnel services, New York State University Urban Center in Brooklyn. Mr. Jackson, who studied at Queens College, is business manager of the center. He earlier served as an accountant and purchasing agent for the City of New York.

Shelton Bank, associate professor of chemistry, State University of New York at Albany, has received a $33,000 grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) in continued support of his research entitled, "Reduction and Addition Reactions of Aromatic Radical Anions."

Dr. Bank, who joined the Albany university faculty in 1966, long has been interested in the chemistry of the highly reactive intermediates which have been studied rarely. They have, according to Dr. Bank, a considerable synthetic potential as the reactions are remarkably selective. Preparation of the anions is simple and their yields with a given substrate are often high.

During research work supported the past two years by an earlier NSF grant, Dr. Bank and two graduate assistants have been exploiting new reactions that they have uncovered. Reports of the work have been published in professional journals.

Professor Bank teaches a sophomore course for chemistry majors and a graduate course in chemistry.

At a regular meeting of the board of directors of the Alumni Association of State University of New York at Albany held June 6 on the university campus, the following resolution was adopted:

"The Alumni Association, aware of the stress of change upon our way of life and particularly in the institutions of higher learning during the past year, wishes to commend the State University of New York at Albany community for completing the academic year with a minimum of difficulty, for maintaining classes, and for keeping alive the ideal of free inquiry through dialogues and discussions. The loyalty and devotion of the men and women who gave of themselves through long hours, both day and night, is valued by all Alumni.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the Alumni Association of SUNYA express its esteem for those who have responsibility for the institution.

"Therefore, be it also resolved, that the Alumni Association of the State University of New York at Albany commend the large majority of students for freely accepting their individual responsibilities in maintaining an open university.

"Therefore, be it also resolved, that the Alumni Association of SUNYA offers its moral support and assistance in order to preserve the concept of the university in a free society."

Lester W. Rubin, president of the association, presided at the meeting held in the administration building conference room.

The Society for Developmental Biology will hold its 25th annual symposium June 17-19 at State University of New York at Albany. The department of biological sciences of which Robert D. Allen is chairman, is the sponsor.

The president of the society and arranger of this year's symposium is Meredith R. Runner, of the department of molecular, cellular and developmental biology, University of Colorado. Associate professor of biological sciences at SUNYA, Joseph P. Mascarrenhas, is in charge of local arrangements for the society. Other members of the society on the university campus are assistant professor Earl Rollins, and John W. Saunders, Jr., professor, both of the department of biological sciences. Professor Saunders is a former president of the society.

This year's symposium is entitled "Changing Syntheses in Development." It will deal principally with the patterns in which large molecules that make up living cells are produced and with the mechanisms that control the synthetic machinery in developing systems. Morning sessions each day will feature formal papers by invited speakers, and afternoons will be devoted to less formal discussion of specific topics.

Registration for the meeting will be held at the State Quadrangle beginning at noon Tuesday, June 16. Registrants from out of town will be housed in and receive their meals at the State Quadrangle dormitory. Morning and afternoon scientific sessions will be held in the Lecture Center. About 400 scientists are expected to attend the meetings. They will come from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The Society for Developmental Biology is more familiarly termed by most biologists "The Growth Society," and its name until 1964 was "The Society for the Study of Development and Growth." The first symposium on development and growth was sponsored by the editors of the periodical, "Growth," and held at North Truro, Mass., in 1939. The society was formed as a result of the success of that symposium and, itself, became the sponsor of subsequent "Growth Symposia."

The principal business of the society is the sponsorship of its annual symposium and the publication of its proceedings. It now has over 800 members. Only candidates who have made some significant contribution to the study of growth and development are considered for membership in the society. Members are from all parts of the United States and some foreign countries, notably England, France, Italy, and Germany. The symposia always have been held in the United States, alternately at some site on the east coast or at a location either in the midwest or on the west coast.

