There are four essential elements in making one's life rich and rewarding to one's self as well as to others. It is important to live our lives to their fullest in every way. This is made possible through learning not only about the material necessities of life, but the aesthetic as well. Two of the most important of these are ability to laugh, with all its connotations, and the ability to lead, or to be willing to give part of one's life for the betterment of others.

It has been the purpose of this yearbook to show how these four essentials are present in all parts of our school life.

The results of this yearbook are due to the hard work of many people. The Bricks and Ivy Staff owes special thanks to Mrs. Brita Walker who devoted much of her time to guiding the Staff in its work, to Dr. Theodore Fossieck for his support, and to Miss Lydia K. Murray for the time she spent proofreading for us. We also thank Gustave Lorey, our photographer, and the American Publishing Company as well as all those who helped in producing this book.

The Editors

We dedicate this yearbook to Dr. Carleton A. Moose, Mr. Cecil Johnson, and Mr. Thomas Winn. Your contributions to our development will always be appreciated. We thank you collectively but remember you individually for your dedication, amiability, and warmth.

The Class of 1962

Life is a fragment, a moment between two eternities, influenced by all that has preceded, and to influence all that follows. The only way to illumine it is by extent of view.

Only a seventh grader knows the real excitement of being in Milne. To students above the seventh, Milne is like a second home, but to us, being in Milne is an adventure.

Part of this excitement stems from the fact that just being in seventh grade means that you are starting Junior High, a new type of school altogether. So many things are new and different: basketball games, dances, new teachers every eight weeks, after school activities, different classrooms, clubs, and even report cards every six weeks. After seventh grade, this is "old stuff," but to us it is so new and different, so exciting!

The eighth grade is our last free year. In the seventh grade we really don't care too much about marks or report cards because we have two years before the honor roll is constantly on our mind. In the ninth grade it hits — that dreaded entity — work. It is a good trick if we can maintain our eighth grade quota of fun and our ninth grade quota of homework.

To our surprise, however, observation will show us that work is not placed on our narrow shoulders as abruptly as is implied. A slight, although almost unnoticed, increase in homework comes in the eighth grade. Our school responsibilities begin with the election of our junior student council officers. We leave the eighth grade better prepared for the burden of high school.

To an outsider, the ninth grade appears as a prosaic group. However, to one who is closely associated with the class, each one of the students reflects a different personality. Some are athletically inclined as testified by our participation on various teams. Others are winning recognition for their scholastic records. Indeed, there are a number of bright young scholars in the class. The student council and various extracurricular activities have been wholeheartedly supported by the ninth grade. A number of ninth graders participate very actively in these groups. This class has certainly contributed much to our student body and to Milne.

As we enter the tenth grade, we leave behind the trivial problems of the Junior High and come face to face with the seemingly insurmountable ones of High School. How are we supposed to do somersaults in gym after lunch? As we take our seats for the first time in the rear of the auditorium and are no longer under the watchful eye of Dr. Fossieck.

Despite all these new situations, our sophomore year is a rewarding one. As sophomores we are now admitted to the canteens after basketball games, we have the opportunity of choosing many of our own subjects, and we receive our class rings. Tenth graders face new problems and receive new rewards as this is a year of transition for Milne students.

The Junior (Unidecimus Gradus) has a number of good traits. It can often be found on varsity athletic teams. It can also be discovered in the library, partly due to the realization that this is the year for scholarly activity, and partly because the mighty Junior Essay is due the next day. It can be found working furiously on the Alumni Ball. It can often be found screaming incoherently on a bench at basketball games. It can be found working against deadlines late in the school year for the newspaper. It can be found waiting to be next year's seniors. It can be found in the anxiousness of this year's sophomores. It can be found.

“When this knowledge, this insight had arisen within me, my heart was set free from intoxication of ignorance. In me, thus emancipated, there arose the certainty of that emancipation. And I came to know . . . Ignorance was beaten down, insight arose, darkness was destroyed, the light came, inasmuch as I was there strenuous, aglow, master of myself.”

Surely there is grandeur in knowing that in the realm of thought, at least, you are without a chain; that you have the right to explore all heights and all depths; that there are no walls nor fences, nor prohibited places, nor sacred corners in all the vast expanse of thought; that your intellect owes no allegiance to any being, human or divine; that you hold all in fee and upon no condition and by no tenure whatever; that in the world of mind you are relieved from all personal dictation, and from the ignorant tyranny of majorities. Surely it is worth something to feel that there are no priests, no popes, no parties, no governments, no kings, no gods, to whom your intellect can be compelled to pay a reluctant homage.

Be interesting. Get the news. Get all the news. Fight for your opinions, but do not believe they contain the whole truth, or the only truth. Above all, know that humanity is advancing; that there is progress in human life and human affairs; and that, as sure as God lives, the future will be greater and better than the present and the past.

*With them the Seed of Wisdom did I sow,
And with my own hand labour'd it to grow;
And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd—
“I came like Water, and like Wind I go.”*

The image features a textured, light brown background. Several vertical and horizontal brushstrokes in a golden-yellow hue are layered across the scene, creating a sense of depth and movement. The word "Laugh" is written in a fluid, cursive script in the same golden-yellow color, positioned centrally and slightly to the right. The overall aesthetic is warm and artistic.

While the emphasis of this year's Bricks and Ivy is on the extra-curricular activities which you enjoyed this year, we of the Milne faculty hope that the book will serve also to remind you of some of the ideas, attitudes, and skills which we have attempted to help you build during this year. We hope that each student will peruse the yearbook often and each time become increasingly aware of the interest in and affection for each of you by each of us.

What's the "Mighty Mite"?

It's the tiny transistor that powers your pocket radio. It was invented in 1948 by the Bell System — of which New York Tel. is a part.

But the transistor does more than just give you a radio to have fun with. It has been an aid to space exploration — helped guide defense missiles — improved communications of every sort, including telephone service.

We at New York Tel. are proud to be a part of a company that contributes to your daily activities and pleasures, as well as to the satellite communications age.

SO WOULD YOU!

What we were is clear to see.

What we are cannot be said for sure.

What we shall become is never ascertained.

VIEW OF THE FUTURE—A college campus for 10,000 State College students in Albany will look like this when finished. The complex, as shown above, includes a central building seven city blocks long, which will house classrooms, library and college theater. At each corner is a dormitory and tower. Each of the four dormitories will house 1,100 students.
