

Home Page

Content for the home page can include some of the following. Text for the home page should be short/brief.

- Program theme
- Program description/introduction/purpose/mission
- Who should attend
- Benefits of attending
- Testimonials from previous participants (one or two)
- Letter of invitation from VIP (Association President/President Albrect)

Idea—

26th Annual Convention

American Indian Psychologists and Psychology Graduate Students

Friday - Tuesday, June 21 - 25, 2013

Logan Canyon Horse Camp and Bear Lake Training Center

Friday - Sunday, June 21 - 23, 2013

Taggart Student Center, Utah State University

Monday - Tuesday, June ~~23-24~~ - ~~21-25~~, 2013

The annual convention for American Indian Psychologists and Psychology Graduate Students provides professional, government, and academic communities the opportunity to learn more about opportunities and challenges facing indigenous people, their culture, language religious and/or spiritual beliefs and values today. Dennis Norman, EDD, ABPP will be the keynote speaker for the convention.

We invite all (students, faculty, and professionals) to submit abstracts for our oral or poster presentations at the 26th Annual Convention. Submit Abstract \(link\)

The annual convention advances psychological education and training, scientific practice and organizational change to enhance the overall well-being, dignity, welfare, and future of native indigenous people and psychology.

Testimonial

“The SIP Retreat and Conference is a wonderful time to connect with other Native clinicians, researchers and students from around the country. The retreat is an informal time to get acquainted or reacquainted and restore our spirits. It’s the one meeting each year I don’t ever want to miss” Jacque Gray, SIP President