The Ford Foundation has granted $50,000 for a two-year study of the municipal bond market to Robert P. Fairbanks, Donald J. Reeb, and Edward F. Renshaw of State University of New York at Albany. Each of the faculty members has published widely and recently completed studies of various parts of the municipal bond market. Their Ford grant is to extend the research into new areas — areas largely emanating from the bond market difficulties encountered by state and local government.

The municipal bond market has seen a doubling of interest rates since 1962 (3.30 to 6.84 as of January 1970) with a scarcity of bond buyers continuing into the distant future. These higher interest costs (state and local governments spend over $4 billion per year on bond interest) have been accompanied by debt financing problems and the curtailing of central city school construction, mental health buildings, housing and much other public construction in the cities.

Professors Fairbanks, Reeb, and Renshaw hope to aid rationalization of the municipal bond market through promoting changes in the law which makes sale of these bonds less expensive while focusing on such political questions as the amount of savings which should be available for municipal bonds and the efficiency of present capital use by state and local governments.

Professor Robert P. Fairbanks has taught at the University of Northern Illinois and the University of Illinois. He is a member of the department of Public Administration, Graduate School of Public Affairs, at the Albany university. Professor Donald Reeb formerly was with the U.S. Department of Commerce, Regional Economics Division. He is a member of the department of economics at the university. Professor Renshaw also is a member of the department of economics. Recently he has worked with the Bureau of the Budget and the Office of Education in Washington.

The study will be housed at the university. Together with the research papers, there will be a two-year seminar which interested members of the government and financial community will be invited to attend. In addition to the papers developed by the professors there will be guest lecturers from the Investment Banker's Association, Brookings Institution, and various universities.

Five State University of New York at Albany students were among those honored recently by the university's Alumni Association. The awards were announced at the annual Alumni Board luncheon.

Maureen Ratynski, a senior from Albany (472 Western Avenue), received the Mildred Lawrence Schmid Award given to the student best-qualified in Latin during his four years at SUNYA. The cash award of $50 was established by Mrs. Schmid's family in her memory. Mrs. Schmid was an alumna and teacher at Albany.

The $100 Ada Craig Walker Award, presented to the senior women who best typifies the ideals of the institution, was given to Jane E. Kotvis of Sodus (N. Geneva Road). Miss Kotvis achieved a grade point average of 3.26 majoring in business teacher education. She was treasurer of the General Council of the Women's Recreation Association; chairman of the Athletic Advisory Board; a member of the University Athletics Council; active in the planning and conducting of the state conference for the New York State Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women, 1968-69; president of Pi Omega Pi, an undergraduate honors fraternity in business education; and a Dean's List student two semesters.

Recipient of the Albert N. Husted Fellowship for $500 was Allen D. Jones of Albany (2 Grounds Road), a 1967 graduate of SUNYA and currently studying for his Ph.D. in physics. The fellowship was established by alumni gifts in honor of Dr. Husted upon his retirement in 1905 after 50 years on the faculty. A candidate for the award must have earned a bachelor's degree from the university, must have been in residence for at least two years, and must have shown evidence of superior scholarship, character, personality, and interest in teaching. Mr. Jones was the Sigma Laudis Scholar of 1967, holding the highest academic average in the graduating class. He graduate summa cum laude.

Carl F. Herman of Guilderland Center (233 Main Street) was awarded the Bertha E. Brimmer Medal, given to a SUNYA graduate who is an outstanding secondary school teacher in the New York public high school. Mr. Herman, a 1962 graduate who earned an M.A. in 1967, is in his seventh year at Guilderland Central High School. In February, the New York Jaycees selected him as Outstanding Young Educator in the state. His special interest is the history and cultures of the Far East.

The Adna W. Risley Memorial Award of $50 was presented to Robert Iseman of Albany (2 Hopi Street). The award is given to a student who typifies the qualities of scholarship, athletic ability, and leadership which Mr. Risely displayed as a teacher at Albany.

State University of New York at Albany will offer a state-wide task force seminar in distributive education for teacher coordinators in New York State high schools from June 22 to June 26, 1970. Nearly 100 teachers and other distributive education personnel will participate in the course.

