CHANGE TO EUROPEAN SYSTEM IS FORESEEN

American education may be gradually tending toward the elimination of the four-year high school, Dr. Arthur K. Beik, professor of education, told Education I students Monday. "Ultimately perhaps a junior-senior high school with a 'junior college' attached will come," Dr. Beik said. "For higher training the student would then go to the universities. If this comes to pass, we will have approximately the sort of grouping of schools which they have had in Europe since the Renaissance." A similar idea was recently advanced by Dr. A. R. Brubacher, President of State College, in an article which he wrote on "Our Changing Colleges."

TUT COFFIN GREAT ART WORK-PAINTER

Irreverence Desecrates Tombs Of Ancient Rulers, He Says

By Dr. George S. Painter

The tombs of the Egyptians were preferably located in the west, where the sun goes down, symbolical of en-trance into the world of shades. They consist of a deep pit to the sepulchral chamber, with various shrines and chambers for delties, or even for the burial of other members of the family. The tombs of the kings were luxuriously furnished with furniture, foods and equipments destined for their use on the journey from which no traveler returns. Every precaution was taken that their remains might rest where that their remains might rest where laid undisturbed, as the pyramids par-ticularly exemplify. The body was embalmed, treated with natron and asphalt, the c stilest process requiring not less than seventy days to complete. Irrevere it modern bands, however, have allowed not one to rest in peace. urer, was one of the three New York goldles es who e praceting wings estate residents awarded the legion of honor degree in the grand council order the form of a sculptured rolden edge, has hard acc of solid gold and up of the sacred uraous, or cobra, on the When this outer lid was removed, be-ne th a shroud was found a second c din, also in human shape but more to the coffin lid of Tutankhamen's father-in-law, the famous heretic Pharaoh, Akhnaton. The second coffin has the head and hands of solid gold and is made of wood with a sheet of gold en-crusted with polychrome glass with hieroglyphics inlaid with a brilliant falence. Inside this second coffin was fatence. This is held to be the greatest treasure surviving the ages, an innermost coffin of solid gold, six feet three inches long, the gold being worth $250,-000. The winged vulture goddess, Nekhhet, and the serpent goddess, Buto, hold over the hody of the king the "ankh," or symbol of immortality, grasped in their claws.

In the inscription Tutankhamen hailed as the ruler of western Heliopolis, or the kingdom of the dead, and the coffin represents him as Osiris, king of dead. According to their mythology dead king became absorbed into Osiris. The lower part of the coffin shows the sculptured goldesses Isis and Nepthyls, whose protecting wings en-circle the body. Magnificent gold-beater's work embellishes the coffin, while turquoise, lapis lazuli, and carnelian stones are used in the auxiliary work. This coffin is held by authorities to be one of the supreme works of art in the world world.

Inside the coffin, covering the head and shoulders of the monnny was a gold mask wrought with $25,000 worth of bullion which is a life-like portrait of Tutankhamen, an artistic masterof Tutankhamen, an artistic master-piece, inlaid with semi-precious stones and polychrome glass. CO-OP DEVELOPMENT IS EVER CONTINUING

Grows From Book Shelf to True Service Bureau For State Students

Through cooperation as a living priniple, has developed the College book tore, known as the "Co-op," from the tiny beginning of an idea in 1920 in the minds of those who thought some means should be found for the students to more early, more directly, and at less expense or cure text books and College supplies.

Miss Helen T. Fay, a graduate of the Colle e and then a faculty member, made the idea a reality. The Co-op came in 1920 when she started it with nothing but the enthusiastic backing and support of the faculty. It has grown slowly, but steadily until at the present time, it carries snoplies of all kinds.

The book shop came first and then the second hard department. Now the regial shell has reference works in his-tory and a robotory and novels for which a small fee is charged. This is not a money-nebbus scheme, as the retur does not more then meet the cost. Supplies are secured for organizations at almost wholesale prices. Subscriptions to New York newspapers or for all standard magazines may be left at any time. Gift books are sold. The "Co-op" has a caudy and cracker department, and during Lent installed a fruit counter, where students secure the proverbied apple a day, besides first and dates. "If it is need in stock it will be procured" is one of the "Co-op's" maxims. Students are octing the labit of trying the "Co-op" first because it is less expensive, the mananer believes, Articles may be obtained more directly and with less treable and because the venture has proven satisfactory. And the "Co-op" has not yet reached its Fmit, Miss Fay say: It is growing and expanding and is becoming to find its quarters cramped. When the new buildings are completed, it is hoped the hook store will be given adequive space.

It is largely due to the efforts of Miss. fruit counter, where students secure the store will be given adequate space. It is largely due to the efforts of Miss Fay, and her stuff of workers, that the "Co-op" has weathered the storms on its uphill iourney. The shop does not plan to make morey. Any excess of profits one year goes toward one of two things another season: reduction of prices or new equipment.

Special attention to college students

"I'm Well (Hungry); Meals are Good (Rotten)", Can Write Students With Co-op's Newest "Time-Saver

"Dear cousin, (sweetie), (sister), popularity that bids fair to continue. The (friend), (family), I need money (loving), (you), (clothes)."

So run the choices on the "time saver for busy college students," evolved by the Co-op so that undergraduates can send home a full description of their activities, classes, meals, etc., etc., without the trouble of writing a letter.

A stamped postal card with the list of choices on the back is furnished by the Co-op at a nominal rate. With only the trouble of checking the appropriate sentiment, signing the card and addressing it, students, burdened, according to the faculty by too much dancing and too many movies, can let the "folks" know everything essential.

On the market only a short time, the cards have already enjoyed a flare of method of their use is simple. After the beginning "I spend my spare time," he may check any of these occupations he chooses: "at church, in bed, at picture shows, studying, thinking of you, shooting crap." "I am well, hungry, broke, lonesome." The classes may be described in one word, as "enjoyable, rotten, tiresome, long." The meals are designated, according to taste, as "fierce, irregular, nourishing, expensive, poor."

Thanks for the clothes (money), (letter), (food). I am very sorry (glad) I am here, (you are not here) (I'm not