The purpose of the seminar is to upgrade the teaching of distributive education in the 400 high schools that offer programs in New York State. The results of the conference will be published and made available to the more than 600 teachers currently teaching distributive education subjects.

The week's program will feature five subject areas in distributive education. They are curriculum approaches and innovations; data processing as it relates to sales, merchandising and marketing; organizing instruction through the project method; directions and working relations involving local, state and national club programs; and program evaluation by the community, the businessman, the school guidance department, and the school administration.

Featured speakers include: Miss Mary V. Marks, program officer, distributive education, U.S. Office of Education; Edward T. Ferguson, Jr., research specialist in distributive education and associate professor of vocational education, Ohio State University; Joseph C. Hecht, professor of distributive education, Montclair State College; Robert C. Rasmussen, program director, Distributive Education Clubs of America; Charles F. Petitjean, professor of business education, SUNYA; Leo A. Soucy, District Superintendent of Schools, Cayuga County; Mrs. Rosalie Niemczyk, director of guidance, Bethpage High School; A. K. Ufheil, manpower planning manager, Neisner Brothers, Inc., Rochester; and Lawrence C. Burwell, Jr., executive director, Urban League of the Albany Area, Inc.

The banquet speaker Thursday evening, June 25, will be Clifford A. Allanson, executive director, New York State Council of Retail Merchants, Inc., Albany. The title of his presentation is "The Changing Demands of Retailing."

The seminar is under the direction of Reno S. Knouse, professor of distributive education, SUNYA. Participating State Education Department staff from the Bureau of Distributive Education include: Douglas T. Adamson, supervisor, and John J. Brophy, William C. Plimley, and Marian W. Potter, associate supervisors. Task force leaders for the seminar include the following teacher coordinators in distributive education: Willard Daggett, Amsterdam, William Gearhardt, Ravena, John Dugan, Salamanca, Fabian Englander, Nyack, Michael Henman, Bronx, Gary Marcus, Liverpool, Robert Pucci, Merrick, and Paul Wereszynski, Boiceville.

The course is part of a continuing program of inservice education for distributive education teachers arranged through a grant from the Bureau of Inservice Education, State Education Department.

J. Robert Miller, professor of marketing, State University of New York at Albany, has co-authored "Advertising Fundamentals," with Philip Ward Burton, chairman, advertising department, School of Journalism, Syracuse University. The book is published by International Textbook Company, Scranton, Pa.

"Advertising Fundamentals" covers the place of advertising in America's business and economic structure, with emphasis on those aspects needed by practitioners and students of advertising. It stresses practical marketing and considers computers and behavioral sciences in detail. The book is divided into six sections: "The Place of Advertising in Our Lives," "Preadvertising Considerations," "Structure of Advertising," "Promotional Aids of Advertising and Marketing," "Forms and Media of Advertising," and "Creating Advertising."

Dr. Miller has been at Albany since 1965. He previously taught at Drake University, Texas A&M University, Juniata College, the University of Illinois, and William Penn College. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa, where he also earned his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees.

Professor Miller is the author of "Marketing Organization" and has published articles in several professional journals. In recent years, he has served as director of marketing and research for Cresswell, Munsell, Schubert, and Zirbel, Inc.; and media-research director for Aubrey, Findlay, Marley and Hodgon, Inc.

Frank G. Carrino, director, Center for Inter-American Studies, State University of New York at Albany, has received a $26,000 U.S. Department of State grant to organize and direct a seminar for Central American high school teachers of social studies. The seminar will take place in Guatemala August 17-29, 1970.

This is the seventh such seminar directed by Dr. Carrino and the second to be sponsored directly by SUNYA. A team of bilingual specialists in social studies and education will serve as teachers. They will come from the universities of Illinois, Pennsylvania State, Temple, Rutgers, and the George Washington University.

Workshop sessions will include concepts of history, economics, geography, civic education, methods of teaching social studies, and group dynamics in the classroom. In attendance will be social studies teachers from each of the Central American countries, Panama, and the Dominican Republic.

Dr. Carrino, a graduate of Baldwin-Wallace College, received his M.A. in Spanish from the University of Wisconsin and his Ph.D. in modern languages from the University of Michigan. He has taught at Albany since 1948.

Richard Hoke, a senior at State University of New York at Albany, is the recipient of a $300 Max Wachstein memorial scholarship. He is one of four college students selected by the New York State Society of Pathologists to receive the award, and was recommended by the Empire State Association of Medical Technologists, Inc., affiliated with the American Society of Medical Technologists.

To be considered for the honor, a student must have a good academic standing and show aptitude for laboratory work. Additionally, he should have a genuine interest in the profession of medical technology and attend an approved school of medical technology. Mr. Hoke will receive his scholarship at the annual award banquet in Buffalo.

Mr. Hoke, who is in the medical technology program at SUNYA, is president-elect of the New York State Student Association of the Empire State Association of Medical Technologists and also of the Albany campus chapter. There are 62 students who are members of the Albany chapter on the SUNYA campus.

Mr. Hoke's home is near Canastota.

More than 100 students are participating this year in the summer language program conducted by the College of Arts and Sciences, State University of New York at Albany, and encompassing affiliation with universities in France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Canada, and Puerto Rico. The program is under the direction of William M. Derrick, assistant dean for international studies.

Leaving tomorrow (Wednesday, June 24) from Kennedy International Airport via a KLM chartered plane to Amsterdam, will be students from SUNYA as well as from other State University units, private institutions in the state, and out-of-state institutions. After a brief stay in Amsterdam, they will part company en route to their respective designations; namely, the University of Caen, near the Normandy coast in France; the University of Coimbra, north of Lisbon, Portugal; the University of Santiago and the University of Coruna in Spain; the Italian University for Foreigners at Perugia in Italy; and the Goethe Institut at Kochel near Grafrath in Bavaria, West Germany. The various groups are freshmen, upperclassmen, transfer students, and graduate students.

Additionally, as part of the summer language program, several students will be studying for six weeks at Laval University in Quebec and another group will be located at the University of Mayaguez located on the west coast of Puerto Rico. The sessions in Europe and Puerto Rico will last eight weeks.

Summer Language Program

The prime purpose of the program is to increase students' competency in a foreign language. Participants are at different levels of language ability, and therefore, are tested and put in classes judged to be commensurate with their ability.

In many instances those participating in the program live in the homes of residents during their stay abroad. They also share their learning experiences with other international students. Each program has its own director at the various universities. In Puerto Rico the program is under the direction of Professor Rafaela Karlsson, a native of Puerto Rico who earned her master of arts degree at SUNYA.

The cost for the European program, including tuition, room, board and local transportation, is $725. The Canadian and Puerto Rican sessions cost $525. The State University of New York Office of International Studies and World Affairs has arranged, in cooperation with the State University of New York Research Foundation, the SUNY-sponsored economical travel.

More than 30 area residents are scheduled to leave by bus for New York from the SUNYA campus tomorrow (Wednesday, June 24) afternoon at 3:00 p.m.

Robert G. Nurnberger, chairman of the science department at State University of New York at Albany, is the recipient of two grants from the National Science Foundation (NSF) totaling $43,220. The larger grant of $33,800 is for support of a workshop to prepare a study guide on problems of air pollution. A $9,420 grant also is concerned with problems of air pollution and supports an in-service workshop for teachers.

The study guide is seen as needed to bring usable information to the public school teachers and their students. Dr. Nurnberger stated, "The time to reach people on the subject of air pollution is not when it is critical but when they are actually in the process of learning about their environment. From this point of view, ideally, we feel that we would like to extend this project into a study guide for the elementary classes."

The course will be conducted by specialists and authorities in the area of air pollution and its social and economic effects.

The workshop is a pilot project for examination of the effectiveness of a study guide in the study of air pollution. The project will extend the first part of next year. Participants will include faculty from the university's Atmospheric Sciences Research Center (ASRC) and from the university's department of social sciences. It is being carried on in cooperation with the Association for the Advancement of Science. Also, the project will serve as a pilot project for other workshops of a similar type to be sponsored at the university and other places.

Nurnberger Grants

The $9,420 NSF grant will support an in-service workshop for teachers. An estimated 40 persons can be accommodated in the special program which will serve as a pilot project for possible nationwide application. Similar programs may also be developed for other areas of environment pollution

The course, which offers three hours of graduate credit per term, will begin Wednesday evening, October 7, in the chemistry building on the uptown campus. Additional information and applications are available from Dr. Nurnberger.

Applicants must be practicing teachers with an intent to incorporate environmental studies into their classwork. The course has been designed to treat the problem of air pollution from the standpoint of the economic, social, and aesthetic effects of pollution as well as the scientific and technical aspects. Opportunity will be given the students to use the university laboratories to gain some familiarity with the exercises provided.

The faculty and guest lecturers will be drawn from the staff of ASRC, the department of science, the social sciences, and governmental agencies.

The annual series of summer lectures conducted by the Atmospheric Sciences Research Center (ASRC), State University of New York at Albany, will begin Tuesday, June 30. The ASRC lectures will be presented by leading scientists who will interpret some of the many facets of modern science and of Whiteface Mountain. Additionally, a report on the latest weather, accompanied by colored projections, will be presented before each lecture. The lectures are free. They begin at 8:30 p.m. and will be held at Marble Mountain Lodge on Memorial Highway, Wilmington, on consecutive Tuesdays.

At the opening lecture Curtis Hemenway, director of the Dudley Observatory and professor of astronomy at the Albany university, will talk on "The Importance of the Space Program."

Other lecturers in the series include Heinz Meng, professor of botany, State University of New York at New Paltz, "Birds of Prey and Falconry," illustrated with movies and live birds, July 7; Raymond Buyce, curator of mineralogy, New York State Museum, Albany, "Gems and Minerals in the Adirondacks," July 14; Volker Mohnen, senior research associate, ASRC, "Air Pollution in the Year 2000-- A Scientist Looks to the Future," July 21.

Also, Charles E. Knudsen, deputy director ESSA Weather Bureau, Eastern Region, New York, "The Modern Approach to Weather Forecasting," July 28; Joseph J. Harley, retired engineer, Bell Telephone Laboratories, "My North Country--Study in Black and White-- Hell Drivers of Mt. Nathan Gottschalk, conductor, violin pedogogue, and educator, has been named chairman of the music department of State University of New York at Albany. Announcement of his appointment, effective August 27, was made this week at the university.

Dr. Gottschalk has been professor of music and executive director at Hartt College of Music of the University of Hartford in West Hartford, Conn. He joined the Hartt faculty in 1956 and served as dean of faculty and assistant to the president of the Julius Hartt Musical Foundation from 1957 to 1966. He was named executive director four years ago.

In a statement for the press, the future SUNYA faculty member said, "I am pleased to accept my new assignment with enthusiasm, confident that the department of music, with its superior and dedicated faculty, will continue to forge ahead and serve the musical and educational needs of the academic as well as the greater Albany community. I am looking forward to providing 'quality' programs, instruction and opportunities for those who seek to prepare themselves as performers, teachers, scholars, and creative artists, so that they may make a positive contribution to society and the indestructible art of music." He added, "I am also looking foward to close cooperation with the existing educational and cultural resources of the greater Albany area, in order to help promote the university, and Albany, as an important cultural center."

At Hartt the musician also was co-director of the 70-member Hartt Symphony Orchestra, and organizer of the current winter and summer chamber music festivals. Additionally, he has directed the Greater Hartford Youth Orchestra which is sponsored by the college's junior and adult division.

Dr. Gottschalk, a graduate of Dartmouth College, holds a master of music degree from Yale and a doctor of musical arts degree from Boston University. He studied also at Juilliard Graduate School. Among his teachers were Richard Burgin, Albert Spaulding, Albert Stoessel and Raphael Bronstein.

The concert career of the new SUNYA music department chairman has encompassed a wide range of performance activity. He was assistant concertmaster of the Pittsburgh Symphony under Fritz Reiner, and has been a member of the Chatauqua Symphony, New Friends of Music Orchestra, New Manhattan String Quartet and the Berkshire String Quartet. Since 1956 he has been conductor and music director of the Pioneer Valley Symphony in Greenfield, Mass. From 1959 to 1962, and in 1968 and 1969, he was music director of the Amherst Opera Co.

Dr. Gottschalk's career as an educator brought him back to his alma mater, Dartmouth, and to Oberlin College, where he was assistant professor of violin and ensemble from 1950-1955. He has been music director of the Cummington Summer School of the Arts, and since 1946 has taught at the Greenwood Summer Music Camp in Massachusetts.

His appearances as conductor with All-State music festival orchestras have taken him throughout the East. In 1969 he directed the Hartt Symphony Orchestra at a Washington, D.C., performance for the eastern division of the Music Educators National Conference.

New dimensions in international education will be the theme of a year long study to be conducted by Dr. O. William Perlmutter, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at SUNY Albany during the 1970-71 academic year. Dean Perlmutter is now on special assignment, including some travel abroad, to develop further the university's international programs in which he has long been interested. He will continue implementing the already approved concept of international professorships as well as reviewing and assessing the current and projected overseas programs of the university.

Under the dean's leadership the present programs in Germany, France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Mexico, Puerto Rico, and Quebec have been established. They now involve several hundred students from a number of SUNY units. Earlier this year he was awarded the insignia of the Chevalier des Palmes Academiques by the French government in recognition of his contribution to the development of further understanding between the two countries.

Among the Dean's previous international experience is service as Director of the Institute of European Studies at St. Xavier's College in Chicago, where he was also academic vice president. At Kent State University he was concurrently dean of the college of fine arts and project director of Peace Corps Training Programs in Ecuador and Bolivia.

Charles C. Fisher, of State College, Pennsylvania, has been appointed director of residences at State University of New York at Albany. The appointment becomes effective July 30.

Mr. Fisher formerly was assistant dean of students at the Pennsylvania State University. His responsibilities included new student programs, orientation programs, and pre-college counseling. Earlier he had served at the same institution as assistant dean of men. In that position, his responsibilities included the total on-campus men's residence program. During the past year he has been completing requirements for his doctor of education degree at the university.

The new appointee is a graduate of State University College at Fredonia where he received his bachelor of science in music education. Two years later he was awarded a master of science in higher education from Syracuse University. He is a member of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

Before joining the administrative faculty at Pennsylvania State University, Mr. Fisher served as associate dean of students at the University of California at Davis. There he had general administrative responsibility for all men's programs. He also has served in related capacities at Syracuse University and at State University College at Fredonia.

Bernard K. Johnpoll, associate professor of political science, State University of New York at Albany, has authored a new book, Pacifist's Progress - Norman Thomas and the Decline of American Socialism. It is scheduled for publication in September by Quadrangle Books, Inc., a subsidiary of the New York Times, in Chicago.

The book is a biographical study which traces the decline of the Socialist party to the rich contradictions in the character of Thomas. Dr. Johnpoll's thesis is that Thomas failed as a politician because of the very qualities that made him successful and popular as a person. The famous socialist is pictured as torn between the stewardship of his party and the dictates of his conscience.

Professor Johnpoll has been at SUNYA since 1966. Previously, he was a newspaperman with papers in Pittsburgh, Erie, Boston, and New York. He also has taught at the University of Saskatchewan, Hartwick College, and University College, Rutgers University. Three years ago, Dr. Johnpoll wrote The Politics of Futility - The General Jewish Workers Bund of Poland, 1917-1943, published by the Cornell University Press, Ithaca.
